Filibuster Kills D. C. Sales Tax, Wage Boost

18,000 Employes Lose Pay Hike As Johnston Talks Levy Bill to Death

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A one-man filibuster late last night killed the proposed 2 per cent District sales tax and pay raises for municipal employes.

In the face of a threat by Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) to talk the proposed tax law to death, the Republican leadership withdrew the measure from Senate consideration.

The filibuster began at 9:25 p. m., when Senator Leverett Saltonstall, acting for the GOP leadership, called up the combined sales tax and high-level income tax in regular order of business.

Johnston Begins to Read

Johnston immediately began to read the text of the measure and announced that he planned to talk until he had killed it.

About 11 p. m., Saltonstall withdrew the bill.

Withdrawal of the sales tax measure also killed hopes of 18,000 District employes of all categories that they would get a pay raise.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) stood fast to his position that he would not permit pay legislation to pass without provision for revnue to pay for it.

Cain went to Saltonstall and urged him to withdraw the measure after he became convinced that Johnston meant to go through with his filibuster threat.

"It was the only thing that could have been done under the circumstances," Cain said. "Vital national legislation was being held up by this purely local matter. Nobody is sorrier than I am that the District employes will get no pay raise."

55-Minute Filibuster

Actually, the filibuster lasted 55 minutes. Then, Johnston gave up the floor to permit Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) to speak after getting assurances that he would regain the floor. It was not necessary for him to resume, however.

During the brief filibuster, it was evident that Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) was advising and coaching Johnston.

At the climax, when Saltonstall, at 10:55 p. m., asked Johnston if he would give up the floor if the measure was withdrawn, Pepper advised:

"Give it to him; give it to him."

Then Johnston acceded. He sat down smiling.

At the start of his speech Johnston declared that the tax measure was "all for the big man" and "gave the little fellow nothing."

"I'm not going to yield to anybody or anything," Senator Johnston declared after Senator Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) whispered to him about five minutes later.

The fates of all proposed pay raises for District employes were tightly bound to the fate of the local sales tax bill at 6:30 last night. At that time Senator Taft, who pushed through a bill granting an average pay raise of $360 a year for all Federal classified employes, accepted an amendment excluding from the benefit more than 7000 District classified workers unless

New Directory, First Since 1943, Coming Out Soon

Washington is to have a new City Directory next month—first since 1943—if all goes well.

Expected for spring delivery, the new directory was held up by labor shortage. J. L. Hill, jr., vice president of R. L. Polk & Co. which publishes the volume, now expects it to be completed and out in July.

The directory has been printed since 1905, except during World War II, when it was suspended because of production difficulties. The new directory will have data on 677,603 Washington residents.

A duckpin is only a duckpin now. It used to be Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

And, to the wartime Navy, President Truman was simply "Kilting," Soviet Premier Josef Stalin was "Glyptic," and Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov was "Dunker." "Colleen" didn't mean a pretty girl to a Navy man—it meant Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King.

These were recalled tonight as the Navy made public its wartime code list. The Navy insisted that its key code words for people and places were simply picked out of a dictionary with "no reason." But still it managed to come up with "Hypocrite" for Japan, "Meetinghouse" for Tokyo and "Parasite" for Italy.

New Men Mean Police Dept. Overhauling

Appointment of 157 In July to Result In Reorganization

By Al Lewis
Post Reporter

Reorganization of the Police Department—from top to bottom—will be the end result of congressional authorization for appointment of 157 policemen on July 1.

The authorization, given last week, provides appointment of 3 new assistant superintendents, 4 new captains, 23 lieutenants, 23 sergeants and 23 corporals.

Here is what will happen when the appointments are filled:

1. An assistant superintendent, with power to act on police policy matters, will be on duty each 8-hour trick, 24 hours a day. The assistant superintendents are expected to be picked from ranking inspectors.

2. During most of the heaviest daily crime period—from 6 p. m. to 2 a. m.—the supervisory force will be bolstered. From the 4 to midnight shift, the assistant superintendent will have an additional inspector to assist him. The problem of police coverage during this heavy crime period is complicated by presidential details for dinners and other functions away from the White House, and by large details necessary for night ball games.

3. Each precinct now in operation, as well as the new No. 14 Precinct, will have a lieutenant on duty for each eight-hour tour. Precincts now are manned by only two lieutenants each.

4. Four lieutenants will move in as night inspectors, replacing sergeants in this work of investigating other policemen. At the present time a sergeant may have to investigate work of a lieutenant, who outranks him.

5. The traffic division, which now has only two lieutenants, will get

A Hat in the Ring

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, June 19.—United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg is "available" for the 1948 Republican nomination for President, it was announced late today.

Gov. Kim Sigler of Vandenberg's home State of Michigan made the announcement and said he knew what he was talking about.

The news came as the Republican Party, its hopes of victory higher than they have been these 20 years, was preparing to meet for its twenty-fourth national convention here Monday.

Governor Sigler's hat-in-the-ring pronouncement for Vandenberg definitely punctured an earlier report from Washington that the Senator had virtually removed himself from consideration and had declared himself not unfriendly to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Dewey Still Rated No. 1

The effect of Sigler's statement was to rally the Vandenberg supporters, make the thrilling race for the presidential race more wide open than ever, and perhaps take some of the steam out of what was being called the "Dewey blitz."

Governor Dewey, however, was still rated as the Number 1 contender for the prize, with Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio next, and former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota in third place.

That, at least, was how they were expected to look in the early balloting. How much reserve strength each had for subsequent ballots was anybody's guess.

Senator Vandenberg always has been regarded as the best bet in the event of a deadlock. For a time this week, however, there was widespread doubt as to whether he was worth any kind of bet.

Reads Statement

Governor Sigler, in clearing this up today, met with reporters in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. Reading from a statement written in long hand, he said:

"Senator Vandenberg has demonstrated to the Nation that he is first and last a statesman. People everywhere recognize him as a champion of world peace.

"His service in Congress has been directed toward stability throughout the world.

"He believes in a sound economy and understands full well the domestic problems of our country. His experience and ability in foreign relations have challenged the attention of the world.

"I know from my contacts with the Senator that he would prefer to remain in his present position, but I also know that his unselfish devotion to his country makes him available as a candidate for the Presidency should that be the demand of the people.

"I feel that this convention will demonstrate that demand."

When Governor Sigler had finished reading the statement, a reporter asked if he knew how Senator Vandenberg felt about the matter.

"I know what I'm talking about," Sigler said.

He was then asked if he wanted to emulate the Dewey and Taft managers and make a prediction about Vandenberg's possible first-ballot strength.

Governor Sigler said that he didn't expect the Michigan law-

259-136 House Vote Sends 21-Month Service Measure To White House

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Congress last night completed passage of the draft bill and sent it to the White House.

Final action came at a late hour after one of the worst rough and tumble battles in legislative history. The three months' fight was climaxed by an all-night left-wing filibuster in the Senate Friday and a final burst of impassioned oratory in the House.

As finally written, the bill is a "strong" one which should meet defense chiefs' desires in most respects. Torn to shreds during three days of House debate, it was largely restored in conference.

The conference report was approved by voice vote in the Senate yesterday morning after the filibuster was broken.

The House vote last night was 259 to 136.

To Serve 21 Months

The controversial measure permits the drafting of 19 through 25-year-old men to begin in late September. They would serve 21 months—most, if not all, of them in the Army.

With few exceptions veterans are exempt or can escape call by joining the reserve before induction. Men with dependents and those found to be "necessary" by their draft boards can be deferred.

Also anyone who enlists in the National Guard or an active, drilling unit of the Army, Navy or Air Force reserve before the President signs the ball will not be drafted.

Opposition to the program came from many sources—religious groups, organized labor and Middle West isolationists. But it was led largely by a strange combination of extreme left and right-wing Congressmen, cooperating for almost the first time.

Led by Wallace Men

The last-ditch effort to beat the draft by filibustar was led by Henry Wallace men in Congress. Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), third party vice presidential candidate, carried the ball in the Senate. He was aided by Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.), no Wallaceite but a perennial thorn in the side of Senate leaders.

A different kind of draft filibuster was led in the House by Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Laborite from New York City, whom many consider the real "brains" of the Wallace group. He had such men of the right as Michigan's Clare Hoffman and Mississippi's John Rankin fighting on his side.

Marcantonio made a final attempt to block the draft conference report in the House last night. He raised a point of order against its consideration on the ground that the Senate-House conferees never held a "valid" meeting.

Formal appointment of the Senate members of the conference committee was delayed until 9:30 yesterday morning by Taylor's fili-

Foreign Aid Fight Ends in Taber Defeat

Total Cut 2 Per Cent; Truman, Hoffman To Decide on Period

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

The long congressional struggle over foreign aid funds ended early today in almost total defeat for Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.) and his budget-cutting House colleagues.

A Senate-House conference finally agreed, after three days of deadlock, to let European recovery funds be spent in 12 months if President Truman and Administrator Paul Hoffman thought it necessary. Taber and his group had insisted on spreading the funds over a 15-month period.

"Well, they've got too much money for them to do a good job," was Taber's wry comment as he left the conference room. Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Senate group said, however, that "we're very satisfied," and the grin on his face showed that he felt he had won a smashing victory.

Both House and Senate approved the conference report early today.

Minor Changes Made

A few minor changes were made in the Senate version of the appropriation bill to placate the House side and to get agreement before Congress adjourned. The total funds for all foreign relief and recovery programs were cut about 2 per cent below the Senate's figure, and minor though not crippling conditions were written into the legislation.

The bill as compromised called for a total of $6,030,710,228, which was 95 million less than the Sen-

Labor Shows Strength

Paris, June 19 (U.P.).—The number of strikers in western Europe soared into the millions today as Communist-led workers throughout France walked off their jobs for an hour in a demonstration of the nation's labor strength.

Labor agitation in key Marshall Plan countries was mounting rapidly.

The Belgian Federation of Labor announced it will hold an extraordinary meeting at Brussels Sunday which may result in a nationwide strike.

Food Endangered

British dock workers voted to continue the strike which has left 121 loaded ships idling in London harbors. Tons of eggs, tomatoes and other perishables were in danger of rotting.

The mass French demonstration was not as effective as the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor had hoped. Many of the five million workers who had been asked to strike stayed on the job.

Observers said the strike was called principally so the French labor movement could flex its muscle at Premier Robert Schuman's government. Demands for sharply increased wages and other benefits were scheduled to be made next week, and Schuman's cabinet held a special session last night to map a counteroffensive.

Schuman Sees Leaders

Schuman met today with leaders of the CGT and of the Christian Workers. The latter group did not join in today's stoppage.

Only one disturbance was reported during the hour's walkout. It occurred in front of the Paris City Hall where garbage trucks and hearses were parked, blocking traffic. Police barricaded all streets leading to City Hall Square. Garbage workers retaliated by throwing refuse at the police. Many workers were arrested.

It was learned reliably that Schuman has decided to keep the government intact and let it stand or fall on its present policy.

Pay Increases For 825,000 Pass Senate

Bill Goes to House, Both Bodies Approve Postal Wage Boost

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Senate-House conferees early today reached agreement to give permanent pay raises of $330 to Classified employes and $450 to postal workers.

The Classified raise would apply to 8000 District Government workers covered by that act. Also, legislative and judicial employes would get the $330 increase.

The report, which must be approved by House and Senate, would make the pay raise effective the first pay period in July. It also provides for an increase in postal rates that would bring in an estimated 125 million dollars a year.

The provision to revise the Classification Act was stricken out. The report would have the effect of raising the ceiling on Classification Act salaries from $10,000 to $10,300. This means that agency heads would be paid less than some of their subordinates.

The Senate earlier last night amended the House postal bill to give the 825,000 classified employes an average increase of $360 a year.

The bill was returned to the House, which voted Friday to give pay raises of $450 each to the 475,000 postal employes. The Senate also approved the postal raise.

Early today the measure was in the hands of conferees trying to agree on the Senate amendment.

The Senate bill made these changes in the House bill:

1. That the salaries of classified workers be raised a maximum of $270 each;

2. That the Classification Act, which fixes salaries, be amended and simplified. This would add an average of $90 to the wages of the employes who are covered by that act. Some employes would get no additional increase over the flat $270. Others would get as much as $700. The average increase, the flat raise plus the classification revision, would be $360;

3. That the $10,000 ceiling on Classification Act salaries be lifted to $13,500;

4. That the salaries of legislative and judicial employes be raised about $360 each, and,

5. That any postal rate increase be made effective on January 1

Action Is Made Subject to Recall By GOP; Faced Truman Threat

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Putting on a desperate last-minute burst of speed, the eightieth Congress galloped toward an indefinite adjournment early today.

The Congress, which may be called back into session quickly, either by the Big Four Republican leaders or by President Truman, left uncompleted action on a long-range housing program and a long-range farm program. The Congress will have completed action on draft, funds for the European Recovery Program and on all its major appropriation bills.

The decision to adjourn was reached at an 11 p. m. conference of Republican Senate and House leaders.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said that under the terms of the adjournment resolution the leaders can call Congress back between the two political conventions, after the conventions or after the election. He said there was more likelihood of Congress being called back this year than there was when Congress quit last year.

Nominee to Exert Influence

Obviously, once a Republican nominee is chosen at Philadelphia, he can be expected to exert considerable influence on whether the Congress acts on full housing and farm programs.

Taft said the Congress would try to rush through a Senate-passed bill to extend GI secondary mortgages. House Banking Committee Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), however, has amendments to which there may be objection in the Senate.

There was considerable doubt early today whether the bill could get through the Senate by unanimous consent. Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) earlier threatened to object to any measure if the House does not vote on the Senate-passed Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill.

Meanwhile, House and Senate conferees were trying to agree on incorporating some farm support legislation in the bill to extend the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which expires June 30 unless extended.

Typical Scene in House

News of the scheduled adjournment brought about a typical adjournment night scene in the House.

A recall of Congress must be signed by Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg, Majority Senate Whip Kenneth S. Wherry, House Speaker Joseph W. Martin jr., and House Majority Leader Charles Halleck. The resolution will spell out an adjournment date of December 31 but the date is purely informal.

Warned of Call by Truman

On the floor of the Senate last night Congress was warned that President Truman might well call them back to enact a housing program.

However, possibility of a major civil rights battle if Congress returns may give both President Truman and Republican leaders pause.

Although Republicans—and for that matter Democrats—want to include civil rights measures in their platforms, there is strong sentiment on both sides against enacting many of them.

The housing issue which threw the Senate into a stormy row last night broke when the House-passed bill sponsored by Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), House Bank-

Cream Price Increased Cent By Two District Concerns

Greater Washington consumers are slated to pay more for some dairy products, it was made evident yesterday, as the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairies and Model Farms Dairies, Inc., increased cream and cottage cheese prices and other dairies signified they would follow suit.

Cream prices were raised by Chestnut Farms 1 cent a half pint, from 20½ cents to 21½. Cottage cheese went up to 25 cents a package, a rise of 3 cents. Similar increases were announced by Model to take effect today.

In announcing the increase, Herman A. Schulteis, vice president of the dairy, cited a recent 8 1-3 cents an hour wage increase granted employes.

"In our keen desire to supply the public with milk at the lowest possible price we are making no change in the price of milk," Schulteis pointed out.

A. Lee Thompson, president of the Thompson Dairy, said his concern will have to do something soon to meet increased costs. He declared "there doesn't seem to be any other solution than to raise prices of milk by-products such as cheese and cream."

At Embassy Dairies, James J. Ward, president, said that a similar move is being considered.

Michael H. Burchell, president of Alexandria Dairy Products Co., said some products "would probably be increased in the near future although we hadn't given it much consideration."

Richfield Dairies reported that increases are being considered but that no decision has yet been made.

State Department's Paintings

American U. Bids for Art Condemned by Congressmen

New York, June 19.—American University of Washington, D. C., was among more than 150 bidders here today for 117 modern American paintings bought by the State Department to exhibit overseas in 1946 and later recalled when Congressmen called them "un-American."

The paintings include the group President Truman once referred to as "ham-and-egg art."

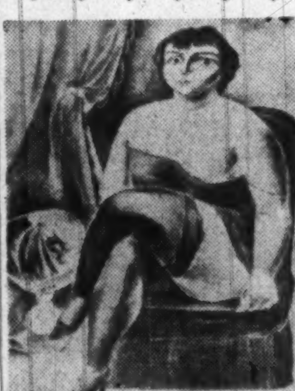
Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, said the paintings would be added to those at the university's Watkins Galleries in Washington if the bid is accepted.

The bids, which were opened here today, will be screened by the War Assets Administration's board of awards, which will make recommendations to the agency's Washington headquarters.

The College of Arts and Sciences of American University bid for the entire collection on a "fair value" basis, under which the WAA would set the sale price if it accepted the bid. Not less than $5000 is involved, it was understood.

The art sale is believed to be the first arranged by the WAA, which is ordinarily more preoccupied with the disposal of such surplus Government items as factories, clothing and steam shovels.

Opposition to the State Department's traveling art show was based on assertions that some of the artists have pro-Communist reputations and that some pictures are of abstract styles reportedly popular with Communists outside the Soviet Union. The collection cost the Government $55,800 and was intended to promote good will for the United States and demonstrate some of its cultural achievements.



"CIRCUS LADY RESTING"

The paintings have been exhibited at the Whitney Museum of American Art, 10 W. 8th st., since May 21 and were seen by an estimated 10,000 visitors.

Nineteen museums, 27 educational institutions and 117 individuals submitted bids. Among the most sought-after paintings were "Trees and El," by Stuart Davis; "Pine at 5 O'clock," by Walt Kuhn; "Sea and Boat," by John Martin; "Yellow Table," by Abraham Rattner, all oils, and "House, Provincetown," by Edward Hopper, and "Piqua, Ohio," by Dong Kingman, watercolors.

Woman Sorry She Sent It

Filibuster Punctured by Wire About 'One Honest Senator'

New York, June 19 (AP).—A 30-year-old Manhattan housewife expressed "deepest regret" today when told that it was her telegram that broke the filibuster of Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho).

"I'm very, very sorry," Mrs. Frances Swadesh exclaimed. "I certainly didn't intend for it to have that effect."

Mrs. Swadesh, the wife of a teacher and World War II veteran, said she had been following Taylor's battle against the draft bill closely.

"It was a courageous action on his part and he had my strongest support in what he was trying to do."

She described her motive in sending the telegram as "perfectly simple."

"I want peace. And peace is possible if we work for it."

The telegram, which she said she composed and sent yesterday said that American citizens "can congratulate themselves on having one honest Senator . . ."

Taylor, reading it, got only a little past the first sentence when he was stopped by Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) who charged that the message cast aspersions on the Senate as a whole. Taylor was ruled out of order and lost the floor—and the filibuster.

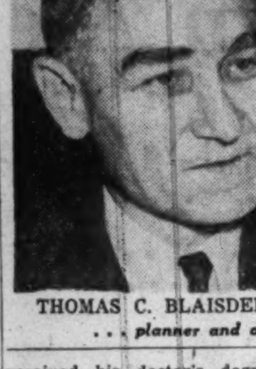
PEOPLE In The NEWS

When Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr.—who was nominated for Assistant Secretary of Commerce by President Truman yesterday—came to Washington he expected to stay a matter of weeks.

That was in 1933 when he was named assistant director of the Consumers' Council of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

He stayed on, however, going from Government job to Government job, generally improving himself, turning into a career civil servant.

Settled down now in a pleasant brick Georgetown house at 1231 31st st. nw., the academic life has faded farther and farther into the past for sandy-haired Tom Blaisdell, currently director of the Office of International Trade in the Commerce Department.



THOMAS C. BLAISDELL
. . . planner and advisor

Traces of the academic pattern still linger, however—in his casual dress inclined to tweediness, comfortable good sense and subtle sense of humor.

Possibly his enjoyment of folk dancing is a reflection of it also.

Blaisdell, 52, and the father of a son, William Blaisdell 3d, now finishing college, was born in Pittsburgh. His father, now living in Florida, is a retired college professor.

Tom Blaisdell, sr., won eminence in English and education, but the son made economics his field.

After studying at Alma College, Mich., and the Konigstadtische Oberrealschule in Berlin, he was graduated from Pennsylvania State College with an A. B. degree in 1916. He went on to graduate from the New York School of Social Work in 1922 and Columbia University, from which he received his doctor's degree in 1932.

During the World War I period he was Asia, teaching in Allahabad, India, and at Yenching University, Peking. From Peking he came to Columbia University, teaching economics there from 1925 to 1933.

In the Government Blaisdell has at various times worked for NRA, Resettlement Administration, Bureau of Research and Statistics, Social Security Board, Securities and Exchange Commission, National Resources Planning Board, War Production Board and the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion. In March, 1945, he was appointed chief of the Mission of Economic Affairs, with the rank of Minister, to London.

Senate Votes U. S. Pay Raise

instead of July 1 as proposed in the House bill.

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) offered an amendment that was accepted by the Senate, which knocked out the provision in the Senate bill for salary increases for Cabinet members and other Federal officials. The cost of this provision would have been only one million dollars a year.

As the bill now stands, many officials will be paid less than some of their subordinates.

The Senate bill does not provide for postal rate increases. The House provision to raise rates would raise about 125 million dollars a year. House GOP leaders are reported to be insisting that this provision be included in the final bill.

The Senate voted down an amendment by Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) to repeal oleo taxes. Taft argued this amendment had no connection with the pay bill.

It accepted an amendment offered by Senator Cain (R., Wash.) to exempt the 8000 District classified employes from the pay bill unless adequate revenue is raised by the District to offset the cost.

Revision of the Classification Act is one of the keys to the fast-moving Federal pay-raise picture. Oddly enough, very few people seem to understand what's being proposed although it's reasonably simple and entirely justified.

The pay bill passed by the Senate proposes overhauling of the law which was passed with the idea of paying Government people equal salaries for equal work.

Under the present law are 5 job categories and 45 different grades. The Senate bill would merge these into a single job classification with 11 grades, a much simpler system. The merger would be made as follows:

NEW GRADE 1 would be composed of the present CPC 1; NEW GRADE 2 would be made up of the present CAF 1; and SP 1 and 2; CPC 2 and 3 and CMS 1; NEW GRADE 3 would be comprised of SP 3 aand 4; CAF 2 and 3; CPC 4 and 5, and CMS 2.

NEW GRADE 4: P-1; SP 5 and 6; CAF 4 and 5; CPC 6 and 7, and CMS 3. NEW GRADE 5: P-2; SP 7 and 8; CAF 6 and 7; CPC 8 and 9, and CMS 4. NEW GRADE 6: P-3; CAF 8 and 9, aand CPC 10.

NEW GRADE 7: P-4 and CAF 10 and 11. NEW GRADE 8: P-5 and CAF 12. NEW GRADE 9: P-6 and CAF 13. NEW GRADE 10: P-7 and CAF 14. NEW GRADE 11: P-8 and CAF 15.

To determine how you'd be treated under the Senate bill, first get your new grade by reading the above, then find your present salary under the new grade listed below, and then read the corresponding figure in the right-hand column for your new basic salary under the Classification Act.

Congress Rolls Toward Finish

ing and Currency chairman, came up for consideration.

Senator Ellender (D., La.), coauthor of te Senate-passed Taft-Ellender-Wagner measure, promptly objected. Under the Senate Rules, one objection stopped action yesterday and the bill would have to go over.

Sounds Warning

Senator Ed Johnson (D., Colo.) broke in with a warning that a special session looms if Congress itself fails to act.

"I want you to know the President in a few days will call Congress into a special session to take up housing," declared Johnson.

He added that the Democratic Party would make housing an issue and go before the country to let the voters decide who was responsible for failure to act. It wouldn't be enough to evade the issue with a weak bill, he said.

Wherry asked Ellender to defer his objections so that he could explain that the Senate could substitute its bill and send the TEW measure to conference with the House.

Promptly Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) took the floor.

"This Wolcott bill," shouted Tobey, "is a fake.

"It's a fraud. It's a hollow shell."

Continuing, he told the Senate the House-passed measure is "a flim-flam against the veterans."

"The machinations of a group of men in the real estate lobby account got this bill through," said Tobey.

He added that "these men" put it over in the House by "depriving the people's representatives there of any opportunity to vote "on public housing and slum clearance.

"It shall not pass. It shall not pass," shouted Tobey.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, jr. (R., Wis.) pled with Ellender to withdraw his objection.

The whole fight, said McCarthy, is only a row "over who's name shall go on a bill."

Minus Public Housing

Senator Burnett Maybank (D., S. C.) said that not only was the House bill minus public housing and slum clearance, but it also deprived 85 per cent of the veterans of the Nation of any secondary mortgage protection for their loans.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), co-author and sponsor of the bill, asked the Senate to let the measure go to conference so that at least something could be worked out to protect the veterans' secondary mortgages.

There was no sense in sending the bill to conference, Tobey stormed, because the House Banking and Currency chairman had twice announced that he would not take the bill to conference.

Renews Pleas

McCarthy renewed his pleas to Tobey for a conference. He said he had been conferring with Wolcott, a man he admired.

Tobey pressed him to say whether or not Wolcott had agreed to a conference on the TEW bill.

McCarthy listed all the things Wolcott would confer about. Finally he admitted Wolcott said he would never take public housing to conference.

"It only takes one objection over there to kill it anyway," Ellender interjected. He said "Little Caesar" (Wolcott) would kill it anyway.

Wherry said if the House refused a conference on the TEW bill the responsibility would then be clear on the House of Representatives for killing the bill. The Congress should try to enact housing legislation, Wherry warned.

"I'll tell you how to do it, then," snapped Ellender. "Let your own Rules Committee of the House meet tonight, take the TEW bill from the table where they placed it, give the people's representatives in the House a chance to vote, and I tell you we'll have a housing bill inside two hours here."

Wherry shrugged. He didn't control the House Rules Committee, he said.

McCarthy said that Ellender single-handed had vetoed all housing for this session.

Tobey Lashes Out

"The Wolcott bill is only a tax-depreciation steal," lashed out Tobey. "Senator Taft, a member of this body, has developed an honest-to-God housing bill of which we can be proud. Let us stand by that bill we passed.

"This other bill is a monstrosity. It's a miscarriage of justice. Shame on those who perpetrated it.

"Give us the TEW bill or no bill at all."

When Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), who was in the chair, sustained Ellender's objection, the Wolcott bill was finished.

Observers believed that President Truman had been handed a major campaign issue right on the eve of the GOP convention.

Johnson's declaration about a presidential summons to Washington was clear warning the Democrats will make the most of it, too.

Moves With USES

Goodwin Heads FSA Job Bureau

Robert C. Goodwin will head the reorganized Bureau of Employment Security in the Federal Security Agency.

Goodwin

Goodwin, director of the United States Employment Service since 1945, will administer the bureau's new two-part function of job-placement and job-insurance. The announcement was made yesterday by Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing.

Congress, by an appropriation act effective July 1, transferred the USES from the Labor Department to the Federal Security Agency which for some time has administering the job-insurance program of the Social Security Act.

Thus Goodwin will continue to administer the Government's job-finding service and take on the additional duty of administering its job insurance program.

A native of Idaho, Goodwin began Federal service with the Social Security Administration 11 years ago.

12 Named To ECA Board

Leaders of the major labor and farm organizations were among those nominated by President Truman yesterday as members of ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman's Public Advisory Board.

The board, set up by the act of Congress which created ECA, is supposed to "advise and consult" with Hoffman on "general or basic policy matters." The act provides that it must have 12 members "selected from among citizens of the United States of broad and varied experience in matters affecting the public interest."

Names Listed

These are the 12 whose names were sent to the Senate for confirmation:

James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO; George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the AFL; Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Albert S. Goss, head of the National Grange; James G. Paton, president of the Farmers' Union; former Governor Herbert H. Lehman, former director general of UNRRA; Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer; Robert H. Hinckley, former chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Sarah Blanding, president of Vassar College; George H. Mead, paper manufacturer of Chillicothe, Ohio; Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association; Arlon E. Lyon, former chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen and now executive secretary of the Railway Labor Executives Association.

The emphasis on labor and farm groups came as a surprise, and was partly the result of strong demands during the original ECA hearings that labor be represented.

Senate Foreign Aid Program Is Enacted

ate version. Of this amount four billion—the full Senate figure—was earmarked for the European Recovery Program.

To satisfy the House, the bill provided that the four billion would be available until June 30, 1949—the fifteenth-month period—"provided that the entire amount may be apportioned for obligation or may be obligated and expended, if the President, after recommendation by the Administrator, deems such action necessary to carry out the purposes of said act, during the period ending April 2, 1949"—namely, during the 12-month period.

Mere Face-Saving

Administrator Hoffman has testified repeatedly that he needed every penny of the four billion over 12 months. Since he will be certain to "recommend" such spending to the President, this provision amounted to nothing more than face-saving for the House.

Originally the Administration asked, and Congress authorized, $5,300,000,000 for European recovery for 12 months. Congress promptly made $1,055,000,000 of this available without a new annual appropriation. Adding the four billion appropriated yesterday, the ECA thus has a total of $5,055,000,000 for its first year, or approximately 96 per cent of what it asked.

Other foreign aid appropriations emerged from the conference as follows:

Four hundred million dollars for aid to China, of which 125 million is specified for military assistance;

One billion three hundred million dollars for Government and relief in occupied areas, including an unspecified amount for economic recovery in Japan, Korea and the Ryukyu Islands;

Two-hundred and twenty-five million dollars for military assistance to Greece and Turkey;

Thirty-five million dollars for the International Emergency Children's Fund of the United Nations;

Seventy million seven hundred and ten thousand, two hundred and twenty-eight dollars as the American contribution to the International Refugee Organization.

The first three items were smaller than the Senate's original figures; the fourth, for the Children's Fund, was a compromise between the Senate figure of 20 million and the House figure of 60 million.

A few restrictions which were written into the House bill and later stricken out by the Senate were restored in milder form.

IRO Funds Flareup

The most bitterly controversial of them, Bridges told reporters later, was a House proposal that no funds be paid to the International Refugee Organization until there had been an agreement bringing the diet in displaced persons' camps down to the level of the populations around them.

The effect of this in Germany would have brought displaced persons down to the meager German rations if, indeed, an agreement to this effect could ever have been reached internationally.

As Bridges described it, a "knock-down argument" raged over this point in the conference. Taber and his group said it was bad for German morale to see the displaced persons getting better food; the Senate group said it was immoral to bring persecuted people to the level of their persecutors.

Equalization of Diets

In the end it was decided that 60 per cent of the contribution to the Refugee Organization could be paid without conditions. Payment of the rest, however, would depend on an international agreement to equalize the diet of displaced persons in Europe and those living around them.

Bridges explained that the 60% would enable the Refugee Organization to operate until after the start of the new year.

"Then they'll have to see whether they can make an agreement acceptable to other nations," Bridges told reporters. "If not, they'll have to come back and get the new Congress to fix it."

Another House condition, stricken out by the Senate and partially restored last night, would have set aside 10% of European local currency funds accumulated under the recovery program and used them for giving strategic materials to the United States. The effect of this, if unchanged, would have reduced Europe's dollar-earning power by about 400 million dollars in the next 12 months.

Compromise Reached

The compromise was that 5 per cent of these local currency funds would be set aside for strategic materials "where available." The qualification made all the difference, and took some of the mandatory quality out of the earlier provision.

Another House condition forbade Hoffman to buy in other countries at higher than prevailing market prices in the United States. The compromise version, approved last night, applies this condition only to bulk commodities like grain, and makes allowances for differences in transportation costs, quality and terms of payment.

The compromise bill retained limitations on the amounts of farm machinery and fertilizer that could be exported from the United States. The House group, however, gave up its former condition, strenuously opposed by the State Department, that aid to China be administered in the same direct manner as military aid to Greece and Turkey.

All in all, the bill was satisfactory from the viewpoint of ECA officials and the Senators who backed them in the long drawn-out fight for funds. Administrator Hoffman himself visited Bridges just before tonight's decisive meeting, together with Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett.

Day of Deadlock

The final agreement was not reached until after a day of continued deadlock between Senate and House leaders. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) failed to make headway with House Speaker Joseph W. Martin in a morning meeting.

Taber still talked darkly during the afternoon of insisting on a half-billion-dollar cut in European recovery funds. He declared on the House floor that almost two billion dollars could be saved from the program.

He also denounced an assortment of ECA officials, from Special Ambassador W. Averell Harriman down, for incompetence and extravagance in previous Government posts. On the ground that ECA's personnel director, Virgil L. Couch, formerly worked for the Farm Security Administration under C. B. Baldwin, and because Baldwin is manager of the Henry Wallace presidential campaign, Taber asked:

"Now the question revolves itself as to who is running ECA. Is Paul Hoffman doing so or is 'Beany' Baldwin running it by remote control?"

DP Bill Is Passed; Assailed in Senate

Price Talks Fail

Aiken Sees Farm Aid Bill Wrecked

Senate-House conferees on new farm price-support legislation broke up in complete disagreement yesterday and Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) said "this means the end of a farm program."

Last night the conferees started a new effort to reach agreement, but shortly after midnight broke off their talk still in disagreement.

Aiken said the failure of Senate and House representatives to come to any agreement will mean that on January 1, 1949, the price support levels will revert to 1938 figures.

The 1938 figures provide props only for six basic communities at from 52 to 75 per cent of parity, as compared with the present level of 90 per cent of parity for most important crops.

Parity is a formula for prices designed to give farmers purchasing power equal to that they enjoyed in a previous favorable period. Parity usually is figured on a 1909-1914 average.

The House had voted an 18-month stopgap extension of the present program.

The Senate, on the other hand, had voted a permanent new program calling for varying price supports at slightly lower levels than those now in effect.

Aiken said he holds no hope another meeting of conferees will be set. He told reporters after a two-hour closed-door conference:

"We are in total disagreement. The Senate has considered the House bill. The House conferees have refused to permit the House to consider the Senate bill. This means the end of a farm program."

Aiken is the principal author of the Senate bill and heads the Senate conferees.

Aiken said the House conferees, headed by Representative Hope (R., Kans.), refused even to sign a statement saying the two groups are in disagreement.

House Against NewTVA Plant

By The Associated Press

The controversial TVA steam steam electric plant was eliminated last night from the Government corporation's money bill in its passage by Congress.

The Senate agreed to strike out a four-million dollar fund for the plant, after the House had voted 201 to 186 late yesterday against its inclusion in the bill.

The bill, as finally passed, carries about 38 million dollars for TVA, FHA, HOLC and other Government corporations.

Final action of the Senate last night broke a four-day deadlock over the bill by a joint conference committee.

Earlier yesterday, in a maneuver similar to that taken by the House, the Senate voted 47 to 37 to instruct its conferees on the bill to continue pressing for the TVA plant appropriation.

The proposed plant, to be at New Johnsville, Tenn., would be used to firm up power in the TVA transmission system. Its total estimated cost would be 54 million dollars.

The House agreed to other parts of the conference committee's report on the Government corporations bill.

Fred Buschmeyer Named Delegate

Oberlin, Ohio, June 19 (AP).—The general council of Congregational Christian Churches today elected six new executive committee members for six-year terms and named delegates to the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam, Holland, in August.

Delegates named to the Amsterdam meeting included Fred S. Buschmeyer of Washington, D. C.

Despite charges that it discriminated against Catholics and Jews, the Senate yesterday approved a compromise bill admitting 205,000 carefully selected displaced persons from Europe in the next two years.

The bill was approved by a voice vote and sent to the White House after a two-hour debate in which it was denounced by Senators of both parties.

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) called it discriminatory; Senator Harley Kilgore (D., W. Va.) called it unworkable; Senators Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) and H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) predicted that the bill would deny entry to 90 per cent of the Jews now in displaced persons' camps.

1945 Limit Set

The bill provides that only those DPs who entered displaced persons camps prior to December 22, 1945, would be eligible to enter the United States. Most of the Jews now in the camps, chiefly in the American zone of Germany, fled from Poland and elsewhere in eastern Europe after that date.

Moreover, the bill provides that not less than 30 per cent of all persons admitted must be agricultural workers, and not less than 40 per cent must come from the former Baltic states or from eastern Poland.

The bill also provides for the admittance of (1) 2000 refugees from Czechoslovakia who fled the Communist coup in that country last winter; (2) 3000 displaced European orphans under 16, and (3) 15,000 aliens now in this country on temporary permits.

Senator John S. Cooper (R., Ky.) estimated that only 16,000 Jews would be able to enter this country out of the total of 205,000 provided. Other estimates have put the Jewish figure even lower.

Discrimination Denied

However, the sponsors of the bill, Senators Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.) and Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), hotly denied that it discriminated against anyone. Both Senators insisted there had been no "ulterior motives" in fixing the 1945 date.

In the end most of the bill's opponents agreed to approve it rather than do nothing at all about admitting displaced persons. Senator Carl Hatch (D., N. Mex.) confessed he was "somewhat ashamed" of the bill, but would vote for it so that "a few people can come in, and a start can be made."

Before the vote was taken, Senator Smith announced he would try to get the bill amended in the next Congress, so that the eligibility date could be set at April 21, 1947, the date when the camps were officially closed to any further influx of refugees from the east.

Holdup Victim's Condition Serious

James W. Ealy, 32, of 1008 Massachusetts ave. ne., yesterday was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital where he was admitted Friday night after he was beaten and robbed by two men in sailors' uniforms.

District police said Ealy was walking in the vicinity of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, 14th and C sts. sw., when he was beaten about 11 p. m., and robbed of $40 in bills by two unidentified men. Ealy, who was identified by police as a carpenter who moved to Washington about five months ago from Bluefield, W. Va., suffered contusions to the head and face, a fractured jaw and a possible skull fracture.

Washes Up After 'Remarks'

NOT BRIEF—Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho, third party vice presidential candidate, washes his face in the Senate cloakroom after he was relieved by Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.), at 1:10 a. m. yesterday. Taylor and Langer held the floor until 8:29 a. m. yesterday in a filibuster against the draft grind which he and Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.), had carried on since 4:36 p. m., Eastern Daylight Time, Friday.

Taylor, third party candidate for Vice President, was reading a series of telegrams, when Senator Brewster (R., Maine), acting as majority leader, leaped to his feet.

Brewster said that Taylor's remarks violated Senate rules that forbid any member from making remarks ascribing improper conduct to another Senator.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), who was presiding, upheld Brewster and directed Taylor to take his seat.

Taylor protested and attempted to make a point of order to hold the floor.

But Ives was firm and ruled Taylor had lost the floor.

Working in shifts, Senators Taylor of Idaho and Langer (R., N. Dak). had held up all Senate action on the draft compromise with House members.

Taylor started the talkfest and kept it up for 8 hours and 34 minutes, then yielded to the North Dakotan, who kept the ball rolling for another 5 hours and 13 minutes. Then, shortly after dawn, Taylor reappeared.

There was a short break in the talkathon while Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), took the floor to blast the two Western lawmakers.

"I hope that history will not record at some time in the future," he said angrily, "that this was a mission for Moscow."

When Knowland had finished, Taylor, the third party's Vice Presidential candidate, asked for a quorum call. Fifty-one sleepy Senators came in from Senate anterooms, where they had been snatching catnaps while awaiting the filibuster's end.

It was the second roll call of the marathon talking session. The first occurred between Taylor's stint and Langer's.

As soon as the morning call had ended, the Idaho lawmaker took up the task again. He had quit earlier with a word to reporters that he planned to get a few hours' sleep then return for another round.

"I think I'll be good for at least another eight hours," he said.

House Clicks Off Minor Bills At a Rate of One a Minute

A Senate bill giving the President authority to order arming of United States merchant vessels in time of war or a national emergency passed the House yesterday and went to the White House.

After a brief but sharp fight, the House passed a bill to make about 80 technical changes in the revenue laws. It was expected by Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee to reduce revenues by 400 million dollars a year.

Knutson called the bill "a new progressive era in revenue revision," and said the Treasury was in agreement with most of the changes.

But Representative Eberharter (D., Pa.) called it "a sham and a shame."

There was no real fight to kill the bill, though, since there are no Senate plans to act on it anyhow.

For a time yesterday the House was clicking off minor bills at a rate of better than one a minute.

The House also rammed through these bills:

To allow Admirals Ernest J. King and Chester W. Nimitz to remain on active duty indefinitely. The measure goes to the White House.

To authorize the United States to become a member of the Pan American Railway Congress. This went to the President, also.

To authorize a 450-million-dollar-a-year Federal aid highway construction program for the next two years. It went to the White House.

President Truman yesterday signed 70 bills accumulated during his 15-day swing through the West.

Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters that 10 more measures passed in Mr. Truman's absence now are on the President's desk and still others are en route.

The President signed legislation giving United States approval to these international agreements:

1. A convention between the United States and France for the elimination of double taxation by those governments on the citizens of the two countries.

2. A new international telecommunication convention and other documents that regulate assignment of radio channels and handle similar technical problems among nations.

The new convention and its related documents (a final protocol and a set of radio regulations) replace an earlier convention signed at Madrid in December, 1932, and revised at Cairo in April, 1938.

House Searches for Bill, Finds It Already Passed

In Congress' rush toward adjournment yesterday, Representative Elston (R., Ohio) asked unanimous consent for the House to pass a minor bill in which he was interested.

The clerk couldn't find it at the desk. The hunt went on until Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) announced:

"The bill has already been passed."

Senate Passes AEC Extension

The Senate last night passed a bill to extend the terms of Atomic Energy Commissioners for 23 months to June 30, 1950. The bill was sent to the White House.

President Truman had insisted that the Senate confirm the reappointment of the five commissioners for terms ranging from one to five years.

If he vetoes the measure, however, he would have to give them recess appointments because the Senate has not acted on the nominations.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee, urged passage of the bill rather than adoption of a permanent administrative set-up.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), former chairman of the Congressional Atomic Committee, urged the Senate to reject the two-year extension and confirm the commissioners to the one-to-five-year terms stipulated in the Atomic Energy Act.

But Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) contended that any attempt at such confirmation would inevitably result in "another controversial contest" like the one that greeted the first appointment of Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal.

Hickenlooper denied that the bill was a creature of partisan politics. Critics have charged that the bill was drafted to avert a fight over confirming Lilienthal. Mr. Truman nominated Lilienthal for a five-year term. His first appointment was confirmed last year after a biter Senate fight. The present terms expire August 1.

Text of Congress Draft Compromise

Here is a summary of the official congressional digest of the compromise draft bill, agreed upon by Senate-House conferees and approved by the Senate:

Major Provisions

Registration—All citizens and aliens aged 18 through 25 must register.

Draft—All citizens aged 19 through 25 are subject to call unless exempted or deferred. Aliens are exempt if they apply, but thereafter are debarred from citizenship.

Service—Men drafted must serve 21 months. Anyone of draft age can volunteer ahead of call for 21 months service in the Army only. As most, if not all, of those drafted will be assigned to the Army, Air Force and Navy service can be assured only by enlisting for three years. Any enlisted reservist may volunteer for 21 months active service and must be accepted.

In addition, all who serve—whether volunteers or draftees—for less than three years in the regular forces must go into the reserves for five years. Those who serve 21 months can discharge their reserve obligation by another year of active duty, or by spending three years in an organized reserve unit.

Special 18-Year-Old Provision—A maximum of 161,000 18-year-old youths may enlist for 12 months service within continental United States. After discharge, they go into the inactive reserve for six years, subject to a possible month's training annually, or four years in an organized reserve unit. The Secretary of Defense can assign them to an organized reserve unit and if they decline they may be called back for 12 additional months of active duty.

Pay—Draftees receive the same pay, allowances, pensions, disability and death compensation as regulars.

Entrance Requirements—The passing requirement for acceptance is lowered to 70 on the Army general classification test.

Selection—Selection procedure is generally similar to that in the prior Selective Service Act. (Except it is expected that there will be no lottery; men will go in by age groups in a complicated arrangement being worked out by administrative officials.

Personnel Strengths—Authorized strengths of the armed forces are set as follows:

Army—837,000, plus 110,000 trainees.

Navy-Marine Corps—676,882, plus 36,000 trainees.

Air Force—502,000, plus 15,000 trainees.

Total—2,176,883.

Exemptions and Deferments

Exemption from registration:

1. Members of regular armed forces, including Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and Public Health Service.

2. Members of reserves of above while on active duty.

3. Foreign diplomats and members of their families.

Exemptions and deferments from service:

1. Veterans who had at least 90 days between Pearl Harbor and VJ-Day are exempt from training in peacetime.

2. Pre-Pearl Harbor and Post VJ-Day veterans who served 12 months are exempt from training in peacetime.

3. Veterans in Category 2, above, who served more than 90 days but less than 12 months are exempt if they enter Organized Reserve, provided such Reserve unit "is reasonably accessible to such person without unduly interrupting his normal pursuits and activities (includes attendance at college or university in which he is regularly enrolled) or in an unorganized Reserve in case no Organized Reserve is available.

4. West Point (Annapolis) specialized training program service does not count as active duty for purposes of exempting veterans.

5. Service in the armed forces of an ally of the United States prior to VJ-day counts for exemption from the draft.

6. Reserves: Members of National Guard or Organized Reserve on date of enactment of law are exempt from training while in Reserve but not from registration unless on active duty.

7. The President is authorized to defer men with dependents, "necessary" men in agriculture, industry, Government and research, and scientific and medical students.

8. Whenever the Governor of a State issues a proclamation that the National Guard of the State cannot be maintained at strength otherwise, youths under 18½ may be enlisted in the Guard and deferred from the draft.

Except for men in the above category, or veterans, no one who joins Reserves after effective date of the act will be exempt from registration or service.

9. Members of the advanced course (junior or senior year) college ROTC or juniors and seniors under Holloway plan [training program which provides officers for the Navy] are deferred until completion of college term but not exempt from registration.

Members of ROTC, etc., who after the enactment of act are selected for enrollment or continuance in such training (senior division) must agree to serve two years on active duty to be deferred.

10. Qualified aviation cadet applicants deferred while awaiting air training.

11. Regularly ordained ministers, students preparing for ministry (meaning those enrolled in full-time courses in recognized divinity schools or those enrolled in full-time courses leading to divinity school) are exempt from training but not from registration.

12. Students:

(a) High school students deferred until graduation or until they reach 20. (b) College students who, "while satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction," are ordered to report for induction will be deferred until the end of the academic year.

Miscellaneous Provisions

13. Conscientious objectors (a) Those who object to combatant duty will be assigned to noncombatant training; (b) Those who object to any service will be deferred (but, in both cases, specific tests for deferment are listed).

14. The sole surviving son of a Gold Star family is exempt from induction.

Reemployment rights are preserved for both enlistees and draftees.

A poll tax may not be charged as qualification by voting in States which allow absentee voting.

The Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940, which prevents foreclosures, etc., except under special safeguards, is made applicable to all subject to draft.

The President is given power to draft industry which does not produce at reasonable prices or give priorities to defense orders.

Renovation of military justice procedures in Army is provided. A bill previously passed by the House is carried as Title II of the act.

Billions of Dollars

Congress Grinds Out Funds Bills

Congress ground its way through billions of dollars in appropriations bills yesterday.

Still in conference or awaiting Senate or House vote were bills appropriating:

Some six billion dollars for independent executive offices, including the Veterans Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission.

More than 605 million dollars to make up budget deficiencies of various departments and to administer the draft and the displaced persons laws.

Some 40 million dollars for Government corporations.

Earlier in the day, the Senate passed the huge $6,797,668,163 Army-Air Force bill—the largest single direct appropriation—and sent it to the White House.

The Senate also finished congressional action on the $407,836,974 appropriation to run the Interior Department during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Despite its size, the Army-Air Force bill was still $511,173,837 below President Truman's budget requests. It will give the Army and the Air Force money for military expenses in the next fiscal year. It does not contain funds to build a 70-group air force. That appropriation was approved earlier.

The Navy appropriation bill was approved several days ago.

The Interior appropriation gives the department funds for reclamation projects and other activities. It is the largest in history for that agency, although 67 million dollars short of Mr. Truman's requests.

The bill carries nearly a quarter of a billion dollars for reclamation activities. Its major projects include $54,786,650 for the Missouri River basin.

The bill also will force the eventual ouster of Reclamation Commissioner Michael Straus and California Regional Director Richard L. Boke. Neither is an engineer. But the House and Senate agreed on a rider to the measure requiring the commissioner and all regional directors on the payroll after Jan. 31, 1949, to have at least five years' engineering experience.

Meanwhile, Mr. Truman signed the bill appropriating $577,546,953 to the Agriculture Department for the next fiscal year. The President had asked $636,412,090.

21-Month Service Draft Bill Sent Truman

buster. He hoped to kill the draft first by this delay and then by filibustering acceptance of the conferees' report by the Senate.

The Wallace lieutenant hoped to rest up while the conferees were meeting between filibusters. But they outmaneuvered him. Meeting informally, the group reached an agreement on disputed provisions and had their report ready for presentation when Taylor's talkfest was stopped. It was brought in 15 minutes later and approved.

House Speaker Joe Martin, however, held that the conference report was presented in accordance with House rules and overruled Marcantonio's point of order. The New Yorker indicated that the matter would not rest there but that opponents would take the matter to the courts for test.

"In my humble judgment," he said, "this places in jeopardy the legality of the whole legislation."

The final bill threw out most of the features adopted in the House last week which sponsors held objectionable.

Dropped was the plan to delay any inductions at least until next winter, while an intensive recruiting program was launched. Instead, draft calls can start at the end of 90 days, unless the President or Congress sooner declares a national emergency.

Special Doctor Draft is Out

Also abandoned was a House proposal to permit men to enroll in either the active or inactive reserves at any time and escape the draft. The special draft for doctors and dentists up to 45 years of age was elmnated.

Young doctors of draft age can be called into service like anyone else. Also a Pentagon official said the Army and Navy have a "string" on some June graduates of medical schools who were partially educated at Government expense, and a similar group finishing next year.

Authority to recruit 25,000 aliens for service in the American Army was stricken from the bill. So was a proviso barring "dives" and "bawdy houses" near Army and Navy posts. Conferees explained existing laws contain such safeguards.

May Omit Lottery

Registration is required of all citizens and aliens aged 18 through 25 not specifically exempt at a time fixed by the President. There may be no lottery, with men being called up by age groups, under plans now under study.

The bill also boosts the authorized strengths of the armed forces to new peacetime highs, with approximately two million men in active service and 1,500,000 in the organized first-line reserve.

Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, told reporters at Madison, Wis., yesterday that about 230,000 men may be drafted next year. He pronounced the compromise draft of 21 months "not bad."

Outside Bill of Rights

No muster out pay is provided for draftees and the GI Bill of Rights will not apply to them. A long section of the act puts Army court-martial reforms into effect.

President Truman asked Congress to pass the draft last March 17. He also proposed passage of universal military training. The final bill contains only a "remnant" of UMT—authority to accept 161,000 18-year-old youths for a year's training plus six years in the reserve. This would exempt them from the 21-month draft.

In the final debate before House passage last night, Representative James Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) declared that "what goes on here tonight will be known in country after country around the world tomorrow."

"The protection of our liberty involves sacrifices, and, of course, this bill involves some sacrifices," he added. "But I think it is a sacrifice very well worth the making."

The Senate filibuster was broken at 9:30 a. m. yesterday after Taylor and Langer had delayed the draft for 17 hours.

"Blistered" by Knowland

Langer yielded the floor at about 6:30 after talking 4 hours and 43 minutes. Before Taylor took over, Senator William Knowland (R., Calif.) spoke briefly, blistering the North Dakotan for "making a spectacle of himself."

"I hope," said the Californian, "that history will not record at some time in the future that this was a mission from Moscow."

Then Taylor spoke for almost three more hours to a handful of spectators and a few Senators. At 9:25 he read a telegram he had received, declaring there was only one man in the Senate working for the interests of the people. This was what the leadership had been waiting for—the one way he could be forced to sit down.

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) made the point of order that Taylor had been guilty of misconduct by impugning the motives of other Senators—a violation of Senate rules. Senator Irving Ives (R., N. Y.), who was in the chair, upheld Brewster and Taylor's filibuster was broken. As Langer was not there to intercede, the Senate proceeded to name conferees on the draft bill.

Had Been Primary Target

That had been the primary target of the filbuster. The Senators, Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.), Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), Millard Tydings (D., Md.) and Harry Byrd (D., Va.)—long ago had met with the House conferees and had reached an informal agreement.

So within 15 minutes—according to the log in the Senate press gallery—Gurney was back with the report setting up a "strong" draft. Ives immediately banged his gavel, declaring the report agreed to. Several Senators protested at the haste and the action was set aside.

Speaks Only Few Minutes

This enabled Taylor to get the floor again for what might have been another long talkfast. But he spoke only a few minutes, saying he had decided to delay things no longer. His earlier stretch of 8 hours and 30 minutes beat his prior record of last year by 10 minutes. But It was far less than the elder Senator Robert LaFollette's 18-hour and 23-minute record, set in 1908.

Board Appointed In Coal Strike Threat

By Harold W. Ward
Associated Press Staff Writer

President Truman set up a Taft-Hartley board of inquiry yesterday in an effort to wipe out the threat of another Nationwide soft coal strike next month.

Impressed with the need for swift action, the President asked the three-man board to report by Wednesday. The coal contract expires June 30. The miners begin a ten-day vacation June 26.

Waldo E. Fisher David E. Cole

Appointed to the board were David E. Cole, Paterson, N. J., lawyer and labor arbitrator, chairman; E. Wight Bakke, professor of economics at Yale University, and Waldo Amanuel Fisher, professor of industrial relations at the University of Pennsylvania.

The President must have a report from the board before instructing Attorney General Clark to ask for another court injunction to halt a strike. The type of injunction called for in the Taft-Hartley Act would delay a walkout for 80 days—if the court finds that it is a new dispute.

The miners already are under injunction not to resume their pension strike, which shut down the mines for four to six weeks in March and April. The court would have to rule that the contract dispute was an entirely new fight—otherwise the miners could not be restrained after the current injunction runs out in early July.

The pension and welfare controversy is far from settled, even though the miners are digging coal.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough heard arguments yesterday on a petition of operator Ezra Van Horn for an injunction to block payment of pensions under the strike-settling compromise of Lewis and Senator Bridges (R., N. H.).

Bridges is the neutral trustee of the mine welfare fund. He and Lewis, as the UMW representative on the three-man board of trustees, agreed to pay $100 monthly pensions to UMW members who are 62 years old, have worked 20 years in the mines, and retired after May 29, 1946.

Van Horn objected on two counts: (1) that it would allow pensions to miners not employed by the operators contributing the 10-cent-a-ton royalty, and (2) that payments would be invalid unless he approved them as the employer representative. Both objections were based on Taft-Hartley Act provisions.

Attorney John Lord O'Brian denied that Van Horn was trying "to block payments" from the 40 million dollars which has accumulated from the royalty in the past year.

"What we want is instruction from the court, because we believe the Bridges-Lewis resolution (ending the pension strike) violates the Taft-Hartley Act and its legislative history."

Lewis was represented by two Washington attorneys, Walter M. Bastian and Arthur Shipe. They argued—and Goldsborough agreed—that after appointment as a trustee, Van Horn was bound to represent the miner-beneficiaries instead of the coal operators in matters coming before the board.

"Human nature is weak," Goldsborough added, however, "and naturally you lean to your own side."

The Lewis lawyers contended that Van Horn never had submitted a plan for paying pensions out of the 1947 contract fund, and the money has been frozen in the bank.

Bastian said Van Horn "wants to be a Gromyko."

"If you read the minutes of the trustee meetings, you'll see how the veto power has been exercised," he told the judge.

The Lewis attorneys asked that Van Horn's petition for an injunction be thrown out. Goldsborough indicated that unless O'Brian amended his petition to make it in behalf of Van Horn as a trustee, instead of as an individual, he would have to toss the case out on a technicality.

"Of course, the court would prefer to rule on the merits," he said.

Goldsborough said he would announce his decision Tuesday at 9 a. m. (EST), but first would allow Van Horn's lawyers to amend the petition if they wished.

Lewis submitted a new affidavit yesterday, too, saying that operators producing 21 million tons of coal annually had lined up against Van Horn. These included the West Virginia Coal and Coke Co., headed by Charles Dorrance, and H. K. Cook of Knoxville, Tenn., outspoken critic of Van Horn.

The UMW president said Van Horn's real motive was to "hamstring negotiation of a 1948 wage agreement."

Those negotiations broke down last week, leading to presidential intervention yesterday.

Soviet Steel Bars Travel Into Berlin

Berlin, June 19 (AP).—Sharply tightened controls backed by armed patrols were imposed tonight on both sides of the "new money" borders between the Russian zone and western Germany and on the road to Berlin.

The Soviet-controlled Berlin radio reported the capture of eight persons who it claimed "were seeking to smuggle huge quantities of reichmarks into the Russian zone from the west."

The Russians stopped scores of Allied travelers and thousands of Germans who sought to enter their occupation zone and Berlin from the West. They said they feared these persons might smuggle in a flood of reichmarks which will be declared surplus when the currency reform takes effect tomorrow in the United States, British and French Zones.

Freight Inspected

Railroad and barge freight was subjected to rigid inspection and the exit of Germans from the Soviet zone also was sharply restricted.

American authorities tonight tightened controls on the United States side of the border in preparation for the issuance of western Germany's new Deutsche marks.

Border points reported scores of additional United States constabulary troopers were patrolling the frontier to keep out illegal crossers from the Russian zone.

At Helmstedt, the British border control point on the motor highway to Berlin, a squad of British armored and scout cars gave a grim aspect to the border watch for a while this afternoon.

The travel scene there was one of confusion as 800 Germans turned back on the Berlin road milled about the highway.

Farther south, on the Soviet-American zone border, German travelers said the Russians had posted tanks and armored cars and had some of their patrols in trenches.

Fifteen Cars Sent Back

Late tonight the Russians detached 15 cars from a British-sponsored freight train and sent them back to the British zone. The cars, containing German mail for Berlin, were inadequately documented, the Russians said.

Only four trains reached Berlin this morning in a period in which eight or nine normally would arrive.

For the first time since they tightened border controls in April, the Russians also were refusing to pass American, British, French and other Allied travelers and military personnel on the motor highway.

American and British authorities arranged expanded plane schedules to bring in their stranded travelers.

None of the western allies protested the Soviet measures. They waitd at least over the weekend to judge the full impact of the Russian action.

One highly placed western allied official said it "seemed like a natural thing" for the Russians to guard their zone against a damaging flood of currency.

Political tension between the Russans and the Westerners, acutely sharpened by the currency revision announced yesterday by Britain, the United States and France, heightened still further.

German Communist press and politicians took up the cry raised by Marshal Vassilov Sokolovsky, Soviet commander, that the western allies were the "splitters of Germany."

His declaration that four-power Berlin was a part of the Soviet occupation zone was disputed by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander, who reiterated that the western powers intended to stand upon their rights as joint occupiers.

Priest Ousted For Politics

Prague, June 19 (AP). — Father Joseph Plojhar, minister of health in the Communist-controlled Czech government, today was suspended from the priesthood for his political activity.

Father Plojhar also is a member of Parliament and vice mayor of Ceske Budojevice.

A church letter suspending him said other priests had been removed from clerical posts, but they were not named.

Members of the Catholic clergy were warned they could not campaign in the single-ticket election or hold office in so-called action committees. Some of them did.

24 of German Origin Arrested by Czechs

Prague, June 19 (AP).—The government radio said tonight that 24 persons of German origin or nationality were arrested at Brunn, Moravia, today in a plot against the Czechoslovak state.

The radio quoted district security police as saying the group was in contact with "a foreign power" and that it had collected arms and sent out information threatening the security of the state.

Money to Burn In Germany Now

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ONCE AGAIN—Smiling German uses a 50-mark Reichsmark to light his pipe in Frankfurt after the three western powers set up a new currency in their zones. Germans were advised it would help if they burned the old money instead of turning it in. Value of the new money will not be announced for a week

65 Million Loan to House U. N. Doomed

The 65 million dollar loan to build the United Nations headquarters in New York appeared doomed last night until the next session of Congress.

The Senate has already approved the loan, which would have enabled the U. N. to start work on its permanent bulidings along the East River.

On the House side, however, Speaker Martin twice told sponsors of the measure there was not the slightest hope of bringing it up for action tonight. Majority Leader Charles Halleck has made no secret of his hostility to the loan, although it would have come to the floor if Martin had given the signal.

Failure to pass the loan is sure to revive the campaign, led by Soviet Russia and other eastern European countries, to move the U. N. out of the United States altogether. The State Department and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee have warned that the U. N. would not long continue its make-shift existence in temporary quarters on Long Island.

Authorization of the loan was wrapped up with other U. N. measures in a single House bill. Among other provisions which will die with failure of the bill, are:

1. Diplomatic privileges and immunity for American officials of the U. N.
2. Higher salaries and added personnel for the American delegation to the U. N., and
3. A House declaration of policy similar to the Vandenburg resolution already passed by the Senate.

McLean Rental Hearing Monday

A public hearing on proposed rent increases at the giant McLean Gardens housing development, Wisconsin ave. and Porter st. nw., will be held Monday at 9:30 a. m. in the District Building board room.

The hearing was moved to the District Building because the case involves about 2000 tenants and sufficient space could not be found in the Rent Control office at 1740 Massachusets ave. nw.

Woman Acrobat's Fall From Ladder Fatal

Madisonville, Ky., June 19 (AP).—Mrs. J. W. Cornwell, 26-year-old acrobatic performer, was injured fatally last night in a fall from a 35-foot ladder during her act with the J. A. Gentsch show.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kettle, were among the 400 spectators who witnessed the tragedy.

U. S. Slashes Arms Supply For Europe

By The Associated Press

The United States has reluctantly decided it can send only very small quantities of American arms and ammunition to western European nations this year, Government officials reported yesterday.

Only a grave European crisis involving Russia could cause the Administration to reverse this decision—and then only if Congress gave special approval.

The decision reflects the State Department's basic belief that Russia plans no direct aggression against any European country during the next six months at least.

Countries which have appealed for arms include Norway and Denmark. They want "minimum amounts" of rifles, guns, tanks and artillery.

Spokesmen for the Brussels pact countries—Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg—have made it plain they likewise need American arms and ammunition to put "teeth" into their new alliance.

Informed officials said the State Department and the armed services have concluded that the Government lacks legislative authority to dip into American arsenals to supply anything like the quantities requested by the Europeans.

Greeks Storm Orlai Heights

Athens, June 19 (AP).—Greek troops that advanced under a smoke screen today won Orlai Heights, southwest of Nestorion, from stubborn guerillas.

The guerillas stood off assaults for five hours before crack soldiers of the Fifteenth Division, shouting slogans and singing war songs, stormed the heights east of the Mount Grammos stronghold.

Orlai dominates a main "thoroughfare" by which the Communist rebels slip in and out of Albania.

Other fighting was reported from east of Mount Mitsikeli and in the Zagorian area east of Ioannina.

Reports from Kozane said Greek army planes carried out 60 bombardment missions against guerilla positions in the Grammos Mountains, where it is believed rebel chief Markos Vafiades has his headquarters.

Reds Retake Kaifeng Field

Shanghai, June 19 (U.P.).—Nationalist warplanes bombed and strafed Communists attacking the government garrison of Kaifeng today, but pro-government reports said Communist troops had recaptured the Kaifeng airfield after heavy fighting.

Communist forces under General Chen Yi reached the gates of Kaifeng yesterday. Government planes, placed on a round-the-clock schedule, bombed Communist supply points and caused huge fires in the Kaifeng suburbs.

Pro-government reports from Nanking, meanwhile, said Communists in west Shantung had taken advantage of the Kaifeng attack and had broken through a Nationalist line on the north bank of the Wanfoh River. The Shantung Communists units reportedly were driving westward in an effort to join the Communist forces attacking Kaifeng.

Belgrade Site Is Offered for Danube Parley

By the United Press

Russia informed the United States yesterday it will be possible to hold the 10-nation Danubian conference in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, as previously planned.

The Soviet note caught the State Department by surprise. Russia said on Monday it had been informed by Yugoslavia that the conference could not be held in Belgrade because of lack of adequate facilities.

The conference, whenever it is held, will seek agreement on free transportation on the Danube River. Participants will be the United States, Russia, Britain, France, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, the Ukraine and Yugoslavia. Austria probably will attend on a consultative basis.

5 East Europe Nations To Discuss Danube TVA

London, June 19 (U.P.).—The Soviet Foreign Ministry has announced that representatives of five eastern European nations will meet at Belgrade to discuss plans for establishing a little TWA in the Danube River Basin, Radio Moscow said today.

Countries involved are Yugoslavia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania and Czechoslovakia.

The project calls for new and expanded use of inland waterways for cheap transportation, flood control, increased exchange of farm and mining products and expansion of industrial facilities.

'Ike' Called Duckpin

In other words, the United States, Great Britain and Russia whipped the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis.

Among other fancy names hung in high places were "Iceblink" for then Secretary of State James Byrnes, "Fourfold" for Gen. George C. Marshall, "Coffeetree" for Admiral William D. Leahy, and "Kneepiece" for the late Harry Hopkins.

Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold was "Colter." Webster says that's a knife on the front of a plowshare. Britain's Anthony Eden was "Compost," which, according to the dictionary, is a kind of fertilizer.

When the Late President Roosevelt met with Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill at Tehran in 1943, that was "Eureka."

Bit Tough on Hawaii

Pearl Harbor once was known as "Dream." Later it became "Fireside." And the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce probably would have been chagrined to know that Hawaii was dubbed "Manhole."

Anyone walking through the halls of the Navy Department in the fall of 1942 might haive raised an eyebrow at overhearing Navy officers talking about "Torch." That was the plans for Allied landings in North Africa. "Overlord" was an armada ploughing through the English Channel in June, 1944. And "Sword" was the D-Day beaches in Europe.

The Navy called itself "Demon." The Army was "Destiny." The Russian navy was a strange thing called "Adulin Adm." London was "Artistic," Moscow was "Bashful," Paris was "Saturn."

The Navy referred to the Suez Canal as "Peepshow," to Awul, New Britain, as "Zootsuit," to Egypt as "Scallywag," to Ulamangi, New Britain, as "Brassiere." A method of defending convoys against U-boats was "Zombie."

The China-Burma-India theater was known as "Resplendent" but somehow the praiseful description didn't extend to the Indian Ocean. It was known as "Poison."

U. S. Assigns 3 Destroyers to Bernadotte

Lake Success, N. Y., June 19 (U.P.). The United States has informed the United Nations that three American destroyers now in the Mediterranean have been assigned to immediate duty with the U. N. Palestine mediator to help supervise the Holy Land armistice.

U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie also announced today that France had agreed to assign the corvette Elan to the mediator, Count Folke Bernadotte, for similar duty.

The United States stipulated that its destroyers were not authorized to employ force of any kind in patrol duties nor will they be allowed to stop or board any ships.

This was obviously aimed at nipping in the bud any fears on the part of the five-week-old state of Israel that the warships might be used to restrict Jewish immigration.

The United States said the vessels were to be used only to transport personnel and materials, and to observe and report in connection with supervision of the cease-fire agreement.

Meanwhile, 50 young men, converted overnight into the first United Nations "army," were leaving for Palestine today to help supervise the armistice.

The volunteers will travel to the Holy Land by chartered plane to help enforce the truce agreement. They will be armed upon their arrival.

The blue-uniformed force was loaded down with a variety of other equipment gathered in less than 48 hours. Their leader was Lieut. John Cosgrove, a former law student and Army intelligence officer who up to now has been concerned with the peaceful job of running the unarmed group of guards who patrol the U. N. headquarters here.

Thirty of the 50 guards picked for Palestine came from Cosgrove's headquarters force and the others were selected from nearly 100 U. N. secretariat employes who answered a call for volunteers.

Main job of the force will be to supervise traffic on the important Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway.

Spying Laid To Austrians

Vienna, June 19 (NYHT).—The Soviet occupation command today charged that high-ranking Austrian government officials were engaged in "espionage" against the Russian element.

The gravity of the situation was emphasized by government leaders who conferred with their own security forces and with western allied officials.

The two coalition parties—the Socialists and the People's Party—joined in assailing the Russian attitude, and their leaders; said bluntly they feared a Communist maneuver to seize power.

Chancellor Leopold Figl conferred today with the Soviet deputy commander, Col. Gen. Alexis Zheltov, who said the Russians had arrested a ranking police official, Anton Marek. Zheltov said Marek was accused of espionage.

Tass, the Russian news agency, followed with an announcement which said "Marek is in Soviet custody because he used his office to organize espionage against the Soviet element. Other high-ranking officials of the Ministry of Interior are likewise involved. General Zheltov will have further announcements on the matter."

D. C., Federal Vote Plank Proposed

'Let's Face It'

'Meet Issues' Is Platform Tip of Lodge

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, June 19.—Republican resolutions Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., tonight called for a GOP platform to "meet the issues" regardless of what Congress left undone.

After wrestling with an incomplete legislative record, Lodge decided "not to wait on Congress."

"Legislation that's hung up and unsettled won't prevent us from meeting the issues," he said. "We're not Congress."

Lodge discussed the convention's second biggest dilemma after nine special subcommittees filed 4000 words of platform recommendations covering 150 separate topics.

The Massachusetts Senator's drafting committee will start blue penciling it down to 1500 words today.

"It's mostly an editorial job," he said.

Hangover Evident

Despite the platform chairman's challenge, there was plenty of evidence his individual subcommittees still had a hangover from "meeting the issues." The full committee faces an even bigger headache when it meets for a showdown Monday.

Surprise reports of a "mild" civil rights plank turned in by the sub-unit that had forecast a strong one tended to confirm that many a key issue will be met only part way.

It was learned that the civil rights planks came out against lynching "and all forms of mob violence." They also declared for abolition of the poll tax. But they called for legislation only "if necessary" when the States couldn't meet the problem.

A new plank was added, saying the committee is opposed to the idea of segregation in the armed forces, but no legislation was asked to implement it.

Doesn't Mention FEPC

The 1944 plank asked legislation for a permanent fair employment practices, but the proposed plank doesn't mention FEPC by name. Instead it declares for equality of opportunity.

The 1944 plank asked a constitutional amendment to abolish the poll tax. Since then two House-passed bills have proposed to do it by law. The proposed plank drops the constitutional amendment proviso but puts legislation on the if-needed basis.

The civil rights plank illustrates what GOP platform draftsmen are up against. Congress had anti-polltax, anti-lynching and FEPC bills on its calendar, but all were in "unfinished" status.

It is possible the interim drafting unit, or the full committee when it meets Monday, may entirely rewrite the proposed civil rights planks. The subcommittee that proposed them was weighted with southerners after Dixie Republicans protested "nonrepresentation."

"As Strong As Truman's"

George A. Parker, a D. C. delegate, and one of those who had urged a "strong" civil rights stand, told reporters: "I'm satisfied with it . . . It's as strong as Truman's."

But Edgar G. Brown of the national Negro Council issued a statement saying it comprised "glittering generalities." Brown said Negroes "must look instead to the record and the character of the nominee."

Details of all proposed planks were withheld under a close secrecy rule but at least one subcommittee went beyond the record made by Congress, voting four to two for a Federal aid to eucation plank. This, too, was subject to full committee revision.

Lodge, who has already forecast the "most international" foreign plank in the party's history, was chary in discussing any of the rest.

But he did say that housing, also in an anything-can-happen congressional status, is dealt with in one of the proposed planks.

Wants to Cooperate

Discussing the adjournment impasse, leaving many a legislative issue on the hook, he said his committee was concerned of course and naturally wants to cooperate with Congress, but added:

"We've got to meet issues regardless. I don't see why we should sit back and wait to see what Congress does. As a Senator and a delegate right now I'm wearing two hats. Right now I'm speaking as a delegate."

Lodge called his drafting subcommittee to meet Monday morning, but said the finished platform won't finally be hammered out until Monday's full committee meeting. Even then, the text won't be made public until Lodge makes his report to the convention, late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

Lodge described his idea of the platform as "a tent that will cover everyone."

Fire on Plane Carrying Cadets Put Out by Crew

Fort Benning, Ga., June 19 (U.P.). A C-54 transport with 45 men aboard, including 39 West Point Cadets, caught fire in the air today but rode to a safe landing at Lawson Field here, the Army announced.

The four-engined plane encountered trouble shortly after taking off for Louisville, Ky. A fuel line broke and sparks from the engine exhaust started a fire. The flames spread over one wing but crew members manned fire extinguishers and prevented the fire from reaching the fuel tanks.

(By a Post Reporter)

Philadelphia, June 19.—A plank combining District home rule and Federal suffrage pledges yesterday was approved by a Republican resolutions subcommittee and recommended for inclusion in the GOP platform.

The recommendation was presented to Platform Drafting Chairman Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., by Deane C. Davis of Vermont, chairman of the subcommittee on general governmental affairs.

It was learned that a straight home-rule plank was recommended by the civil rights subcommittee, not formally charged with the District vote problem.

Will Be Considered

Chairman Lodge ruled the subject was not within the latter group's jurisdiction but said it would be considered in the drafting process. Members said they received the impression Senator Lodge personally favors home rule as a minimum plank.

The plank formally recommended by the governmental affairs group assigned to look into voteless District problems included these eleven words proposed by the Washington Home Rule Committee:

"We favor restoring local self-government to residents of the Nation's Capital." Additional language was added favoring national representation as well.

If adopted by the full Resolutions Committee, the plank in effect would put the convention on record for the principle of the Auchincloss bill now pending in the House and for the constitutional amendment needed to provide Federal suffrage.

In Identical Language

The home rule position was recommended to the full committee in the identical language submitted by Sturgis Warner of the Washington Home Rule Committee in testimony before the group for the Auchincloss Plan.

In addition, the plank picked up some of the Federal suffrage language recommended by National Committeeman Edward F. Colladay, Mrs. William F. Culbertson and George A. Parker, members of the District Republican delegation to the convention.

The combined plank was favored after Colladay told the group the District Republican organization opposed home rule unless national representation went along with it.

Mississippians Sue for GOP Delegate Seats

Philadelphia, June 19 (AP).—George L. Sheldon and Nelson E. Taylor asked the United States District Court today to direct the Republican national convention to seat them as delegates from Mississippi at next week's GOP parley.

In addition, Sheldon, of Hinds County, and Taylor, of Le Flore County, Mississippi, seeks $5000 damages.

Their suit, filed with the clerk of the court, named Carroll Reece, GOP national chairman, and Ezra R. Whitla of Idaho, vice chairman of the national committee and chairman of the 1948 convention contests committee, as defendants.

The contest committee voted yesterday to seat the so-called regular delegation, headed by Perry Howard, Negro national committeeman from Mississippi. The Southern State has eight delegate votes.

Sheldon and Taylor contend in their suit that the Howard group, known as the Republican Party in Mississippi, is 98 per cent Negro and the purpose of its acceptance as the legal delegation is "to cater to and nveigle the votes of the colored race throughout the United States."

GOP Session Opens Monday

maker to make much of a showing in the early balloting.

"My claim is," he said, "that Vandenberg will be the nominee of the convention."

Arthur Vandenberg, jr., who acts as administrative assistant to the Senator on Capitol Hill, said later that he was "given notice" that Sigler was going to issue the statement.

Young Arthur had an announcement of his own to make. He said his father was not coming to Philadelphia tomorrow, as originally planned, but was now expected Monday.

"He probably will not issue any statement as to his attitude when he does arrive," Arthur, jr., added.

Earlier in the week he had said that the Senator would issue a statement if necessary. The change in plans was interpreted to mean that the Sigler pronouncement took care of everything.

Pennsylvania Governor Delighted

Gov. James H. Duff of Pennsylvania expressed delight over the Sigler statement.

"That removes the last doubt whether Vandenberg is available," he said. "That should settle it."

Governor Duff controls something like 40 delegates in the big 73-man Pennsylvania delegation. He is ready to throw these to Vandenberg once the delegation leaves Senator Edward Martin, the State's favorite son.

Duff had good reason to be happy tonight. The earlier reports about Vandenberg had made him feel that a rug had been yanked out from under him.

The Republican Party, meeting in convention, will have three chief tasks to perform: To choose nominees for President and Vice President and to adopt a platform giving its views on the great issues of the day.

1094 Delegates to Convention

Amidst the confusion of claims and the rumors of deals and raids, one thing seems reasonably certain tonight:

No candidate, at this stage, has enough delegates in his camp or in sight to clinch the nomination. It probably would be safe to say, perhaps, that none has within 100 of the delegates necessary to win the prize.

Dewey, Taft Coming Today

So far the only active candidate in Philadelphia is Governor Stassen, who arrived Thursday.

Governor Dewey is coming tomorrow. He is scheduled to hold a news conference in his $1000-a-day ballroom headquarters in the Bellevue-Stratford, and his managers expect him to make his own contribution to what is being called the "Dewey blitz."

Senator Taft also is expected tomorrow and will move into the Benjamin Franklin, which was Wendell Willkie's lucky headquarters in 1940.

Senator Vandenberg, likewise due here tomorrow, will occupy a comparatively modest suite in the Hotel Warwick.

There will be 1094 delegates in the flag-garlanded Convention Hall when the curtain goes up on the great political show Monday.

The winning candidate will have to get a simple majority of 548 to capture the nomination.

Representative Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, rotund campaign manager for Taft, remarked the other day that if all the delegates claimed by the various candidates were added up—well, it would take two convention halls to hold them.

The claiming business continued today.

Oregon Called Turning Point

Herbert Brownell, one of Governor Dewey's three campaign managers, reiterated that the big turning point in the pre-convention campaign was the Oregon primary, where the New Yorker debated with Stassen on the question of outlawing the Communist Party and then whipped him at the polls.

Browneil said that the Oregon victory has had a profound effect on the delegates, and that they have been streaming into the Dewey camp all this week.

"It looks like Dewey in Philadelphia," Brownell told reporters this afternoon. "He will have more votes than any other candidate on the first ballot. We reiterate our claim that there will be no deadlock and that Governor Dewey will be nominated on an early ballot."

Representative Brown predicted that Senator Taft would be nominated anywhere between the fourth and seventh ballot. He said the Ohioan would have 312 votes on the first ballot if he preferred to throw them in. The important thing, he pointed out, was how much the candidates would have in reserve and in that connection he promised some "surprises."

Stassen, talking for himself, conceded that he would be in third place on the first ballot but predicted that he would be declared the winner on the ninth.

Asked about reports that he had entered into a "deal" with Taft, the big Minnesotan said:

"You will hear a new rumor of a deal every hour and a new slander every half hour. I'll have no part in any of them. I am making an affirmative fight now for the nomination and will keep the liberal standard high to make possible final victory in November."

Clarence Buddington Kelland, who writes fiction for a living and plays politics for the love of it, was standing in the lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford today talking about the claims of the various it's-in-the-bag boys.

"In my opinion," Kelland said, "it's so wide open that you could drive a coach and four through it."

There are three reasons why Kelland and others think that is so. They might be summarized as follows:

1. The bright prospects of a GOP victory this November.
2. The fact that there is no popular hero—no "idol"—in the fight for the nomination.
3. A feeling among many of the favorite-son candidates that the convention may turn to one of them.

The situation in 1948 has been likened to that in Philadelphia in 1940. There are similarities, true, but what strikes an observer most forcefully are the dissimilarities.

The two front runners in 1940, as in 1948, were Dewey and Taft. A month before the convention Wendell Willkie was regarded as a rank outsider, a dark horse of the deepest hue.

The greatest difference was in the atmosphere. The German blitzkreig was on and France was falling. Dewey was only 38. Taft was a freshman in the United States Senate.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt had just raided the Republican Party and persuaded two of its elders — Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox—to join his Cabinet. This had a devastating effect on the GOP delegates assembling in Philadelphia in that melancholy summer of 1940.

The feeling grew that neither Dewey nor Taft could beat FDR, but that Willkie might. And so, after a good deal of shopping by the little fellows in the convention, they went for the Hoosier on the sixth ballot.

The feeling is strong here now among the delegates that, in selecting a Republican nominee, they will be selecting the next President of the United States.

They may be wrong about that—President Truman honestly believes that they are wrong—but that's the way they feel, and they think that the only question now is: who will it be?

Granting that the GOP field includes able men, no one of them appeals very strongly to the delegates as a whole.

That is one fact; another is that there is no powerful boss in the party who can sway any great number of delegates, as did Boies Penrose, say, in 1920.

All of which accounts for the growing stubborness among some of the favorite sons and their supporters.

Somebody asked a Californian where his delegation would go after it leaves favorite son Gov. Earl Warren.

"We haven't any plans to go anywhere," he replied.

What he was saying, in effect, was: "Why should we leave Warren when it might be Warren himself that is hit by the lightning?"

Meanwhile Governor Warren said he is "far more optimistic" now than he has been previously over his own prospects.

Speaking with what the Associated Press called "unaccustomed seriousness" during a stop at Chicago on his way here, Warren said:

"I feel more convinced now that no one has the necessary votes than I thought might be the situation a few months ago.

"Because of the very intense fights some of the candidates have made, it is reasonable to believe they have marshaled all of their strength.

"If they are not successful in early balloting it is my opinion the convention will look to others to lead the party.

"I am far more optimistic now than when I consented to have the California Republicans enter a delegation for me."

GOP Convention Resembles Variety Show; Dewey Is 'Big Act' as Curtain Starts to Rise

By Alexander F. Jones
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, June 19.—In the old days of vaudeville, the public crowded theaters for the same acts year after year. They were accepted as "standard acts," always worth seeing again.

Somehow this Republican national convention, which opens tomorrow at Municipal Auditorium, is remindful of the late lamented variety shows.

The headliners are practically the same. The "lines" are practically the same. The props are new and the costumes are fresh and clean and there is a zip in the chorus routines that has been lacking in Republican conventions for these many years. Angels with real bankrolls are behind this show and it is bound to click.

Dewey "Big Act" at Moment

The big act on the bill at this moment is Thomas E. Dewey, Governor of New York, the man with the most delegate votes. Dewey has been an outstanding figure at the last two conventions and was his party's standard bearer in 1944.

It is obvious that he has grown greatly in stature and showmanship in the past four years. He is surounded by smart stage managers who know the political answers.

His headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford costs $1000 per day—it is the main ballroom and it is smartly decorated with blue and gold banners, flags and colored blow-ups of Dewey and his handsome family. There are sections around the rim set off for New York delegates from various counties, and others for delegates from any state. There is a smartly staffed information booth in the center. Gifts are given to every hundredth visitor. The headquarters is run by very well drilled women who are more efficient than cordial.

The second big attraction is the Senator Robert A. Taft presentation at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. The entire lobby is decorated with Taft signs in green and white. There is a large blow-up picture of the Ohio Senator and bold signs assuring the visitor that America deserves the best.

Throuhout all the decoration is a four-leaf clover motif with T-a-f-t spelled out on each leaf. This is a Congressman Clarence Brown inspiration and one of which he is very proud. Mr. Brown also has authorized a Taft song on the four-leaf clover theme which has to do with looking all over for a floral oddity and finally finding it in Senator Taft. As the dignified legislator is really an Ibsenian actor, this frivolous touch is said to cause him to wince noticeably.

Elephant Brought In

Brown, however, is not to be deterred and he even brought a little elephant into town today with the Ohio delegation, all singing the clover song. It was probably just as well for Senator Taft that he was still in Washington sweating out Congress. If he had been here, he would have tried to smile and the photographers would have caught an expression that would have indicated the presence of a large quantity or odorous cheese, and Mr. Brown might have put him on the elephant, with disastrous results.

It goes to show the effort to use new props on an old act. Glamorizing Senator Taft is a challenging assignment, but Brown is not one to be discouraged.

Stassen Is Act Three

The third big act here is the Harold A. Stassen production. It is technically true that Mr. Stassen is not an old act. His name was withdrawn from the 1944 convention because he was then in the Navy doing an excellent job for Admiral Halsey.

But he has campaigned so hard in the past two years that he seems like a veteran.

Stassen is the only major candidate on the scene at this moment and he is putting on his usual effective performance. He has appeared before practically every committee and has had numerous press conferences.

In addition, he has a handsome ballroom at the Bellevue-Stratford for which his backers pay $500 per day. It is lavishly decorated with flags, drapes, pictures, enlarged quotations of pleasant things said about the candidates by Arthur Krock, Roscoe Drummond, Time, Life, Look and other writers and publications. Coffee is served by intelligent women volunteers who want you to listen about what they have to say about Stassen. It is all very friendly and informal. The visitors are the younger set and they all seem confident.

Street-Level Headquarters

In adition, Stassen has a main headquarters down the street in an attractive street-level store, where a large staff is busy at typewriters and where buttons, auto stickers and literature are passed out.

As of this moment, Stassen has everything for success in this convention except enough votes.

The mystery man of the convention headliners is Senator Arthur Vandenberg. His headquarters, so called, is a suite hidden away in the Warwick Hotel and manned solely by his son, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., who says very little very well.

Like all mystery men, there is a certain aura about Vandenberg. Certainly he is an old act, but this year he is the chairman of the powerful Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, a great force in the Nation, and the man who could easily be the man who could emerge as the selection in case of a stalemate.

When asked about Vandenberg, managers of other candidates have this to say:

"Senator Vandenberg is an honest man and when he says he is not a candidate we believe him." One gets the impression they are mentally adding "we hope" to their pious and respectful ritual.

Strictly Curtain-Raisers

For the other acts on the bill Governor Warren of California, Senator Martin, Senator Saltonstall, and other favorite sons, they are strictly first-ballot curtain-raisers.

The setting for this greatest of all shows, which an American political convention surely is, is the Municipal Auditorium here in Philadelphia.

Television New Prop

The outstanding addition to the props this year is television. For the first time a political convention will be completely televised.

Two great glass television control booths are hung on either side of the stage and the cameramen will be stationed atop the booths. A cluster of 10 3000-watt lights will blaze down on the head of Permanent Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr. Ten 1000-watt Kleig lights are placed all around the gallery.

There are special scaffolds for news reelmen in the center of the great hall, and the entire back stage is a maze of glass radio booths.

The basement is a labyrinth of newspaper and picture and telegraph equipment.

Add 2000 newspaper, magazine and periodical writers and you have the setup for coverage of the convention.

Now all the cast (which by the way includes Herbert Hoover and Clare Booth Luce playing return engagements) has to do is to say something—and do something—worth all the trouble.

Dewey Is Confident, But Won't Pick Ballot

New York, June 19 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, smiling and outwardly confident, arrived by train from Albany today, en route to the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia.

He and Mrs. Dewey, who accompanied him, will spend the night at their hotel suite and then motor to the convention city tomorrow.

Dewey, who has expressed confidence he will win the GOP nomination, declined to forecast the ballot on which he thinks he will be named.

"No, I could not do that," he said.

35 Millions Voted For Disaster Aid

By The Associated Press

Congress moved on two fronts yesterday to provide Federal help for the victims of disasters such as the Columbia River flood.

First the Senate approved a 35-million-dolar disaster relief spending program, with 15 milion dollars of the sum earmarked for the flood-stricken Pacific Northwest. The money was included in a 600-milion-dollar deficiency bill which went back to the House for consideration of Senate changes.

A couple of hours later the Senate approved and sent back to the House a separate piece of legislation, increasing the Reconstruction Finance Corp.'s disaster relief loan fund from its present level of 25 milion dollars to 40 million dollars. The loans made by the RFC must be repaid in 10 years.

The measure remained to be acted upon by the House.

Bald Eagle Center Fetes Fund Drive

A check for $1500 to pay for a supervisor for the first year's operation was handed over to District recreation officials before a crowd of more than 500 residents of the area.

Police Arrest Woman Posing Nude in Gallery

Palo Alto, Calif., June 19 (AP).—The life-sized nude in the Stanford University Art Gallery did seem remarkably lifelike, Police Sergt. Edward J. Farman mused.

Then the nude moved. He covered the lady's nudity with his coat. She was committed to Agnew State Hospital for observation.

Campus residents had complained of a woman's loud singing. Farman had just about given up his search when his attention was drawn to the nude who didn't stand still.

2 Teachers Quit in Protest on Segregation

Two Washington educators resigned summer eaching posts at a Baltimore high school in protest against segregation, it was announced yesterday as picket lines formed about the school.

The pickets were members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People opposing segregation of Negro teachers slated to take summer courses, under auspices of the University of Maryland, at the Baltimore school.

The two Washingtonians to resign were Dr. Madeline W. Kirkland, head of the home economics department for Washington Negro schools, and Dr. Mercer Cook, professor of romance languages at Howard University.

School "Boycotted"

Both said that they did not understand segregation would be the policy when they accepted the summer positions. Added weight was given, Dr Cook said, when he learned that "friends in Baltimore" were "boycotting" the school

Fourteen instructors had been assigned to the Negro classes. Registration was to have started yesterday but only one teacher braved the picket line.

The high school was selected by the University of Maryland for its first summer session for Negro teachers. Summer sessions for whites are held on the College Park campus.

A notice distributed by Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, president of the Baltimore NAACP, read in part: ". . . Maryland is required by law to provide equal educational facilities for all its citizens. Do not accept an inadequate temporary and segregated educational program. . . ."

The university's information bulletin declared: "It is likely that, as facilities become available, a full program will be provided to duplicate the program at College Park, so that colored teachers possessing a bachelor's degree may work for advanced degrees in the University of Maryland."

9 Week Days Left For Chest X-Ray

Nine weekdays remain for District residents to get free chest examinations in Washington's drive against tuberculosis.

To date more than 470,000 persons, 15 years of age or over, representing four out of every five adults, have been X-rayed. In this group, an approximate 15,500 have been advised to have a second examination, but the majority X-rayed a second time have been found to have no tubercular lung infection.

The mass chest X-ray survey, which opened last January, was originally scheduled to close June 15. The ending date was extended two weeks, however, to get a possible 100 per cent response to the drive. There will be no further extensions beyond June 30, officials said.

You can drop in for a free, confidential X-ray at any of the following locations:

Nineteen portable units are extended throughout the city at strategic points to accommodate residents. Not only is the examination itself free, but up to two years of medical supervision and advice will be given without charge to those, who are found to have the disease.

There is no inconvenience attached to the examination, which takes only a few seconds. The individual need only remove outer coat and any metallic objects in upper pockets and stand before an X-ray machine long enough for the operator to "shoot" the film. He will be notified of the condition of his lungs within a few days in strict confidence by mail.

The tuberculosis survey here, sponsored by the District Health Department, the U. S. Public Health Service and the District Tuberculosis Association, is the first attempted in a cit yof more than 500,000 population.

Chest Successor

UCS Board To Be Chosen Here Tuesday

A general assembly of United Community Services will meet for the first time Tuesday at 4 p. m. in the Department of Commerce auditorium.

The assembly will elect a board of trustees to replace the board of directors of both the Community Chest of Washington and the Council of Social Agencies, whose joint functions are being taken over by the new UCS.

More than 180 delegates from public and private welfare agencies, Chest-supported agencies, community organizations and the public at large are expected to attend.

The meeting was planned by the interim committee, set up by joint action of the Washington Chest and Council of Social Agencies last winter to function temporarily.

Subcommittees of this committee have been reviewing applications of agencies for support through the annual Red Feather campaign of the Community Chest Federation, but will turn this function over to UCS committees as soon as they are created by the new trustees.

The federation is composed of the newly formed UCS in Washington and the Community Chests of Prince Georges, Montgomery, Arlington and Fairfax Counties and Alexandria. It conducts a United Community Chest drive for Greater Washington each year.

Youth Playing With Dry Ice Injures Eye

A 9-year-old boy almost lost an eye last week while playing with dry ice.

The boy, Charles McPherson, son of Mrs. Florence McPherson, had some dry ice in a glass bottle at his home, listed as 211 C st. se. The ice exploded, sending glass into his eye, and he was rushed to Episcopal Hospital, from where he was transferred to Gallinger Hospital. His nose also was cut.

He was reported in good condition at Gallinger yesterday.

One of 142 Mishaps

The eye mishap was one of 142 home accidents, two of them fatal, which sent District residents to hospitals last week, according to the home accident survey of the D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross.

The two deaths, resulting from a suffocation and a fall, brought the total of home accidental fatalities for the year to 131.

One adult received a fractured skull while changing a tire on his car, when his dog knocked over the jack, causing the automobile to fall on him. A boy of 7, reaching for chewing gum in a china closet, had to have 15 stitches taken in his head when the cabinet fell.

Cereal Burns Sisters

Hot cereal burned two little sisters, while a 5-month-old baby was burned on the back by hot milk. Two women received burns, one from the shade of a kerosene lamp and the other from a stove explosion.

Among the 61 persons injured by falls were two children who fell while riding tricycles, one of them receiving a broken arm.

Boy, 8, Impaled By Jaw on Fence For 30 Minutes

New York, June 19 (U.P.).—Plucky 8-year-old Bill Brodie barely whimpered as police cut him down today from a picket fence where his jaw was impaled on an iron spike.

Police said the boy hung on a spike which had driven through his jaw, knocked out his upper teeth, and lifted his body off the ground.

For half an hour as police worked with a hacksaw to remove the youngster he fought back his tears. He neither squirmed nor cried as they filed away at the spike.

At Roosevelt Hospital, doctors said his condition not serious. The boy apparently slipped as he tried to jump the fence.

William Willett Named by Truman As RFC Director

William E. Willett of Baltimore last night was nominated as a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

President Truman sent the name to the Senate for confirmation before adjournment. Willett has been with RFC since 1934 and now is manager of the Office of Loans.

He was assistant to former Chairman Charles B. Henderson until 1946. Before entering Government service he was in the banking and investment business in Baltimore. He is 52.

Willett would succeed John B. Goodloe, who resigned to enter private business.

Chinese Boycott Japanese Goods In Philippines

Manila, June 19 (AP).—A rigid boycott of Japanese goods throughout the Philippines was voted today by Chinese representing more than 50 per cent of retail trade and 40 per cent of wholesale business in the Islands.

The Philippines Chamber of Commerce is expected to take similar steps. Its leaders already have spoken against resuming trade relations with Japan.

More than 5000 Chinese-owned stores in Manila alone will take part in the boycott.

MacDonald Named On Palestine Group

John J. MacDonald was nominated by President Truman yesterday to be American representative on the truce commission for Palestine.

A Missourian and career diplomat, MacDonald will take the duties of Thomas C. Wasson, who was killed recently in the fighting in Jerusalem.

Silver Spring Group Queried on New Hospital

Questionnaires to determine the interest of Silver Spring residents in the erection of a hospital for the community have been mailed to 175 members of the Construction Board of Trustees of the Silver Spring Hospital Association.

One query asks whether the hosquital construction should be pushed now or should be timed to take advantage of lower building costs.

The association will meet Monday at 8 p. m. in the hearing room of the Liquor Control Board building to hear reports from special committees and elect officers.

Recommendations of the Montgomery County Medical Society on the hospital project will be given in a report by Dr. John G. Ball, Bethesda physician. William Wright will report on meeting with representatives of Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, on a proposal to merge the efforts of the two groups in erecting one large hospital.

Coddaire Nominated For Maritime Post

David J. Coddaire of Lowell, Mass., yesterday was nominated for a six-year term on the U. S. Maritime Commission.

President Truman sent Coddaire's nomination to the Senate to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Richard Parkhurst, Boston Republican.

200 Reds in Argentina Arrested, Then Freed

Buenos Aires, June 19 (AP).—Police arrested 200 Communists today in a raid on their headquarters in suburban Avellaneda but released nearly all of them.

Police said the arrests were made because the party was meeting without having received special permission. The party is legal in Argentina.

an additional officer, one lieutenant for each tour of duty.

6. At least five detective sergeants are slashed to become uniform lieutenants, moving out into precinct work. Two detective sergeants now in the bureau are to be promoted to rank of lieutenant.

7. As a result of these changes, 23 corporals will move up into sergeant vacancies, and 23 privates will move up to rank of corporal.

Eligible Men Listed

On a manpower basis, the changes may affect these men:

According to seniority, inspectors eligible for promotion to assistant superintendents are Arthur E. Hiller, traffic division; District Inspectors Clarence E. Talley, Oscar Letterman, Lloyd Kelly and Night Inspector John E. Jeffries.

Captains who may be promoted to district inspectors are Captains William J. Cunningham, No. 10 Precinct; Clarence Lutz, No. 4 Precinct, and George Wallrodt, No. 3 Precinct. Four other possible candidates are Captains Albert I. Bullock, Clyde E. Strange, Beverly Beach and John E. Fondahl.

Those lieutenants eligible for promotion to four captaincies, incluing one as head of the new 14th Precinct, are Irving Umbaugh, Basil McAllister, Paul Barnes and William Murphy.

Second and fourth on the list for promotion to permanent captain, Inspector Robert Bryant and Robert Murray, detective bureau, are expected to retain their present positions rather than go into uniform.

Bus Kills Man After He Walks Into Side of Auto

A 55-year-old Savage, Md., carpenter was killed instantly yesterday when struck by a bus near Laurel, Md.

Maryland State police said the victim, Carroll Jones, was hit by a Greyhound bus after he had been spun around by another car as he attempted to cross U. S. Highway No. 1, a mile north of Laurel. He walked into the side of the first vehicle after alighting from his parked car, they said.

The bus driver, Benjamin F. Graham, Lewisburg, Pa., was permitted to proceed to Baltimore with his loaded bus, returning later to post $1025 bond on charges of manslaughter by a motor vehicle and unreasonable speed. A hearing was set for June 24 in Savage Police Court.

to the public

Your Transit Company has applied to the Public Utilities Commission to establish a $1.85 Weekly Pass; 12½c token fare, 2 for 25c; and a 15c cash fare.

Even with this increase you will receive more for your transit dollar than the dollar you spend for most other things. Transit rates have risen only an average of 16% since 1939. Other cost-of-living items have averaged a 70% increase.

We applied for the increase with great reluctance. But there was no choice. To meet higher costs, including a fair return on the actual investment in the property which makes your service possible, requires an increased income.

Capital Transit intends to furnish, and believes you want and deserve, a modern, efficient and safe transit service, second to none. To do so we must remain financially sound. This requires a higher fare. We ask your cooperation and understanding.

Here Are the Facts:

We delayed an increase for six months. Last October a wage Award increased our expenses at the rate of over $2 million a year. Our operations for 1947 showed a $90,600 deficit; we did not earn full interest on our bonded debt. It has been necessary to omit dividends the first half of this year. Stockowners are not now receiving any return on their investment.

By instituting economies, Capital Transit successfully reduced expenses in order to minimize our request for a fare increase. We tightened our belts as far as we could and yet maintain a transit service as good or better than any other in this country.

Costs continued to rise. Some weeks ago our employes asked for more wages to meet their own higher costs of living. After negotiations, an increase of 10 cents per hour was agreed upon, effective July 1, 1948. This will add more than 1 million to our 15 million dollar a year payroll.

As a result of these circumstances and despite operating economies, we are now facing further deficits. We cannot be expected to continue in business, maintain our credit or give good service under these conditions.

In addition, few other cities offer the advantage of a weekly pass. Transfer privileges in Washington are more liberal than in most cities. Washington's 3c school fare is one of the lowest in the country.

The Nation's Capital deserves a transit service second to none. Our street cars are the most modern in the world; our bus fleet one of the most up-to-date.

For over five successive years Capital Transit has won top nationwide honors for safety and maintenance achievement.

The basis of American enterprise is a fair and reasonable return to those who invest their money to make a business possible. No one can object to this consideration for the thousands of owners of transit securities.

To enable us to meet increased costs and earn a fair return on the money invested in your transit system, we need an increased income sufficient to keep things in balance.

Red Radio Inquiry Is Voted by House

The House yesterday approved a resolution to investigate the Federal Communications Commission. The announced aim is to determine whether Federal licenses have been issued to radio stations owned or operated by Communists.

The resolution, introduced by Representative Harness (R., Ind.) was adopted by overwhelming voice vote after Representative Sabath (D., Ill.) sought to block it.

Harness told the House that the FCC's licensing activities had aroused "widespread apprehension" and should be investigated immediately despite efforts to adjourn Congress now.

Rayburn Opposes Bill

Representative Rayburn (D., Tex.), the minority floor leader, also opposed the measure, declaring it was an "invasion" of the jurisdiction of the House Interstate Committee.

But Representative Wolverton (R., N. J.), chairman of the Interstate committee, denied that it would be an invasion of his group, and he told the House:

"This resolution does a thing we have been seeking to do, and that is a thorough investigation of the FCC."

Representative Cox (D., Ga.), chairman of a special House group that investigated the FCC some years ago, said the FCC granted five licenses in two weeks "to a man who will testify he is a former member of the Communist Party." He did not identify the individual.

Charges "Smear" Campaign

Cox, who resigned his chairmanship in the midst of the old investigation, said he had been driven out by a "smear" campaign.

Both Harness and Cox were slated for appointment as members of the new five-man investigating committee. Harness told newsmen he would start the inquiry immediately.

Harness told the House that he had no specific "charges" against the FCC or any of its seven-man board, but he said the resolution "speaks for itself."

Among other things, the resolution calls for an investigation to determine whether the FCC has licensed radio stations owned or controlled by Communists or members of Communist-front organizations.

Retiring FCC Member Honored

TESTIMONIAL — Clifford J. Durr (left), retiring member of the Federal Communications Commission and Wayne Coy, chairman of the FCC, at a testimonial luncheon

U. S. Loyalty Test Methods Flayed by Durr as 'Dangerous'

Clifford J. Durr, retiring Federal Communications Commissioner, yesterday attacked Federal loyalty program methods before some 200 National Lawyers Guild members and guests at a luncheon honoring him for his 15 years in Government service.

Durr, who is retiring from the FCC on June 30, declared he did not like the "new look" in Government, being very much concerned, he said, "when the Government resorts to nonjudicial sanctions to regulate people's minds."

"I have had occasion to read some of our secret police reports," continued Durr, "and I am particularly disturbed when I read that 'the informant is unwilling to testify before the Loyalty Review Board.' Will the 'informant' in time turn out to be a child reporting the dinner conversation of his parents?"

The retiring Commissioner, who has been known as a "dissenter" in his seven years in the FCC, said he did not like to see "the secret police given jurisdiction over people's thinking," a situation "just as dangerous as in Japan, Germany or Russia."

Durr's work and character received high praise from Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), FCC Chairman Wayne Coy, luncheon speakers, and Thurman Arnold, former Justice of the United States Court of Appeals and former antitrust chief for the Department of Justice, who was toastmaster.

Marshall Plan Hailed as Medium for Peace Miracle

Headliner Award For Public Service Accepted by Meyer On Behalf of Post

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Atlantic City, June 19.—United States, through the Marshall Plan, can show the world this country has the power to work miracles in peace as well as in war, Eugene Meyer, Chairman of the Board of The Washington Post tonight told a gathering of the Nation's leading journalists.

Meyer spoke at the annual award dinner of the National Headliners' Club, in meeting here at Hotel Traymore. He was principal speaker and recipient for The Washington Post of the journalists' club award for "Outstanding Public Service." The newspaper was especially honored for its Marshall Plan supplement of November 23, 1947.

Twenty other individuals and organizations in the fields of journalism in the United States were similarly honored for outstanding abilities.

Believes It 'Great Event'

Meyer stressed his belief that the Marshall Plan is "the great event" of our time.

"If we can win now a lasting peace without war," he declared, "It will be because of this great event, I am glad that The Washington Post will be able to make some contribution by helping to inform the American people of the issues involved, the choices presented and the alternative paths proposed. I am happy that this organization (the National Headliners' Club) has recognized that contribution."

He called on the news and radio men assembled to help keep the public informed.

"Success or failure of the world's attempt to win the peace under the Marshall Plan will depend a great deal on the efforts of the professions presented here. Only a people fully informed can reach a state of resolve in which such great decisions can be taken. Only a people fully informed can continue resolutely on the path of a great foreign policy."

Staff Members Also Cited

Meyer accepted the Headliners' Award for the newspaper and he also accepted a special citation for himself and six staff members of The Washington Post who contributed to directing, compiling and writing the special supplement honored.

Receiving the citations also were Herbert Elliston, editor; J. A. Livingston, financal writer, and Post Reporters Robert Albright, John Ball, Edward T. Folliard and Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.

The award dinner was highpoint of a three-day National Headliners Club frolic at this seashore resort. A farewell cocktail party, floor show and buffet at Babette's night club here, will wind up the festivities Sunday.

Plaques to Pay Honor to Area Legal Lights

Justice Harold H. Burton of the United States Supreme Court will give a talk on Chief Justice John Marshall at a gathering of members of the District Bar Association and the Columbia Historical Society at 4 p. m. Monday in front of District Court prior to the unveiling of several plaques in memory of distinguished legal figures associated with the area.

Invitations to witness the ceremonies have been mailed to civic leaders and members of both organizations by Lowry N. Coe, president of the Bar Association, and F. Regis Noel, president of the Historical Society.

Judge Edward S. Delaplaine of the Maryland Court of Appeals will speak on Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney. Judge Delaplaine, a resident of Frederick, is head of the Taney House in that city.

Spencer Gordon will speak on Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase and William E. Leahy will talk on Daniel Webster.

The joint committee of the two organizations in charge of the affair will then go to the Municipal Center where plaques commemorating Chief Justices Marshall and Taney, will be unveiled. Justice Marshall lived in a boarding house in C street between Marshall place and 4th street during an early session of the high court. Justice Taney lived at 318 Indiana avenue nw. Both addresses are in the Municipal Center site.

The plaques will be unveiled by Mary Ann Chase, 7-year-old daughter of Nicholas Chase, a member of the committee. The unveilings will be telecast by NBC television.

The group then will go to the Hecht Co. parking garage at 6th and E sts. nw. where Salmon P. Chase had his law office before his elevation to Lincoln's cabinet and the Supreme Court bench. Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the company, will accept the plaque.

They will then go to the law office of Donohue, Kaufman & Kronheim at 503 D street nw. which once was the law office and residence of Daniel Webster. A plaque to Webster will be unveiled at the entrance. This will be followed by a reception and exhibition of Washingtonia in the law firm's offices.

Falls Church Man Declared 'Ideal Father' of Area; Victory 'Floors' S. R. Davenport, Employe of House

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

PRESENTING—The winner of The Washington Post Ideal Father Contest: Samuel R. Davenport, of 407 South Cherry st., Falls Church, Va. Mr. Davenport is pictured playing checkers with his daughter, Rosalyn, 11, who wrote the letter that won him the honor. In the background is the rest of the family, 6-year-old Jeffra with Mrs. Blanch Davenport, the mother, in a scene typical of the Davenport family

Washington's "Ideal Father" is Samuel R. Davenport of 407 S. Cherry st., Falls Church, an employe of the House of Representatives.

"You floor me on this," he said yesterday, when told he had won The Washington Post's Ideal Father Contest.

"I've been stunned before," Davenport said later, "but never so delightfully."

"I'm thrilled about it," was Mrs. Davenport's reaction to her husband's award. "Rosalyn showed me the letter before she mailed it, and I told her to send it in, but I never thought anything would come of it."

The Ideal Dad is 6 feet 1½ inches tall with steel gray hair and an easy smile. An editor in the Office of the Coordinator of Information for the House of Representatives, he has two blond daughters, Rosalyn, 11, and Jeffra, 6.

Rosalyn, a seventh grader at the Madison School, wrote the letter that won her Dad the title.

Rosalyn summed up her father's qualifications this way: "I think my father is the ideal father because I wouldn't be happy with any other father and I don't know any other child who wouldn't be happy with mine."

Another reason she thought he deserved the title, Rosalyn said, was her father's present-giving technique.

"He gives me things when I don't expect them, different kinds of things. He may take me on a date to a Chinese restaurant, or he may let me ride the electric horse in the House gymnasium, or he may write a whole book of rymes about my playmates and me, just for me."

Author of several plays, one of Davenport's favorite hobbies is adding to his daughter's collection of "Rhymes for Rosalyn," which he began writing even before she was born. He calls Rosalyn "Boom," her comment when she fell down as a baby, and hopes she'll be an actress when she grows up.

Jeffra's nickname is "Kickapoo" because, says her father, "she was red-faced and yelling" the first time he saw her and looked like a real Wisconsin Indian.

Jeffra often goes fishing with him, her dad says, and can do everything but bait her own hook. She landed a 6-inch sunfish and a 5-inch perch with no help three weeks ago.

Fishing is one of his favorite sports, Davenport says. He gets an early start, at 5 a. m., and usually picks the Virginia bank of the Potomac near Memorial Bridge.

"I catch a lot," he says, but he admits "they're all little."

Center of family activity is the Davenports' six-room brick home, which they bought a year ago. They were apartment-dwellers in Falls Church before then, and are pretty happy to have a back yard for croquet and badminton, favorite family sports.

Indoors, the Davenports like checkers, fan-tan, and "carom." And the grand piano in the living room gets a frequent workout during family song-fests. Dad and Rosalyn both play.

Dad, who is official grass-cutter, is proud of the job he has done on the lawn. It looked like a jungle when they first moved in, he claims.

For Fall Term

D. C. Schools Poll Pupils On Tuition

Nonresident students attending District schools are being polled to determine how many will return to schools here next fall by paying tuition.

Adelbert W. Heinmiller, head of the school business office, said yesterday all principals have been instructed to question their out-of-town students and report back as soon as possible so that the school department can provide for those expecting to return in its plans for next year.

The 1949 District appropriations bill, now awaiting the President's signature, carries among its provisions a rider that states that no part of the school appropriated funds can be used to educate nonresident students.

Under present tuition rates, a nonresident student will have to pay $343 to attend teachers' colleges next year, $194 for senior high schools, $150 for junior high schools, $250 for vocational schools, $106 for elementary schools, $26 for night schools and $300 for children attending the crippled school.

Still awaiting decisions in District Court are a number of suits, filed by Maryland parents who sought to keep their children in District schools without payment of tuition.

Their suits were based on a provision in the 1948 District Appropriations Act, that nonresident students enrolled before July 25, 1947, be exempt from tuition. If the President signs the 1949 bill, all out-of-town students will have to pay tuition effective July 1 of this year.

Cost of Coal Big Factor in CTC Rate Plea

Must Ask Even More If Price Zooms, Say Traction Official

If coal prices zoom upward, Capital Transit Co. fares may have to rise above the 15-cent rate asked Friday, it was revealed yesterday.

J. E. Heberle, company vice president and comptroller, said the pending petition for a rate increase includes "some consideration" to cover expected boosts in the price of coal, gasoline and steel, as well as other supplies.

Would Have to Ask More

However, if the present negotiations between John L. Lewis and mine operators should result in a "tremendous" rise in the price of coal, the firm would have to apply to the District Public Utilities Commission for a further rate jump, Heberle explained.

No specific amount for coal costs was mentioned in the fare increase petition filed Friday, Heberle said, although figures submitted reflected an expected "slight" rise in the price of various materials used by the transportation firm.

About Million a Year

The company's power bill, which is directly tied to the cost of coal under a contract between the Potomac Electric Power Co. and CTC, runs about a million dollars a year. If it should rise 10 per cent "this would be a very heavy increase," which the firm could not absorb unless the cost of other items dropped at the same time, the vice president said.

Unless some drastic change, such as a sharp coal price jump, takes place, Heberle said he is "hopeful that we will not be back for a year" for another rate increase.

No date has yet been set for a hearing on the CTC rate request.

Prize Dad Doesn't Horn in When Children Play Alone

Faithful text of the letter written by Rosalyn Davenport, 11, which won The Washington Post's "Ideal Father" contest for her dad:

Dear Mr. Editor:

There isn't a Dad better than mine anywhere. My sister, Jeffra, and I both think so.

He works for the House of Representatives, and it is his job to get answers to question which any Congressman might ask him. He's tall, over 6 feet, and he's sort of heavy although he don't like it much when people tell him he is.

Lots of people love their Dads. There must be lots of good Dads everywhere who'd do everything they could and give up anything to make there family happy, My Dad would do all that, too, and I love him because he would.

But this letter and this contest isn't about why I love my Dad. It's about whe he's an ideal father.

My father is the ideal father because he knows when to do things and just what things to do. He might not give me the nicest present on my brithday or at Christmas. I get lots of presents then. He give me things when I don't expect them, different kinds of things. He may take me on a date to a Chinese restaurant, or he may let me ride the electric horse in the house gymnasiam, or he may write a whole book of rymes about my playmates and me, just for me. He does those different things for my sister too. He takes her riding on the Senate subway train, or gets a little Greek girl to write to her, or takes her fishing before it gets light.

He know when to play with and when not to play. There are plenty of times when children want to play with other children and grownups think they should join in. Dad doesn't do that. But when we do want him, he'll drop most anything he's doing, no matter how important he thinks it is, just to play with us. He plays hard. He don't just pat us on the head, and let us win. If we win we win fair. Most of the time, we don't win. But we still like to play with him.

I think my father is the ideal father because I wouldn't be happy with any other father and I don't know any child who wouldn't be happy with mine.

Sincerely,
ROSALYN DAVENPORT.

1 Dead, 1 Injured As District Gets Freak Weather

Sweltering Heat Followed by Rain And Hail; Damage Caused Through Area

A 19-year-old youth was drowned in the Potomac River and a man was struck by lightning, not fatally, yesterday as Washington and environs were treated to a weird display of weather.

Rain and hail followed a sweltering day.

Saner weather was promised today by the Weather Bureau. The day will start cloudy but will become sunny during the afternoon. It won't be quite as warm or humid—or wet—as yesterday and a temperature top of about 82 is expected.

The drowning victim was tentatively identified as Robert E. Johnson, 19, of RFD No. 2, Midland, Va.

He and two companions were in a rowboat 100 feet off the Maryland side of the Potomac almost opposite Alexandria, Va.

Drowned at 1 P. M.

The companions told police Johnson drowned at about 1 p. m. when he jumped into what he thought was shallow water. The body has not been recovered.

The lightning victim was Shannon Allen, 51, of 3230 N st. nw. It happened at about 5 p. m. Allen had gone under a tree along the C. & O. towpath in Georgetown, about a mile above Key Bridge, seeking shelter.

When the bolt struck the tree, Allen was knocked to the ground and was unconscious for about two hours. When he came to, he walked to 36th and M sts. nw. and sought aid. He was treated for shock at Georgetown University Hospital.

The weather yesterday was marked by a period of sweltering, then rain and finally hail. Many cellars here and in nearby Maryland and Virginia were flooded and the Weather Bureau said the hailstones had done some damage to the tops of convertible cars in Virginia.

Phone Box Exploded

A bolt of lightning struck a house at 6323 Riverdale rd., East Pines, Md., at about 7:30 p. m., shattering windows and exploding the telephone box on the side of the house.

Last night's deluge rained out the scheduled presentation of "Carmen," by the Chicago Opera Company at the Watergate, and for the second straight night kayoed the Masonic "Night of Thrills" program set for Griffith Stadium.

The opera was rescheduled for Monday night and it was announced that if rain falls again Monday money paid for tickets will be refunded. "Madame Butterfly," rained out Friday night, has been rescheduled for tonight at the Watergate.

The management announced that tickets for either performance will be honored either night.

The "Night of Thrills" program was put over until 7 p. m. Tuesday. The crowning of the queen of the "Night of Thrills," which took place in Friday night's downpour, will be reenacted.

Most of the hailstones that fell here last night were reported in the Fourth and Eleventh Precincts, in Southeast and Southwest Washington. Pvt. S. J. Lombardo, station clerk at the Eleventh Precinct, said "they were as big as ice cubes—and that's no exaggeration."

As Big As Snowballs

Hail also was reported in Alexandria and parts of Arlington County in Virginia.

However, they probably didn't measure up to the ones that pelted Stoyestown, Pa., yesterday. According to the Associated Press, hailstones as big as snowballs and measuring 3 inches in diameter fell, smashing more than 1000 windows in Stoyestown.

Rising waters lifted two manhole covers—each weighing 75 pounds—in the Eighth Precinct. Both were near Broad Branch rd. and 27th st. nw. One of the heavy covers was carried about 125 feet by the water.

Pvt. J. F. Smith, station clerk at the Seventh Precinct, received a number of calls reporting damage done by the storm. One call, although it was out of the precinct boundaries, worried him most.

It was from his wife. She called Smith at 8 p. m. and told him the basement of their house, at 5865 14th st., Westover, Arlington, was flooded with 3 feet of water.

Wires Blown Down

Police also received a report of electric wires blown down in the 5000 block of 2d st. nw.

The Weather Bureau said more than an inch of rain fell during last night's storm.

Washington, or most of it, escaped earlier downpours which fell during the afternoon in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. The U. S. cooperative weather observer in Silver Spring said about an inch of rain fell there between 3 and 5 p. m. Heavy rain was also reported in Hyattsville.

When the rains came last night, they tumbled temperatures from the 80's rapidly. The mercury low for the day, a 67, was recorded at 7:25 p. m. The high was 88 at 4:55 p. m.

Falls Into Woods

Lawyer Dies In Crash Of Plane

Joseph Irvin King, 42, an attorney with the Treasury Department's customs inspection bureau, crashed to his death late Friday night near York, Pa., in a plane he bought early this month.

King, who lived at 5355 32d st. nw., was killed when his two-seater Luscombe plunged into a wooded hillside 15 miles southwest of York. The impact ripped a 500-foot swath through the woods, according to Pennsylvania State police.

A District resident for two and a half years, King had over 400 hours' flying time and had recently won a commercial pilot's license. He lived at the home of J. Randolph Newman, a patent attorney.

The attorney took off from nearby Hybla Valley Airport about 8 p. m. for York, an attendant there said.

King crashed about 10 minutes after leaving York. His body was found thrust between the wreckage and motor several hundred yards from the home of J. W. Mentaer of Glen Rock.

Born in Los Angeles, King held degrees from Harvard, the University of Southern California and Oxford. He was a member of the California bar.

During the war, he served as a lieutenant in the American Military Government in Sicily, France, Belgium, Germany, Luxemburg and Holland. He held the Purple Heart for a shell fragment wound suffered in Germany in November, 1944.

A bachelor, King leaves his mother and a sister, both of California. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

4-H Girl Sees Need for Study Of Marriage

Nearly 200 of America's top 4-H Club boys and girls, who don't mind grabbing a bull by the tail if it'll get him in the barn, yesterday had little difficulty disposing of the problems of marriage.

After conferring on that subject, and others, in group sessions Friday, a pert young miss named MacDonald Lyn of La Verne, Calif., stepped to the podium yesterday at Departmental Auditorium and cut loose with a general summation. To them she offered this distillation:

If the thought of marriage has entered your horizon, take a course on the subject, taught by a specialist. Not only that, but talk about it with others—how to pick your mate, how to make the marriage work, how to deal with all the thousand and one marital problems.

Having disposed of that, Miss Lyn turned to homemaking. Perhaps because "woman's work is never done," she called for "more emphasis placed on the problems of homemaking in the boy's 4-H Clubs."

"The same emphasis," she added, "should be placed on the problems of agriculture in the girl's 4-H Clubs."

Miss Lyn said club members should lead the way in promoting community recreation, should strive to improve rural education, should cooperate with other organizations in their areas, and should promote religious understanding through tolerance and knowledge.

The 4-H'ers are in Washington to attend the eighteenth national 4-H Club camp, which lasts through June 23.

FBI Agent Says Playgrounds Not Delinquency Cure

Playgrounds and clubs are no cure for juvenile delinquency, George Carroll, special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told members of Province 2, Kappa Beta Pi, national legal sorority last night.

Speaking at a meeting at the Grace Dodge Hotel, Carroll also stressed that slums could not be blamed entirely for delinquency and cited cases of respected and successful men brought up in tenement areas. He pointed out, however, that children must be taught the meaning of law early in life.

Officers installed at the meeting were Miss Annice P. Mounte, province director; Mrs. Evelyn L. Krupp, province dean; Mrs. Irene Kennedy, associate province dean.

Gen. Howell, 102, Dies in Virginia

Gen. Julius Franklin Howell, 102-year-old Confederate veteran, died last night at his home in Bristol, Va.

Death came to the widely known figure of the Civil War at 8:15 p. m. He had suffered a heart attack three weeks ago.

As a lad of 15, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, where he served as a courier on the staffs of Gen. Roger W. Pryor of Virginia and Gen. John Bratton of North Carolina, both Cavalry commanders.

After serving the Southern cause during the entire war, the youth fell into the hands of the Federals on April 6, 1865, three days before the surrender at Appomattox. Taken prisoner, he was discharged three months later after he had taken an oath of loyalty to the Union.

Born January 17, 1846, in the western part of Nansemond County, Va., he grew up as the son of a Baptist minister and plantation owner.

After his Army service, he became a school teacher, taking short courses at Illinois, Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania.

After helping establish the public school system in Arkansas, he returned to Virginia in 1901, where he became president of Virginia Intermont College at Bristol. He left that post to enter the insurance business.

Named to serve on the board of trustees of the college he had headed, General Howell in 1944 had put his foot down on the proposition of serving another term, declaring he couldn't hear all the board's arguments.

Even in his last years, the Virginian, who was a past national commander of the United Confederate Veterans, had been in good health, looking younger than the centenarian he was. As national commander, he was addressed as "General," and the title stuck.

His health and vigor he had attributed to "a robust father and a splendid mother" and the habits of thought molded by old-fashioned schooling methods.

Happily married at an early age, he remarried after his first wife died, 63 years later. His second wife, the former Maude Sharpe of Columbia, S. C., survives him.

On his 100th birthday in 1946, General Howell was feted both by the towns of Bristol, Va., and Bristol, Tenn., as "Bristol's grand old man of 1946." At the age of 98 he had flown with his wife to California for a UDC convention. He had visited Mary Pickford, been kissed by Olivia de Haviland, and visited Presidents Roosevelt and Truman. And on the 136th anniversary of the birth of Confederate President Jefferson Davis, in 1944, General Howell had addressed the United States House of Representatives here.

GEN. JULIUS HOWELL

This year, to celebrate his 102d birthday, General Howell's portrait was presented to Virginia Intermont College and Governor Tuck planted the "Howell Oak" to honor him.

Besides Mrs. Howell, he leaves two sons and two daughters, Edward of Oklahoma City and Barnes Howell, Houston, Tex., and Mrs. Esme Smith, Bristol, Va., and Mrs. Carrie Abernathy, Ardmore, Okla.

Mrs. Hendrick Funeral Rites Set for Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. Ida R. Hendrick, 90, onetime newspaper publisher and Government employe, will be held Monday at 3 p. m. at the Ives funeral home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington. Interment will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

Mrs. Hendrick died Friday at her residence, 1031 N. Buchanan st., Arlington.

A native of Chicopee Falls, Mass., she moved to Arlington in 1921, where she lived with her daughter, Mrs. Rachel H. White. Her husband, Willis Phelps Hendrick, died in 1900.

Faced with the problem of rearing a family of six children, Mrs. Hendrick entered into a brisk business life after the death of her husband.

Her first venture was the publishing of the Richville Recorder in Richville, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., which she continued for about five years. After this she was associated with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Richmond, Va., for a number of years.

In 1929 her active career was closed with her retirement from the photographic section of the Signal Corps, where she had been employed for 11 years.

She was active in affairs of the First Presbyterian Church of Ballston, Va., and held a life membership in the Eastern Star Chapter No. 291 of Richville, N. Y.

Surviving, in addition to Mrs. White, are three sons, Carl W. Hendrick, Los Angeles; Stephen B. Hendrick and Joel A. Hendrick of Marshfield, Vt.; two daughters, Mrs. Helen H. Moore and Miss Lois A. Hendrick of Arlington; nine grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

T. L. Hunter, Noted Poet, Dies at 73

Fredericksburg, Va., June 19 (AP). Thomas Lomax Hunter, 73, poet-laureate in Virginia and columnist for the Richmond Times-Dispatch since 1929, died today of a heart ailment.

His Times-Dispatch column, "As It Appears to the Cavalier," was outspoken and blunt and was widely read both in and out of Virginia. A bitter opponent of Franklin D. Roosevelt's "New Deal," Mr. Hunter was a spokesman of the "old school" who aroused tremendous reader reaction.

Besides the broadsides he directed at the new dealers, Mr. Hunter liked to strike out at prohibitionists, and often did so.

He was granted a leave of absence from the paper in 1936 to direct publicity for the so-called "Jeffersonian Democrats," who opposed Roosevelt's reelection. When regular Democrats asked him to make speeches in behalf of the President's campaign, he dismissed the offer as "a joke."

A lawyer and a farmer, Mr. Hunter lived at Waverly, his King George County home. He represented King George and Stafford counties in the General Assembly during the sessions of 1918 and 1920. He was author of a book of verse, "Forbidden Fruit and Other Ballades," and in earlier years was a contributor to national magazines.

Born in Belle Grove, Port Conway, King George County, Mr. Hunter was educated at the College of William and Mary and Georgetown University.

His column smacked of the countryside and rural living even when it was lashing out at "foreign propaganda."

In 1938, his column defended Hitler, Mussolini, and Franco while attacking Communism. He contended to the last that America was "drafted into World War II to fight Europe's battles."

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Marie Hunter; two daughters, Mrs. Robert L. Adams, wife of an Army lieutenant stationed in Japan, and Mrs. Coates Lear of Arlington; two sons, Thomas L. Hunter 4th of Richmond, and James Hunter of Arlington; a sister, Mrs. Sue Williams of Washington, and eight grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 5 p. m. Monday at Waverly. Burial will be in the cemetery of St. John's Episcopal Church at King George Courthouse.

GI, Minus Leg, Part of Foot, Is Prize Student of Dance

The Washington Post

DETERMINED—James E. Bailey and his partner look like any other team of professional dancers on the ballroom floor. But Bailey is different. As a GI, he lost his left leg and part of his right foot in the war. But the veteran hasn't let that interfere with his ambition to be a dancer. He is pictured above with Miss Mayita de la Valle, his instructress. Bailey's home is at 534 Ingraham st. nw.

When James (Jim) Edward Bailey, 23, of 534 Ingraham st. nw. walked on a landmine February 8, 1948, while participating with the Eighty-seventh Infantry Division in the break-through of the Siegfried Line, it cost him part of his right foot and his left leg nearly to the knee.

Months in hospitals in Europe and Alabama, and at Walter Reed General Hospital here, followed.

Prosthetic devices made walking again possible, but not easy.

Jim had an idea that dancing would help.

Going to the Don Pallini Dancing Studio, 2625 Connecticut ave. nw., he asked them if they would teach him to dance.

Mayita de la Valle, assistant director, said "sure." If the Veterans Administration would provide the tuition, it would be fine, if not, they'd do it anyway, and the lessons would begin at once.

The lessons did begin immediately—about a month ago—and to date Jim has had 30 hours of a 120-hour course.

The Veterans Administration also put its blessing on the project, giving the studio license to teach Bailey under Public Law 16 for rehabilitation of disabled veterans.

Today Jim can hoof it with the best of them when it comes to jitterbug, tango and foxtrot—he hasn't got to the other dances yet.

Help to New Legs

Jim says, "I figured it would help me to get used to my legs and with my balance. It has helped me get over my self-consciousness, too.

"My legs get tired sometimes, but that's because I don't take it easy and rest between dances. It is no worse than walking.

"I always wanted to learn to dance, and now that I can it has made me proud that I am like other fellows."

And when there is a group on the floor you wouldn't know which was Jim unless you were looking for a quiet blond fellow about 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighing about 128 pounds, who is studying to be an optician.

Washington's Most Beautiful
Rock Creek Cemetery
NON-SECTARIAN NON-SPECULATIVE
The beauty of the Leiter memorial must be protected by a glass enclosure because of the perishable nature of the stone when exposed to the elements. Equal care is exercised throughout Rock Creek Cemetery to preserve the beauty which has been invested here by nature and by generations of families prominent in the history of Washington and our country.
Since 1719, when Col. John Bradford gave the original "Glebe" to St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek Parish, the cemetery has been protected from encroachment by commercial and private builders. Though it has been enlarged through additional land purchases, the same hallowed atmosphere of the first "Glebe" has been maintained. Tasteful landscaping has created a dignity and serenity that in themselves prove a comfort and an inspiration.
You are invited to visit Rock Creek Cemetery today or any day when you are driving. If you have been considering the purchase of a cemetery lot, you may find one of the many attractive sites still available here to your liking.

Area News in Brief

Wasps Romancing Near Court House

The digger wasps are conducting their annual romance outside the F street entrance to the Criminal Division of Municipal Court.

A couple of dozen of the creatures, were buzzing furiously yesterday as they chased each other among the azalea bushes there.

The personnel of the court have been informed that the wasps ordinarily don't sting, but some are wary about going too close.

The yearly event ends when the bug-killers of the District Government spray the bushes, dig up the nests of the wasps and otherwise make themselves obnoxious to the little beasties.

The insects are an inch and a half long, with yellow-striped black bodies and brown wings.

Entomologists say that the wasps will cavort awhile and then the females will dig tunnels in the earth. One egg goes in a tunnel, and a fat insect of a beetle or locust species is placed beside the egg for food. The mother then goes away while the larva hatches and gets its sustenance from the insect the mother has provided.

Rent Boost Granted

An increase of 5.99 per cent on the rent of 204 apartments at 2800 Woodley rd. nw. was granted yesterday by District Rent Control Examiner William F. Mansfield.

The new rents will range from $61 a month for two rooms and bath to $167 a month for four rooms and two baths. Former rents were between $57.50 and $157.50.

The rent boost will bring $12,654 additional to the L. & S. Construction Co., owners of the apartment house, Mansfield said.

3 Fined in Food Cases

Radishes and lettuce led the food condemnation list of the District Health Department this week. A total of 1650 establishments were checked and 14 condemnations of 8884 pounds of foodstuffs were made. Three cases were brought to Municipal Court with fines and forfeitures amounting to $210.

Gravelle in Traffic Post

Gordon K. Gravelle, Capital Transit Co. engineer, was appointed yesterday to the District Traffic Advisory Board for a two-year term. He replaces John B. Ecker, also a Capital Transit Co. engineer.

The Commissioners reappointed the other 22 board members for the same term. They are Arthur J. Sundlun, chairman F. L. Haller, Mrs. Elinor Kirwan, Col. A. B Barber, Jack J Blank, Col. E. Goring Bliss, Ernest R. Bret, A. Julian Brylawski, Washington I. Cleveland, James A. Cobb, Harry D. Cavis, Dr. H. C. Dickinson, Lewis K. Dowing, M. O. Eldridge, Lieut. Col. O. C. Holleran, Norman C. Box Injures Girl, 3

A truck driver managed to avoid a 3-year-old girl with his truck yesterday in the 500 block of 3d st. sw., but a packing box which toppled from the truck hit the child.

The child, Patricia K. Clark, of 510 3d st. sw., was admitted to Casualty Hospital with scalp lacerations and a possible fractured skull. Her condition was reported good.

The driver, Theodore E. Shorter, 32, of 1121 3d st. sw., told police he swerved his truck to avoid hitting the child when she ran across the street. His truck plowed into a parked car.

Delay Is Urged In Twinbrook Zoning Action

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday recommended deferral of action on a petition for commercial zoning of 2.33 acres at Twinbrook subdivision on Viers Mill rd., near Rockville.

The commission urged deferral because a zoning plan for the entire Viers Mill rd. from Wheaton to Rockville is under development. The recommendation was made to the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners for final action.

A public hearing on the petition is scheduled by the commissioners for Tuesday at 3 p. m. in the courthouse at Rockville.

Disapproval Recommended

Disapproval was recommended for the petition of Katherin E. Lord and Catherine E. Vance for apartment house zoning in the Linden Forest subdivisions, near the intersection of Forest Glen rd. and Seminary rd., Forest Glen, Md. A public hearing is to be held June 29, at 3:30 p. m. in the Liquor Control Board Building, Silver Spring.

The planning commission contended that the proposed rezoning would create a traffic hazard and that there was no immediate demand for commercial rezoning.

The commission also recommended denial of a petition for apartment house zoning of 113,988 square feet on the east side of Wisconsin ave. or Rockville pike abutting Rock Creek Park south of Garrett Park, asked by Arlington Village, contract owner.

The commission contended that the property is not suitable for apartment use and that existing apartment area adjacent to the property had not been developed. Public hearing is scheduled for 2:40 p. m., Tuesday, at Rockville.

Hearing Is Scheduled

The commission also voted to urge disapproval of the petition of Godfrey Godsall for commercial zoning of lots in Montgomery Hills at Seminary rd. and Columbia blvd., and suggested that the property be given residential B or two-family residence zoning. A public hearing is scheduled at 2:30 p. m., June 29, in Silver Spring.

The commission recommended approval of two petitions. They were: Request for commercial zoning of 100,000 square feet on east side of Rockville pike opposite the Kalyjian store made by Feliz C. and Drusilla N. Montouri, and a request for commercial zoning for 10.3 acres on the east side of Rockville pike 600 feet north of White Flint Country Club made by Avon Shockey. Both are in the zone designated for commercial zoning in the master zoning plan.

Treasury Leads In Salvation Army Rebuilding Drive

A preliminary report on the Salvation Army's drive for a $350,000 rebuilding fund, released last night by Chairman Frank A. Birgfeld, revealed that Treasury Department is leading all Government agencies in donations to date.

Emphasizing that the report is "only fragmentary," Birgfeld said that the Treasury has turned in $6,055.72, to lead the first 10 agencies reporting. Veterans Administration is a close second with $5508.92 reported, and Reconstruction Finance has contributed $1517.70.

Other departments in the first 10 include the Civil Service Commission, Soldiers' Home, State Department, Public Housing Administration, the White House and the National Security Resources Board.

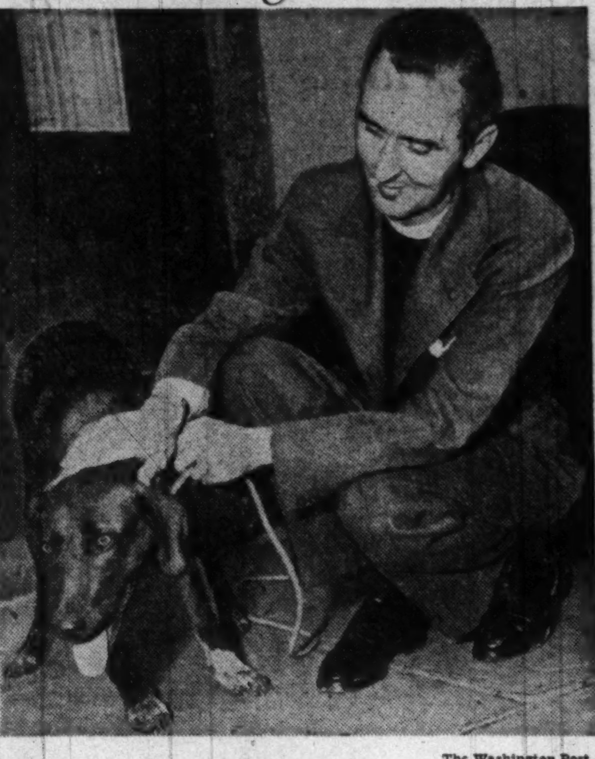
Birgfeld said that an encouraging report is expected to result at the next campaign report luncheon on Friday at the Evangeline Residence, 1330 L st. nw.

Hip Injured in Park Fall

Edward J. Court, 74, of 1723 Newton st. nw., yesterday injured his right hip when he fell 10 feet down a bank in Rock Creek Park.

Court, a retired Government employe, slipped on a ledge and fell near Beech dr. and Piney Branch rd. nw, park police reported. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital following treatment for a possible fractured right hip. He was reported in "good" condition.

Head's Too Big for the Fence . .



The Washington Post

DOESN'T PAY—Curious as a cat, this dog stuck his head between the iron rungs of the fence in front of Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw. some time Friday night. At 5 a. m. yesterday, a patrolman discovered the trapped animal. It took police, firemen and the fire rescue squad to release him. They were forced to spread the rungs with a jack. The Rev. Richard Williams, assistant pastor, shown above with the dog, turned it over to the Animal Rescue League

Nemeth Gives 7-Plank Stand In Arlington

A seven plank platform was announced yesterday by Arlington County Board candidate William C. Nemeth.

Nemeth, who will face County Board incumbent Alfred Frisbie and attorney Harold Schilz in the Democratic Primary, wants county schools to be made "second to none in the State and Nation."

He believes the School Board should be allowed "full discretion in adopting a long-range program for adequate playground and classroom space," and should be given enough money to hire adequate personnel.

Nemeth would have Arlington improvements financed on a pay-as-you-go basis, would eliminate traffic bottlenecks, and establish a merit system for all county employes. He is opposed to increased real estate taxes, but favors an auto tax and a proposed business tax.

Record D. C. Budget Signed by Truman

The District's record-breaking $99,729,483 budget bill yesterday was signed into law by President Truman.

Nine other District measures were signed at the same time by the President including one to continue for another year day care nursing centers for the convenience of working mothers.

With a school expansion program taking a sizeable slice of the budget, passage of the measure presages stepped-up efforts to provide adequate facilities for District students.

The budget which covers the year starting July 1 is the biggest in Washington's history. It compares with a $95,936,229 city budget for the current fiscal year.

Other District bills signed yesterday will:

1. Amend the District code to permit estates of deceased persons to sue and be sued in litigation started while the deceased was still alive.
2. Permit District life insurance companies greater latitude in choosing investments.
3. Amend the District code to remove the $10,000 ceiling on the amount recoverable in suits growing out of deaths caused by wrongful acts and to permit levying of medical expenses.
4. Permit the District Commissioners to lease city property for 50 years for auto parking.
5. Authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey land at Roaches Run, Arlington, Va., to the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad.
6. Increase payments allowed owners of property on Eastern ave., for expenses incurred for road widening.
7. Authorize a mileage allowance of 7 cents a mile for United States marshals and deputies for official travel.
8. Provide a five-day work week for firemen.

Johnston Starts Filibuster Against D. C. Sales Tax Bill and until the sales tax was also passed.

An additional 11,000 employes, including school teachers, police, firemen and other unclassified employes, also will go without pay raises.

The amendment was put up by Senator Cain, Senate watchdog of District revenues, who said, in effect, it was impossible for the District to pay the wage boosts without additional funds to be raised by the sales tax.

The fate of the pay raise for District teachers, policemen, and firemen and higher pensions for police and fire department widows and orphans was tied up in the sales tax debate because Senator Cain had objected to unanimous consent approval of these measures without a sales tax.

The sales tax was expected to raise between $13,500,000 and 17 million dollars annually.

Under an Old District law local deficits must be met by raising the real estate taxes here. Senator Cain said that he and the other members of congressional subcommittees dealing with local fiscal affairs, felt that it wouldn't be right to meet the proposed pay raises through increased real property taxes.

These committees have studied District finances for many months and have agreed that the sales tax combined with the new high level income tax was the proper way to meet the pay increases, Cain said. He and other proponents of the sales tax have insisted that any increase in real estate taxes would in the long run cost the "little fellow" more than the proposed sales tax.

Senator Johnston has consistently argued that the sales tax would hit the "little fellow" and that instead there ought to be an increased Federal contribution to the District treasury for local services rendered U. S. Government agencies

After 45 minutes of uninterrupted reading from the printed copy of the sales tax bill Johnston halted for his first question from the floor.

Senator Lucas asked him how long he intended to speak. Senator Johnston replied: "I don't know. I hope to speak so long that we won't have the sales tax." He terms it one of the "most outrageous" bills he had ever heard of.

At this point Senator Pepper rose and said that some people thought a sales tax in the Nation's Capital would be the opening wedge for a national sales tax.

Senator Johnston agreed and added: "Nobody but a Republican would want such a sales tax."

Johnston declared that in reality the proposed 2% sales tax would amount to more than five cents on every dollar purchased and charged that it would take 17 million dollars a year out of the pockets of "the little man."

Johnston said he had worn his clothes all through Friday night; hadn't had any sleep and was prepared to continue with this procedure "maybe" until Monday morning.

Cain then asked: "Do you intend to speak as long as you have the strength?" Johnston replied: "I do. I plan to explain this bill in every detail."

At 10:20 p. m. after speaking for 55 minutes, Johnston yielded the floor to Senator Lucas, but only after the Senate voted that his right to speak again when Lucas sat down would be protected.

Lucas eulogized Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.) who is retiring from the Senate this year.

Forty ministers of the Arlington Ministerial Association yesterday threw their support behind Arlington Hospital's drive for $85,000.

They described the hospital as "peculiarly an institution of the people," and pointed out that it is the only one "in this community of more than 120,000 people.

They also expressed confidence in John J. Anderson, the new hospital administrator.

Board Okays Funds For Court Wing

Arlington's County Board yesterday informally agreed to borrow money from some local bank to fiance construction of a "badly needed" $250,000 new courthouse wing.

The understanding was reached during the board's meeting after Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green had urged the board: "There's only one way to build the wing now—finance it."

The bank loan could be paid off, Green said, by increasing the actual tax yield over the estimated 95 per cent tax collection figure in effect in the 1948-49 budgt.

Green Sued Board

Every 1 per cent collected above the 95 per cent estimate, the treasurer said, would mean a $40,000 surplus in county income.

Green recently sued the county board to force that body to give his office more space. The suit was rejected by Arlington Circuit Court.

Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan said yesterday he had "talked to several Arlington bankers and they said they would be glad to cooperate" in the loan.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg told the board the new wing, initially to include a basement and first floor, would eventually force the moving of the Arlington Jail, which occupies part of the proposed site.

New Jail Planned

He said a new jail is planned on the third story of the new wing. The board asked Lundberg to study the effect of the proposed wing on the present jail and report his findings at a later meeting. The board also put off official action on the bank loan.

In other actions, the board:

1. Awarded a $7989 contract for construction of a water pumping station in Fort Barnard Heights to the Lee T. Turner Co. of Arlington.

2. Agreed to draw up a contract to employ the Ransom-Davidson Co., Inc., of New York to advise on issuance of some $2,376,000 in bonds for county and school improvement.

Student Nurse

Taxi Driver Is Convicted In Rape Case

Charlottesville, Va., June 19 (AP). A 20-year-old service station attendant was found guilty today by Judge Lemuel F. Smth in Albemarle Circuit Court of raping a University of Virginia student nurse from Washington.

Imposition of sentence on Lemuel J. Bickers convicted of rape, was deferred until a later date on motion of the defense attorney, E. V. Walker. Bickers' wife is expecting a baby soon, the attorney told the court.

Bickers was remanded to the county jail to await sentencing.

The 18-year-old student nurse said on the stand that Bickers, posing as a taxi driver, approached her after she arrived here by bus from her home in Washington on Sunday night, April 25.

Instead of taking her to the nursing school, the girl said, Bickers continued southward on U. S. Highway 29 to the spot where she said the offense was committed.

She told a classmate of the offense the following day and hospital authorities the next Friday, the nurse said.

Dr. C. C. Nukols, of the University of Virginia Hospital, who saw the nurse at that time, said on the stand this morning that her physical condition revealed bruises. She was in a state of "borderline hysteria," he said, and was admitted to the university hospital for observation and further checkup.

It became known at that time that she had been married to a University of Maryland student, and it was discovered she was pregnant, Dr. Nuchols said.

Bickers, who took the stand just before noon, denied posing as a taxi driver and stated that the girl submitted to him of her own accord.

D. C. Man Held In Rape Case

A 21-year-old youth, released from Lorton Thursday after serving a three-month auto-tampering sentence, yesterday was charged with assault with intent to rape a 12-year-old girl.

The youth, Leroy Johnson, 21, of 31 P st. ne., was jailed in lieu of $10,000 bond, for action of the grand jury when arraigned before Judge Walter J. Casey, Municipal Court.

According to police the girl was assaulted early yesterday in the bedroom of her home while her widowed father was at work.

Sex Squad Detective James G. Bryant said that police were called to the girl's home at 1:30 a. m., shortly after the alleged assault, and that he arrested Johnson three hours later.

The detective said that the girl and a sister, 7, positively identified Johnson at a special police line-up.

The defendant denied the charge, saying he had been drinking and had "blanked out" during the night, according to police.

According to Bryant, the defendant entered the girls' home, where the two sisters were asleep with a younger sister and brother. He assaulted the oldest girl in a bedroom where she slept alone, police charged.

Police said the 7-year-old sister made similar charges against Johnson. Both girls appeared in court, their necks badly bruised and scratched.

Truman Accepts Resignation of William Clayton

President Truman yesterday accepted the resignation of William L. Clayton, former Undersecretary of State, from his post as United States representative to the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe.

The White House released Clayton's letter of resignation. The Texas businessman said he felt it would be more appropriate that the position be held by someone "in constant touch with the problems confronting the commission." He said he has lost that contact since leaving the State Department.

In accepting the resignation, Mr. Truman voiced his appreciation of Clayton's services.

Seeley Freed; Will Return To His Home

Dr. Kenneth Seeley, 44-year-old University of Minnesota professor who was arrested wearing priests' garb at the Catholic University of America here, was released yesterday to return to his home.

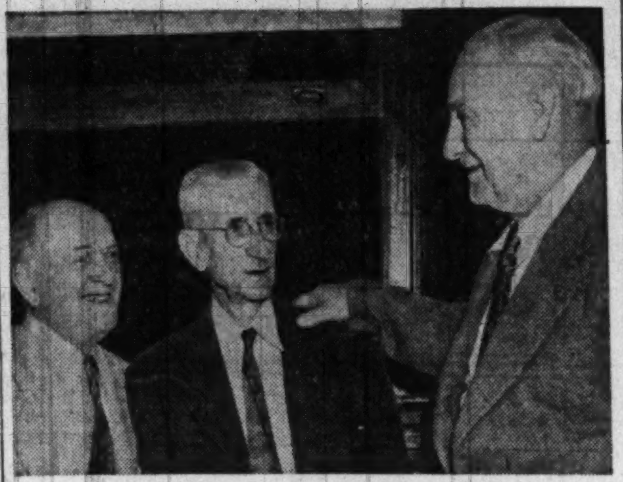
Dr. Seeley was freed upon orders of Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson. Dr. Seeley was held for mental observation at Gallinger Hospital on a technical charge of illegal entry.

His attorney, Francis X. Walsh, said Dr. Seeley will be flown to Minneapolis to his wife, Author Mabel Seeley.

Dr. Seeley was attending summer courses at Catholic University when he was observed wearing the cassock of Rev. John B. Zachary, chemistry professor. The garb was stolen from his room the day before, the thief leaving behind his own clothing and a wallet containing $55.

Psychiatrists said Dr. Seeley had suffered a breakdown his second in recent years. Walsh said.

Talk Over Another War



The Washington Post

President McKinley looked sad. Three Spanish-American War veterans distinctly remembered that yesterday.

"The regiment went through the White House grounds and President McKinley stood on the White House steps, under the rotunda, to review us," said Emil Brown of 1242 21st st. nw.

"He looked downhearted, and wished us good luck," said Brown, who will be 70 September 23.

"He was a good man," said Elvin M. Luskey, 69, of 3505 43d ave., Colmar Manor, Md.

"He never wanted the war," added Charles J. Harlow, 80, of 2933 Ordway st. nw.

"People were saying, 'Did you see the tears in the President's eyes?'" Brown recalled.

"The streets were crowded with people," Brown, a bandsman, said. "We played 'Semper Fidelis,' and when we passed The Washington Post we played 'The Washington Post March.'"

Over in Cuba it wasn't so good. Harlow, a second lieutenant who later fought in the Philippine Insurrection, recalled tarantulas, scorpions and sand crabs that made nights miserable for the Americans, sleeping on the ground.

Brown was among the 50 per cent of the Army that suffered from fever. When he left Washington he weighed 138 pounds stripped; when he returned he weighed 90 pounds in his heavy uniform.

The three veterans of the Battle of Santiago, 50 years ago this July, were among about 100 who attended the encampment in the Knights of Pythias Hall, 1012 Ninth st. nw.

John A. Martin of 3018 V. st. se. was elected department commander, succeeding Vincent A. Oesterman.

Fred R. Husemen was chosen senior vice commander; J. Walter McDonald, junior vice commander, and John F. Farrell, adjutant-quartermaster.

The organization went on record as favoring Congressional measures to build up the armed forces, and urged a draft law that would make mobilization possible, if necessary, without delay. Appreciation of Veterans Administration care also was expressed.

The Military Order of the Serpent, the veterans' fun organization, met last night at 1321 K st. nw.

"EYES THAT TRUST, PLEAD, AND ACCUSE"

This letter was received from a twelve-year-old boy, whose face was horribly mutilated:

"Soon I shall have a face like every one else. I want to look like other children. This time my mouth has been put straight, and soon my eyelids will be completed. It takes many operations, but I am happy—I want to look like other children."

Unable to close his eyes because his eyelids were melted by burns, with his poor mouth twisted into an ugly grimace—now, three years after the battle this child begins to live again.

He is but one of thousands who have been maimed and disfigured by war. Funds are needed for plastic surgery, artificial eyes and prosthetic limbs.

You alone, or as a member of a group, can help the thousands of children now in desperate need overseas by becoming a foster parent. You will receive a case history and a photograph of the child. Correspondence with the child through our office is encouraged.

The Plan is helping children of fourteen different nationalities in France, Poland, Belgium, Italy, Holland, England, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and China. By aiding children in these countries you are working for peace—because all the people in contact with the children cannot but realize that we want friendship and not war.

The Foster Parents' Plan does not do mass relief. Each child is treated as an individual with the idea that besides food, clothing, shelter and education, the child will live in a homelike atmosphere and receive the loving care that so rightfully belongs to childhood.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Wall Street Bets on GOP Victory

Republicans gathered in Philadelphia for their twenty-fourth quadrennial convention will be busy pointing with pride—rather than index fingers—at their record of "good times." They'll accent that the GOP is the party of prosperity. And they can summon Wall Street as a witness.

Livingston

Only this month—as if to augur a Republican victory—the stock market climbed to new highs for the year. Dow theorists and Wall Street chart readers promptly proclaimed: "The bear market's over, the bull market's on." For this, Republicans can pat themselves on the back hard—harder than the Democrats. Yet both parties can stake out a statistical claim to credit: The Democrats because their man is in and the market has risen, the Republicans because the stock market has shown great oomph in presidential years when their man has won. Here's the record:

9 Times Out of 12

1. During the 12 presidential campaign years in this century, the stock market has gone up nine times (chart). The average advance was 10.5 per cent.

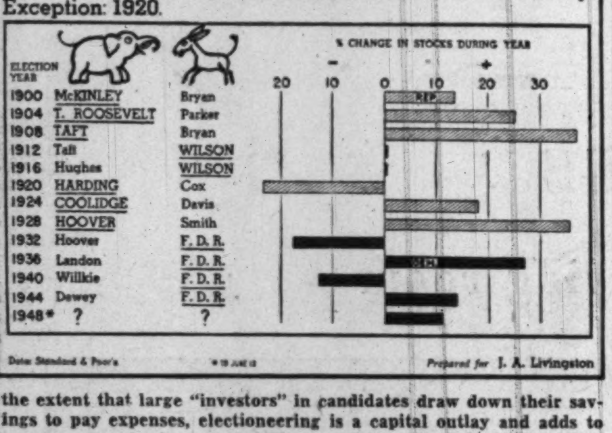
2. The market advanced in five of the six Republican victory years. The average rise was 18 per cent. The only time Wall Street failed to rise to a GOP victory was in the postarmistice year of 1920. The recession of that period (along with the League of Nations) was a major influence in throwing the Democrats out of power and putting Warren G. Harding in. If the 1920 decline is blamed on the Democrats, then the Republican average shoots up to 26 per cent.

3. The stock market advanced in four of the six Democratic victory years. The average rise was 3 per cent. The market declined in the depression year of 1932, which played so large a part in electing Franklin D. Roosevelt, and in 1940, when France surrendered and Germany seemed likely to win the war fast. Omit both these years and the Democratic average goes to 12 per cent.

Wall Street's bullish response to national elections is not chance. Presidential years mean business. People travel, telephone, make speeches, spend money to elect their man. Campaign expenditures and effort increase the velocity of money in circulation. And to the extent that large "investors" in candidates draw down their savings to pay expenses, electioneering is a capital outlay and adds to consumer purchasing power. The payoff is in the industrial production index, which has advanced in 8 of the last 12 presidential years.

WALL ST. VOTES REPUBLICAN

Stock market usually rises in expectation of G.O.P. victory. Exception: 1920.



Data: Standard & Poor's * 19 June 18 Prepared for J. A. Livingston

There's a psychological impact, too. During a hot campaign people forget business troubles. They're too busy electioneering. And they're hopeful—even if business is a bit sick. If their man wins, they figure that through him they'll make business conditions more satisfactory. The Republicans particularly have been impressed with their condition-making prowess. After every Republican victory except 1920 the stock market has gone up in December. In five out of six Democratic years it has gone down.

Hope has proved stronger than fact. In half the years following a presidential year, industrial production has gone down. And in 5 of the 12 postelection years the stock market has declined. The following table tells the story. It shows what happened to (a) the stock market, (b) industrial production during the presidential year and in the year immediately after:

Wall Street Case

So far this year, the stock market has advanced 11 per cent. That is better than it customarily does in Democratic years (3 per cent), but not so well as it customarily does in Republican years (18 per cent). So GOP supporters may argue that Wall Street is already betting on a Republican victory.

There's the counterargument that the market was bound to rise anyway: That increased arament expenditures, reduced taxes, and the continued high demand for new homes, automobiles, and industrial equipment were certain to prolong the business boom and maintain profits and dividends at a high level.

Yet this much seems certain. The prospect of a Republican victory undoubtedly made Wall Streeters more willing to take a chance. They'd reason that during a Republican Administration labor would be shown less partiality, that taxes, if possible, would be reduced further, and that businessmen would be in closer touch with the White House. All of which is conducive to investment confidence.

Thus, after Henry Wallace joined the third party and the polls showed a decided trend away from President Truman, Wall Street resumed its traditional role of discounting events to come. The market pushed through to the highest level in 21 months.

Houston, Tex., June 19 (AP).—Oil industry production records appear to be keeping pace with Washington hearings and conferences for consideration of the industry's problems.

Daily crude oil production averages have reached an all-time high for the fifth consecutive week and gasoline processing is within striking distance of the 18 million barrels per week mark.

These figures were released by the American Petroleum Institute shortly before a public hearing was to begin in Washington on the industry's plan to prevent gasoline shortages this summer and a possible fuel oil crisis next winter.

On the day of the API's report, Chairman Charles A. Wolverton (R., N. J.) announced postponement until June 29 of a hearing by the House Interstate Commerce Committee on steel needed in the petroleum industry.

Wolverton is hopeful work of the committee eventually will lead to its drafting a national fuels policy for possible submission to the Eighty-first Congress next year.

A research subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee has advised that unless both oil and steel needs ease up within six months the government should step in and parcel steel out to the most important industries and should ration the use of oil and gasoline.

The oil industry would receive top priority on steel needs.

This subcommittee recommends that the Government investigate steel capacity and needs, adopt a five-year search for oil in the Point Barrow, Alaska, area, conduct geological surveys for all of the 820 million acres of public lands (only eight million reportedly have been surveyed for oil and gas), and approve use of tankers instead of pipelines for movement of oil from Saudi Arabia.

Also recommended was allocation of steel to the natural gas industry, the committee saying this phase of the industry cannot transport available gas because of pipe shortage.

Washington Stock Exchange May Vote 5-Hour Trading Day

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Washington Stock Exchange plans to extend trading time to five hours a day from the present 45-minute session.

Members of the exchange will vote June 25 on the proposal, which has been approved by the board of governors. If authorized by the 38 members, the exchange's constitution will be amended to allow for the time extension.

Four reasons are listed by Bernard J. Nees, local exchange president, for the proposed extension of trading hours:

1—To provide the public in this area with a more efficient, economical and convenient local market for the more active local issues.

2—To eliminate as far as possible for Washington Stock Exchange members and for the public the risk of price fluctuations between the present closing hours of the local exchange and the opening the following day.

3—To enable members of the Washington Stock Exchange to improve their service to the public and to increase their net earnings from the orders they receive to buy or sell active dually listed local issues.

4—To increase the volume of trading on the Washington Stock Exchange and thereby insure its continued operation in the establishment of an orderly market for inactive local issues.

Informal discussions, it is understood, have been had with Securities and Exchange Commission officials and no objections have been raised from that source. Following affirmative action by local exchange members, necessary amendments to the exchange's registration with the SEC will be filed.

A five-hour day will put the local exchange on a par with major securities markets in New York and other large cities where trading hours are from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Because the local market closes at noon daily, much trading in certain securities whose 'natural' market is in Washington has been diverted to New York. Such dually listed issues include active performers like Potomac Electric Power Co. common stock, Peoples Drug Stores, Hecht Co., Washington Gas Light Co., Lanston Monotype and Mergenthaler Linotype.

A system has been devised so that the full-time presence of members on the exchange floor will not be necessary. An additional part-time employe will be hired to assist Ralph Saffell, the present full-time floor agent.

If members approve the five-hour day, the full-time schedule is expected to start on or about July 15.

Cotton Margins Cut

New Orleans, June 19 (AP).—The New Orleans Cotton Exchange announced today that it would reduce its margin requirements effective June 21. Charles W. Wells, president of the exchange, said the action "represents a reduction at prevailing market levels of $5 to $10 per bale as the required minimum original margin."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—There was enough concern over the prospect of a mostly clear weekend in the Midwest to cause an advance in corn today. The yellow cereal's strength was reflected in better prices for wheat and oats on the Board of Trade.

Grains had a firm tone throughout nearly the entire session, although dealings were not dipped fractionally. But the bread cereal recovered quickly when it became apparent corn and oats were in demand.

From that time to the close prices held above yesterday's finish. At the end wheat was ⅜ to ⅞ higher, July 2.31⅝@2.31¾; corn was 1¼ to 2⅛ higher, July 2.21⅞@2.22; oats were ⅝ to 1⅛ higher, July 94⅛@94¼, and soybeans were unchanged to 1 cent higher, July 4.19.

Buying in wheat never was particularly determined. Some of the hesitancy was a result of the belief that the market will encounter considerable hedging pressure on Monday. With the harvest expanding in Kansas, receipts of the cash grain at terminals should be quite heavy Monday, grain men said.

Traces of stem rust on wheat have been found west of the Mississippi River as far north as northern Kansas, the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine said. In this area the heaviest rust was found in southeastern Kansas.

The range follows:

IMMEDIATE TERRITORIAL OPENINGS!
TELE-JUICE, Telecoin Corporation's newest automatic merchandiser, automatically dispenses six kinds of pure, chilled fruit and vegetable juices in individual six-ounce cans. It is the first and only machine of its kind. It merchandises what the public wants the way the public wants it.
FACTS: Last year the public consumed 3½ billion cans of fruit juices—proof that people enjoy canned juices which preserve the flavor and health-building vitamins of the original. In industrial plants, schools, recreation centers and office buildings, Tele-Juice is already proving an instant and overwhelming success—because it fills a modern need conveniently, efficiently and economically.
Whether you wish to invest much or little, a chain of Tele-Juice machines offers safe, quick return in a field that is new yet proven—and as yet uncrowded. Let us tell you more about the profit-making opportunity this popular automatic merchandiser offers.

Better 'Gas' Seen Needed To Aid Autos

Detroit, June 19 (AP).—The car industry can build automobile engines that will cut gasoline consumption up to 40 per cent but—

The engines cannot be offered to the public until considerably higher quality fuels are available.

If the petroleum industry goes in for greater production of high octane fuel its output of "regular" gasoline must be sharply curtailed, and as higher quality fuels cost more it's a fair guess that a further increase in their octane rating would add still more to the price.

So it appears certain that if the American motorist is to get more mileage from his gasoline he is going to have to pay for it—either in the cost of the impoved engine or the better quality gasoline. The engine, of course, is the higher compression type.

Present compression ratios range from 6-to-1 up to 7.5-to-1. Those in the lower ranges get no benefit whatever from "high-test" gasoline; the higher ratio engines must have it. Research has shown that with certain structural changes an engine with a 12.5-to-1 compression ratio can be built and give a substantially greater mileage per gallon of fuel.

Result of Tests

In tests with cars powered with six-cylinder stock engines and six-cylinder high compression units designed by Charles F. Kettering, noted General Motors research engineer, the Kettering engine yielded 26.5 miles to a gallon against 18.5 by the stock unit.

(Compression ratio, roughly, is the amount of space in cubic inches given to piston travel compared with the space into which fuel is compressed when the piston is at the top of its stroke.)

Many of the 1949 model cars yet to come will be powered with higher compression ratio engines. Talk among the engineers is that the ratio can be stepped up to 8-to-1. That should bring a substantial increase in mileage per gallon of fuel.

Automobile and petroleum industry engineers agree there is a lot of mileage yet to be squeezed out of a gallon of gasoline. But, they say, there is no easy way to do it. Incomplete combustion sends a lot of possible mileage out the exhaust pipe and heat eats up many more miles per gallon.

Better Combustion Needed

Carburetors, the industry experts assert, do not now offer the solution to improved gasoline mileage; the answer, they maintain, lies largely in improving combustion and engine temperature control.

This applies to the so-called "regular" type of gasoline, used by about 90 per cent of the Nation's motorists, as well as the premium quality fuel needed by the higher compression engine cars.

A number of schemes have been advanced recently for supplying exactly the right quality of fuel to the automobile engine at all times. There is no argument over the fact a cold engine requires a richer mixture than a warm one or that uphill driving needs more and better quality fuel than level surface operation.

Now being tested is a device for injecting an enriching solution of alcohol, water and tetraethyl lead into the fuel stream at the right moment. It has been said this will permit the average motorist to do most of his driving with a lower quality—and less expensive—fuel than he now uses.

Lumber Shipments

Lumber shipments of 414 mills reporting to the National Lumber Trade Barometer were 10.1 per cent below production for the week ending June 12, 1948. In the same week new orders of these mills were 13.2 per cent below production. Unfilled order files of the reporting mills amount to 62 per cent of stocks.

TWA Offers To Switch Hughes Notes to Stock

New York, June 19 (AP).—Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., today announced proposals had been submitted to Howard Hughes calling for immediate conversion of ten-million-dollar TWA notes he holds into the company's common stock.

Purpose of the stepping up of the conversion is to facilitate new financing at the proper time. The company proposed Hughes convert the notes at $10 a share if stockholders approve at a special meeting on August 10. The stock closed on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday at $15 a share.

Hughes, through the Hughes Tool Co., loaned TWA the ten million dollars more than a year ago to tide it over a financial emergency. Under terms of the loan Hughes can convert the notes into TWA stock any time up to June 2, 1956, at the average closing price of the stock over a 10-day period. So long as the time of conversion remains an uncertainty, TWA said, it would remain a handicap in equity financing by the company.

At the special stockholders meeting TWA will propose the authorized common stock be increased to 4,000,000 shares from the presently authorized 3,000,000.

$4 Million Timber Deal Announced in Oregon

Portland, Oreg., June 19.—Consummation of one of the largest private timber deals in recent years involving approximately four million dollars and 430,572,000 feet of timber in Linn County, Oreg., was jointly announced today by Herbert Malarkey, president of the M. & M. Woodworking Co. and Thomas Autzen, president of the Portland Manufacturing Co.

The purchase involves acquisition of the stock of E. Richardson Co. of Lansing, Mich., which owns twelve thirty-seconds of the so-called Avery-Richardson tract of 2,148,185,00 feet of old-growth yellow fir and other species situated on 22,380 acres. Seventy-five per cent of the stock was acquired by the M & M. Woodworking Co. and 25 per cent by the Portland Manufacturing Co.

Surrender of Midland Issues Ordered by Court

Wilmington, Del., June 19 (AP).—Holders of securities in Midland United Co. and Midland Utilities Co. were ordered in Federal Court today to surrender their holdings by June 30, 1953—or lose them.

The two firms—remnants of the Samuel Insull empire—have been in the process of reorganization for the past 14 years.

It was testified at a hearing before Judge John Biggs, jr., that about 1000 persons hold securities in the firms and that over $2,500,000 in cash and market-value securities await them for surrendering Midland holdings.

District Sales Of Used Cars Still Brisk

Used car dealings in Washington range from "fair" to "never better," a survey of local automobile men showed yesterday.

But where there was disagreement over whether business here was in recession, none disputed that prices in both buying and selling, are as high as ever.

Commenting on reports of falling demand from Detroit and some 30 other cities, Fred L. Haller, secretary of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, declared:

"That is not at all true in Washington. The demand (for new and used cars) is keener than it has ever been."

Haller, and all dealers questioned, said prices are fairly static, and high.

Henry Cherner of Cherner-Brewer Auto Sales Co., 5111 Wisconsin ave. nw., agreed that pricings have varied but little, and said the selling public watches the market closely.

Terming present business "fair," Cherner said "sales began to slow down about three weeks ago in both buying and selling of used cars. When General Motors announced higher prices, he said, the public expected more for the used cars offered to dealers. That "settled down a bit," he said, but recent news of the 10-day layoffs in the automotive industry is upping asking prices again.

A spokesman for another long-established local firm said business in Washington is as good as ever this season. Experience of his firm, he said, has shown no decrease in trade. In New York, he said, dealer friends there have told him that auto trading, but not prices, has declined recently.

Health Plan Held Point for Bargaining

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that employers must bargain with unions on group health and accident insurance programs covering the workers.

This does not mean that employers must grant such plans; only that they are required, under the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, to talk them over in collective bargaining if a union so desires.

The 4-1 decision parallels a recent case when the NLRB ordered employers to bargain with union on pension or retirement plans. In both cases the NLRB held that insurance, or pensions, is a part of a worker's remuneration and a subject of compulsory bargaining.

The CIO Steel Workers Union was the union involved in both cases.

As in the earlier pension case, the NLRB said its ruling will be effective only if the union sees to it that its officers file the required non-Communist affidavits within 30 days. Yesterday's decision on insurance plans was handed down in a case applying to W. W. Cross & Co., of East Jaffrey, N. H.

The pension ruling applied to the Inland Steel Corp. Both that company and the CIO union are appealing. The company wants to upset in the courts the NLRB's finding that pensions are a subject for collective bargaining. The union wants the non-Communist oath requirement declared unconstitutional.

NLRB Member J. Copeland Gray dissented from the majority opinion in the Cross Co. case, just as he did in the Inland Steel pension case, and for the same reason. He said he considered that pensions and other types of insurance should be left to the field of "voluntary collective bargaining."

New Plymouth Air Pillow Ride!

You and your car both ride on air with this great new Plymouth advance. You relax on Airfoam seat cushions* composed of millions of tiny air pillows while your Plymouth glides along on softer, fatter Super-Cushion Tires.

It's the sensational new Plymouth Air Pillow Ride. The super-comfort seat is a live buoyant pillow between you and the road. The super-tires soak up road shocks from the side as well as below.

Foam-light and chair-height, the seats give to the lightest pressure, mold themselves to any position of your body for restful support. When you get up, the airy cushioning instantly resumes its original shape. And it will retain that shape years longer than ordinary cushions.

Airfoam seat cushions and Super-Cushion Tires add two more to the long list of advances that have made the Plymouth Ride so outstanding in the lowest-priced field. This famous Ride is a scientifically balanced combination of such features as:

117" Wheelbase—longest in the lowest-priced field—for smoother, more level riding.

Airplane-Type Shock Absorbers to take the severest road shock with controlled rebound of springs.

Front End Sway Eliminator to stabilize your car as it travels around curves.

Low Unsprung Weight to reduce bouncing of the wheels.

Floating Power Engine Mountings insulating the power plant from the frame.

All together these many engineering advances add up to a gliding Ride so restful that even long journeys leave you fresh and untired. Yes, there's a lot of difference in low-priced cars. And in performance, safety and beauty, as in Ride, it's Plymouth that makes the difference.

There's Many a Slip Between Voters' Door And Convention Floor

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

OUT of a frenzied whirl of graphs, charts and symbols, the Nation's opinion pollers have laid before this week's Republican Convention what is probably history's most detailed advice on the GOP voters' choices for a presidential nominee.

What candidate appeals most to the women's vote? Who do the veterans want? Labor? The farmers? Young businessmen?

How would Dewey fare against Truman? Stassen against Truman? What proportion of the vote would a Vandenberg-Martin ticket likely carry? A Taft-Warren ticket? Who do the independents want?

The reactions of almost every conceivable kind or bloc of voters to these and similar queries have been duly recorded—with the admonition that there is no guarantee that public opinion will prevail in the choices of any convention.

Poll Borne Out

BUT the trends revealed by the statistical recordings of what the pollsters hope is the voters' brain waves carry major political significance, even if politicians sometimes choose to ignore them.

On October 16, 1946, the Gallup Poll showed Democratic Party strength at its lowest point in 16 years. That was fully confirmed in the Republican's congressional sweep the following month.

In the race for the GOP presidential nomination, New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey has been the front runner almost continually since the last presidential election, being topped only for a brief period on the Gallup Poll's popularity meter.

That, of course, was during the almost phenomenal surge of Harold E. Stassen, whose public-appeal rating carried him far out in front of Dewey for a brief spree caused by his victories in the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries.

Dewey Back Up

DEWEY'S popularity lead, however, while still mounting in latest statistics, has been cut down considerably. In May, 1945, 59 per cent of GOP voters favored him. Stassen, in May, 1947, helped cut this to 24 per cent. By last week, however, Dewey was back up to 33 per cent, with Stassen down to 26 per cent.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, not an announced candidate but strongly rated as a "dark-horse" nominee, now holds third place on the Gallup Poll's popularity meter, topping both Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Ohio's Senator Robert A. Taft. In event of a deadlock between Dewey, Stassen and Taft, Vandenberg is the GOP voters' choice, a recent Gallup Poll shows.

Vandenberg's popularity "pull" has remained generally constant at about 13 per cent of the GOP voters' favor. MacArthur has been losing ground steadily since the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries, while Taft, now just below him, has staged a comeback in Republican approval since his Ohio primary victory, with 10 per cent of the "appeal."

At the bottom of the most-favored GOP leaders are Gov. Earl Warren of California, now the choice of 2 per cent of the GOP voters, and Speaker of the House Joe Martin, holding a constant 1 per cent on the popularity graph.

President's Ups and Downs

WHILE GOP contenders for months have anxiously eyed each other's rise and fall on the public-opinion barometers with major personal interest, they all have been spurred on by the roller-coaster antics of President Truman's popularity status—recently shown to be at one of its lowest points since he took office in April, 1945.

In July, 1945, President Truman's voter appeal was almost at a fantastic high. Eighty-seven per cent of the Nation's voters, according to the Gallup Poll, said they approved of the way he was handling his job. Only 3 per cent disapproved, while 10 per cent had no opinion.

With the reconversion problems of peacetime, however, and an end to the aura of good will that followed his taking office, his popularity dropped rapidly, skidding to 63 per cent of public approval in February, 1946, and hitting an all-time low of only 32 per cent approval in October of that year.

His handling of John L. Lewis in late 1946 was believed to have played a large part in his rise in public favor. Almost as quickly as his popularity curve fell it rose again, but never to near its first peak.

Public Was With Him

WITH a strengthening of foreign policy, aid to Greece and Turkey, the Chief Executive in March, 1947, had 60 per cent of the population "with him." But it was not for long.

At the end of his third year in office, in April of this year, with the ill will created in the Southern States by his civil-rights program and the shifting of policy on Palestine, his popularity rating was down to 36 per cent in the Gallup Poll, near its lowest point.

Should it remain in that neighborhood, GOP leaders believe he will be an easy mark for almost any opponent—but they carefully do not discount the likelihood of another burst of popularity.

Not all pollsters, however, agree that Truman's rating is quite so low, at least in some sections of the country. In a recent poll, the Minneapolis Tribune found that in Minnesota, if Truman opposed Dewey at this time, they would each pull 42 per cent of the vote, providing Henry Wallace was on the same ballot as third-party candidate.

Stassen Would Be Higher

AGAINST Stassen, on the same ballot, Truman, however, would get only 27 per cent of the vote with Stassen polling 63 per cent. Opposing Vandenberg, Truman would draw 40 per cent to Vandenberg's 44 per cent.

GOP Usually Makes it Short and Sweet, But

It Was Garfield on 36th in 1880

By Alexander R. George

This year's battle of ballots for the Republican presidential nomination may be the longest in 68 years.

Longest Republican contest was in 1880 when James A. Garfield was nominated on the thirty-sixth ballot to break a deadlock between former President Grant and James G. Blaine. Garfield, a very dark horse, had only three votes on the thirty-third ballot.

Second longest GOP struggle was in 1920 when Warren G. Harding was chosen on the tenth ballot. Republican leaders agreed on Harding as a compromise to end a deadlock between Gen. Leonard Wood, Gov. Frank Lowden of Illinois, and Hiram Johnson of California.

Observers say they will not be surprised if it requires more than 10 ballots to get a 1948 standard bearer. Indications are that when balloting begins, no candidate will come close to having the required 548 majority of the 1094 convention votes.

Republicans are hoping that the meeting in Philadelphia will bring them luck as it did in 1900 when Theodore Roosevelt popped into the national political picture. That was the year they renominated President McKinley as "a dependable custodian of the full dinner-pail" and named Teddy as his running mate to give "oomph," and a progressive tinge to the ticket.

Teddy's Stumping Helped

ROOSEVELT, Rough Rider hero of the Battle of San Juan Hill, stumped the country against silver-tongued William Jennings Bryan while McKinley conducted his second "front-porch" campaign. Roosevelt's popularity did much to offset Bryan's strength with "the plain people" and the Republicans won.

Teddy Roosevelt 12 years later split the party and assured the election of Democratic Woodrow Wilson. The "regular" Republicans were prepared to renominate President William H. Taft when the Rough Rider stormed into Chicago to lead his own fight for the nomination.

Bounding out of a train from New York, Teddy displayed his teeth in the familiar "feeling bully" grin and waved his big sombrero at a cheering crowd. A few minutes later he appeared on a hotel balcony and launched into a speech charging the Republican high command with the "naked theft" of convention delegates.

Rival delegates had fist fights. Hostile shouts interrupted the address of dignified chairman Elihu Root. The Roosevelt supporters lost contest after contest for delegates' seats.

The accredited Roosevelt delegates abstained from voting for a presidential nominee and Taft won easily on the first ballot. The Roosevelt backers bolted, held a separate convention of "progressives" and nominated the Rough Rider.

The presidential lightning, which struck dark horse Harding on the tenth ballot in 1920, was said to have been manipulated by a so-called "senatorial oligarchy," composed of Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, the elder Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, James Watson of Indiana, and Reed Smoot of Utah.

Most unusual political proceeding of 1920, however, was the Socialists' nomination for the Presidency of Eugene Debs, then in Federal prison at Atlanta. Debs, an ardent pacifist, had been convicted of violating the Espionage Act during World War I. He received almost a million votes.

Gallup Poll

Voters View Platforms As Catchalls

THE REPUBLICAN platform makers face two basic problems in presenting their platform to the public.

1. Only a small percentage of voters ever read presidential party platforms, or remember what is in them, or pay much attention to them.

2. The platform committee will have a harder time than usual drawing up a document that will influence voters, because no large proportion of voters seem aroused today over any one particular issue, and next, there is comparatively little difference of opinion among Republican and Democratic voters on such issues as do exist.

True, there are differences of opinion about personalities — President Truman and the GOP leaders of Congress are carrying on a colorful vendetta at the moment. There is a disagreement, too, as to which party or candidate can run the country most efficiently.

But polls find that the average

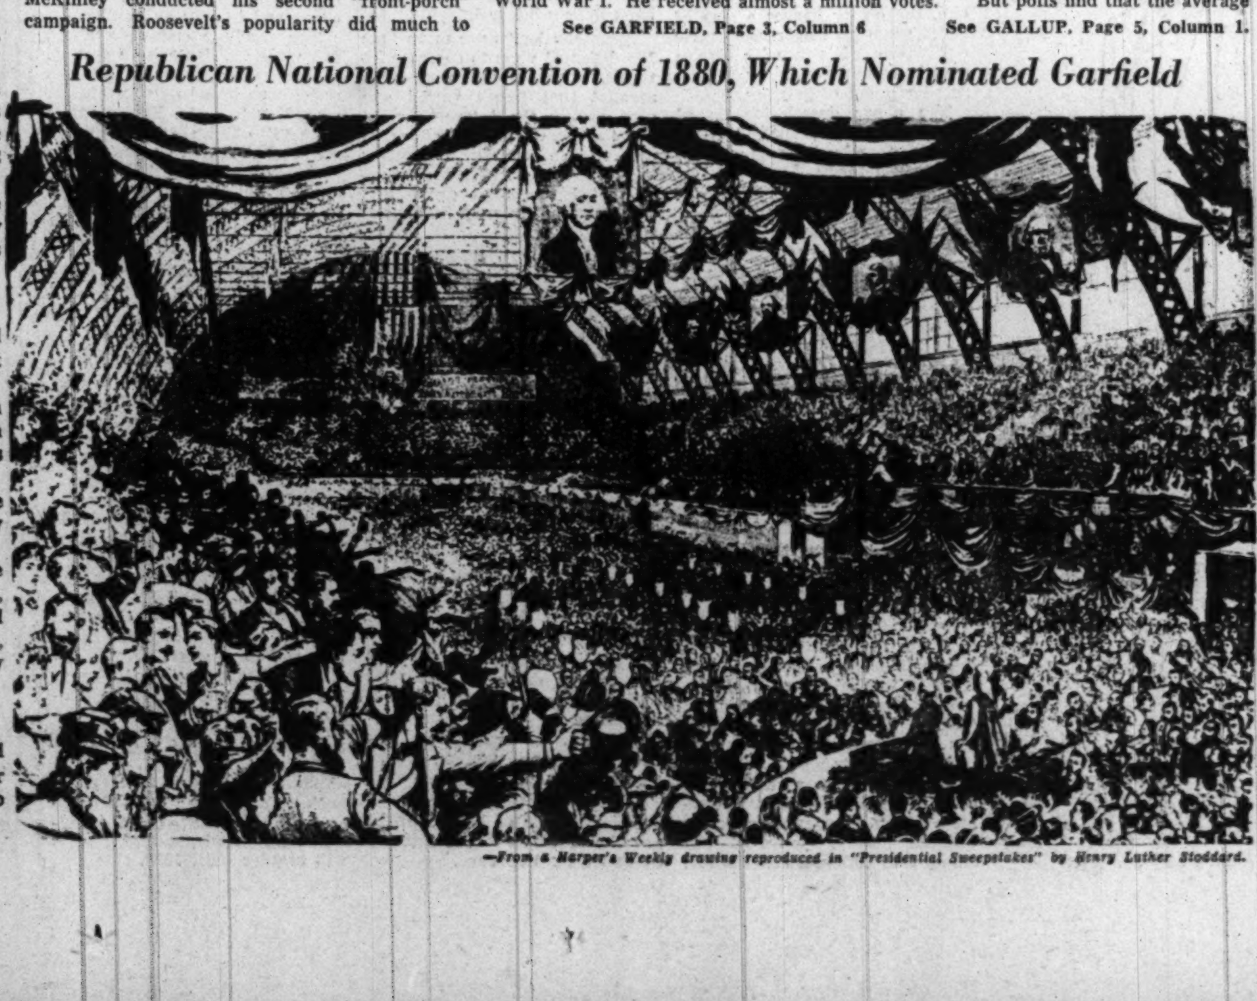
Republican National Convention of 1880, Which Nominated Garfield



—From a Harper's Weekly drawing reproduced in "Presidential Sweepstakes" by Henry Luther Stoddard.

Polk Was First 'Darkhorse'

Favorites Have Won 14 Times Out of 23

By Thomas J. Culhane

IN 14 out of 23 Republican conventions, the outstanding pre-convention choice for President has been chosen on the first ballot. But because of this year's hot contest between Dewey, Stassen and Taft, the prospects of a dark horse being nominated are considered better than usual.

The country's first dark horse nominated for the Presidency was Tennessee's James K. Polk. Although he had served as Speaker of the House of Representatives, Polk was little known to the general public, and he was given little chance of being nominated at Baltimore in May, 1844.

Martin Van Buren was the popular candidate. However, Van Buren had written a letter before the convention met authorizing the withdrawal of his name if it was necessary to preserve harmony. This swung his votes over to Polk.

Polk, favoring the immediate annexation of Texas to the United States, gained popularity rapidly and defeated Henry Clay for the Presidency.

Pierce Next Compromise

ONE of the outstanding dark horses of all time, Franklin Pierce, did not receive a single vote in the first 34 ballots in Baltimore, 1852, the battle being waged between Governor Cass of Michigan and James Buchanan of Pennsylvania, with some scattered votes being cast for Stephen A. Douglas and Samuel Houston. Then, suddenly, Virginia gave her 17 votes to Pierce, and on the forty-ninth ballot he received the nomination. His opponent in November was another Mexican War hero, Gen. Winfield Scott, whom he easily defeated.

Sixteen years later another dark horse—Gov. Horatio Seymour of New York—came from behind to win the nomination at the Democratic Convention in Tammany Hall on July 4, 1868. He was conceded to be a strong candidate, but he was not quite strong enough to defeat the popular U. S. Grant.

The first Republican dark horse nominated at the National convention at Chicago in June, 1880, Gen. James A. Garfield, Ohio statesman, was given the nomination after he had himself placed the name of John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, before the convention in a stirring speech.

President Hayes was not a candidate for reelection, but the party had an abundance of excellent presidential timber, and long before the convention met there were indications of a real battle. Former President Grant, who had encountered terrific opposition to a third term four years previous, was again entered in the race with a host of enthusiastic backers.

Senator James G. Blaine of Maine was second choice, with Sherman and Senator George F. Edmunds of Vermont running close behind the favorites. Twenty ballots were recorded the first day, following the next day to the thirty-fifth ballot, when Garfield, who had a solitary delegate from Pennsylvania from the start, broke through with 16 votes from Wisconsin and 27 from Indiana. On the next ballot State after State scrambled aboard the Garfield bandwagon.

"You shall crucify not mankind upon a cross of gold," the last words of a fiery speech delivered by a brilliant young orator from Nebraska, swept the 1896 Democratic Convention off its feet and produced the most famous dark horse of all time.

At that celebrated convention, William Jennings Bryan, just past 35, came out of the West and, after electrifying the delegates with his plea for free silver, won the nomination for President. William McKinley had been nominated by the Republican Party at St. Louis three weeks previously on a gold-standard ticket. The fight lasted just one round when the silver crowd crushed all opposition and the gold delegates were unseated.

Following the convention there were threats of forming a Democratic Gold Party ticket, but they did not materialize. Bryan, the Populistic-Democratic-Free Silver candidate, was defeated, however, by McKinley, the Republican gold candidate.

Now That War Is Over

Church-State Issue Resumes in Europe

By Jean Bird
Of the Economist of London

FOR THOSE who find an easy answer to Europe's problems in bread, more work and more dollars, events have once again upset neat calculations. The past six weeks have seen the Belgian Government fall and the French coalition teeter on the brink not because of food shortages, Communist-inspired strikes or runaway prices but as the result of a Catholic school dispute—the age old problem of who is going to bring up the children.

Should governments help the priesthood to do the job by giving State grants to Catholic schools? Or should State funds be reserved for nonreligious education only? Should parents who desire to give their children a Catholic education receive State aid in paying fees? For the moment there has been a compromise in both countries but no settlement.

The sudden crisis was an abrupt reminder to the non-Catholic world that in Europe the Church-State issue was not dead but only covered over, that it remained a live and bitter conflict as potentially damaging to the future of moderate governments as Molotov himself.

Harmony Has Faded

WHY DOES this specter now rise to dog and divide Socialist-Catholic coalitions that today rule most of western Europe?

One reason is that the glow of harmony which grew out of resistance to German occupation has faded. Under the Germans, political foes buried their differences in the common fight against the invader. For example, working alongside the Socialists and Communists in the French Resistance Movement was a vigorous group of leftwing Catholics who rejected the collaboration of many of their church leaders with Vichy. It was this group that after the Liberation organized the French Christian Democratic Party known as the Popular Republicans. Today, it is France's second largest party and the most powerful member of the government coalition. M. Bidault, the Foreign Minister who headed the entire French Resistance is its leader.

The men behind the new party laid the main emphasis not on Catholicism but on radicalism, on "Christianity" and "Democracy." So long as Catholicism was softpedaled and radicalism the mainspring of party policy, its leaders could work smoothly with the Socialists of the moderate left. For a time they did so—much to the surprise of those who know the historic role of Socialists. Today's Socialists are the heirs of Europe's democratic revolutionaries whose path to political freedom was for generations blocked by the alliance of monarchist landowners and the Catholic church.

Now, however, the Socialist-Catholic partnership shows signs of dissolying—with grave consequences for Europe. Explanations aren't hard to find. The three years since the Liberation have witnessed a steady change in the character of the Christian Democratic parties of France, Belgium and Italy. With a startling increase in party numbers the initial core of liberals has been swamped by a flux of rightwing conservatives. Simultaneously the liberal core is more and more subjected to pressure by politicos of the Catholic church who are determined to make the party serve church interests—usually conservative.

Socialist Parties Shrink

BY ITSELF this policy change endangered cooperation with the Socialists but it was accompanied by a radical alteration in party strength which brought even more trouble. Since the Liberation, Socialist parties have tended to shrink while the ranks of the Christian Democrats constantly swelled. As a result the senior partner naturally threw his weight about and the junior partner inevitably resented being pushed around. One Socialist puts the bitter reaction of his colleagues this way, "Christian Democrats make policy, Socialists keep workers quiet."

How long the Socialists can keep the workers happy under present conditions is the crucial question for both parties. On economic matters—wages, further nationalization, economic planning—the Socialist parties have already backed down all along the line. And with each surrender they have lost further working-class support to the Communists. Now they dare not risk more defections by agreeing to grant State subsidies to Catholic schools, an issue heavily overlaid with historic slogans.

The Socialist worker, particularly in France, views anticlericalism as the bulwark of the Republic. His parents fought the church as part of the struggle to free men's minds. He regards any encouragement of clerical domination over schools as a betrayal and as grounds for desertion to the extreme left wing. To many of the rank and file of the Socialist Parties, Moscow is a lesser evil than Rome.

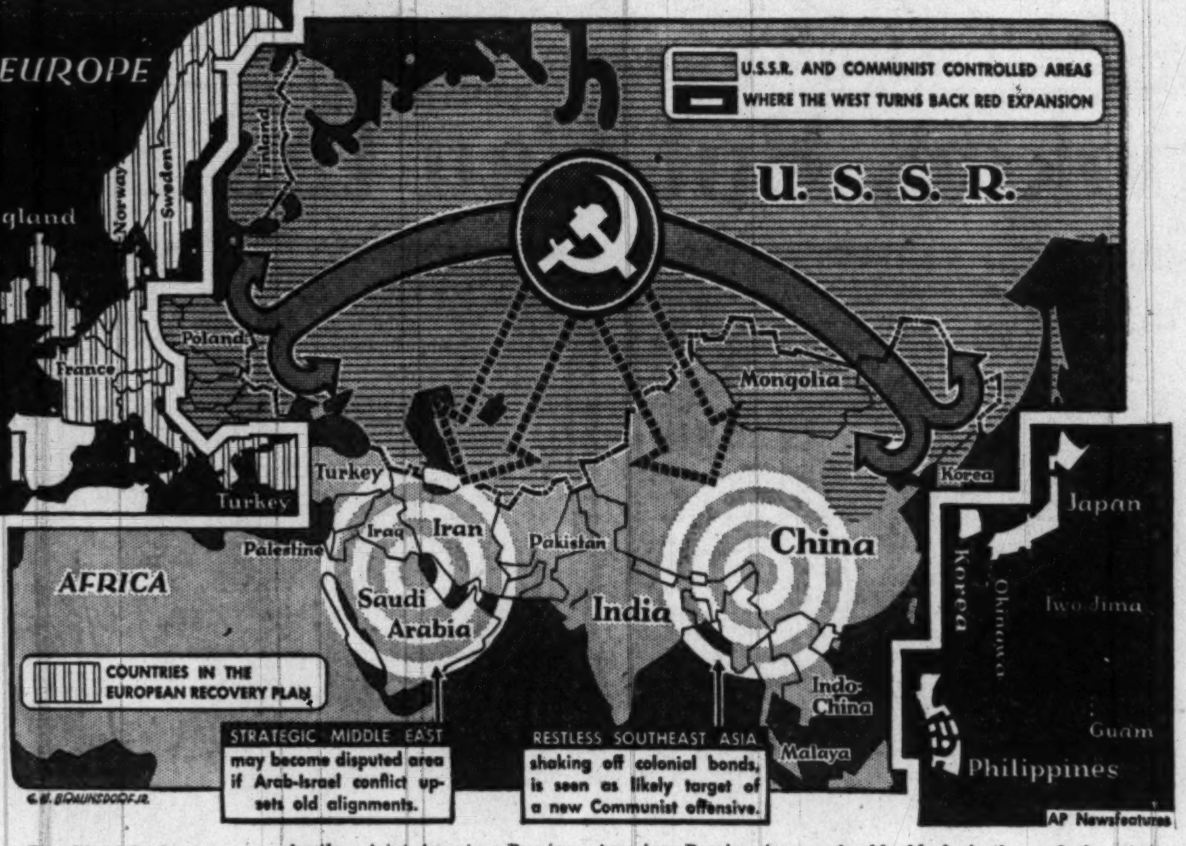
Moderates everywhere must hope that from this latest crisis the forces of democracy in Europe will draw this lesson: Their strength is not yet so great that they can afford to split. If the Communists are to be defeated, the democratically minded must close their ranks. For this reason a genuine mutual respect of Christian Democrats and Socialists is now a prime essential in the key countries of western Europe. That is why trivial as small matters like the Catholic school question may seem to such predominately non-Catholic nations as Britain and America, their importance in the struggle for western Europe cannot be overlooked.

Poles to Set Up Atom Study at Warsaw

Warsaw, June 19 (AP).—Poles plan to have an atomic research center working at the University of Warsaw within the next 10 months. Polish scientists say they hope to get most of the equipment needed for atomic studies from scientific firms in Switzerland.

The nation's leading physicists recently met in Warsaw and decided no time should be lost to keep Poland experimenting with the atom.

3 U. S.-Russian Hotspots Due to Simmer



STRATEGIC MIDDLE EAST may become disputed area if Arab-Israel conflict upsets old alignments.

RESTLESS SOUTHEAST ASIA shaking off colonial bonds, is seen as likely target of a new Communist offensive.

C. W. BOMHNSDORF JR.

AP Newsfeatures

By Sigrid Arne

STATE DEPARTMENT men think things will be quiet, at least for a while, in the three spots where Americans and Russians rub elbows most intimately—Trieste, Korea and Berlin.

They don't look for anything like a shooting war over any of the areas. None of them now presents more than a stalemate.

But a stalemate may mean that the growth of Communist-controlled areas has been stopped.

Here's how it stands by areas:

TRIESTE: This is the Adriatic port city which both Italy and Yugoslavia wanted in 1946 when the Allies wrote the Italian peace treaty. The United States backed Italy, and the USSR backed Yugoslavia.

The deadlock was broken when both agreed to make Trieste a free international zone, to be governed by a man chosen by the United Nations Security Council. From the end of the war on, Trieste has been occupied by Yugoslav troops in the south and British-Americans in the north. They were to get out after the governor was chosen and order secured.

But the Security Council has not agreed on a governor. The Russians have opposed all the candidates proposed by the western powers.

Then, this March, the United States said in effect that the Italian peace treaty terms for Trieste won't work and that therefore the city should be turned back to the Italians. At first Russia refused to comment and then called the American move "undemocratic."

Here is the situation in the Trieste area as some official observers see it:

1. On one side is Yugoslavia with a big army. On the other side is Italy, a one-time axis partner, now practically disarmed.
2. Suppose the governor were appointed and the occupation troops got out. Would the Yugoslavs take the city; the governor could appeal to the Security Council, but there the Russians could veto aid to Trieste.
3. But if the United States proposal to put Trieste back into Italy should go through, would the Yugoslavs want to fight a whole nation—Italy?

For the time being Trieste will probably remain a stalemate, with the troops remaining.

KOREA: This is the most uncertain area. Korea was freed from the Japanese in 1945, and shortly a joint American-Russian control was set up until the Koreans could form an independent government.

But up till now the Americans have never been able to get an agreement from the Russians on Korean elections. So at the last U. N. assembly the United States proposed and won a vote to send a U. N. commission to Korea to supervise elections. Russia boycotted the plan.

The elections were held on May 10, but only in the southern—the United States zone. A Korean assembly has started work. The Russians continue to occupy the northern half of the nation and have sent no delegates to the new government in the United States zone.

Under the U. N. resolution the American-Russian troops should get out when the new Korean government requests it and the Koreans can do it when they consider it "practicable."

Already Korean leaders have voiced hope their "American friends" will stick around, so it may be some time before it appears "practicable" to the Koreans for American troops to leave. The United States Government has said nothing on the subject.

However, if the Americans stay, there is another stalemate.

BERLIN: Slices of this city have been run by the big four—the United States, Britain, France and Russia. But the city is an island inside the Russian zone of occupation.

Recently the Russians put blocks in the road of getting supplies in and out for the three western sections of Berlin. Moscow didn't explain, but western diplomats said it looked as though the Russians were taking steps to force them out and take over Berlin.

The American commander, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, has said the Americans are there to stay. He is on solid treaty ground. At Potsdam, Stalin signed an agreement that all four powers would sit in Berlin.

But the Allied Control Council for all of Germany has bogged down. It hasn't met since March, when the Russian delegate walked out in a huff. The council's stalemate means that plans to unify Germany must wait.

Like 'Rats Leaving Ship'

China's Wealth Flees Despite Rigid Controls

SHANGHAI, June 19 (AP).—Torrents of wealth are pouring out of China in what economists here describe as a "wholesale flight of capital."

A Shanghai trader said bitterly: "The rats are leaving the ship."

In any event the most rigid controls over money movement fail to stop the exodus. Anybody with wealth tries to get at least a part of it into some safe place.

This flight of capital has been in progress for a long time, but recent developments—including the Communist successes in the north—have speeded it up.

Every day by plane, ship, donkey cart and back pack great amounts of money move south to Shanghai. Since the movement is entirely illegal no one knows for sure just how great it is. If the money reaches Shanghai in the form of Chinese dollars, it goes into the black market in an effort to convert itself into United States dollars or gold—anything sound. This converted wealth then either moves abroad by means of checks or drafts, also purchased on the black market, which are mailed out.

Affects Dollar Value

ALL this has helped drive the black market value of the American dollar to well over one million to 1.

If conversion into sound money proves too costly in Shanghai, the movement continues to Canton where another effort is made to convert. In Canton the quantity of Hongkong dollars is fairly plentiful and is gobbled up regularly by this fugitive wealth of the north. These Hongkong dollars are sent—again by illegal means—out of the country.

The general opinion is that most of this wealth finally reaches Hongkong, British crown colony on China's south coast. Some of it enters the flourishing Hongkong trade and some simply goes into the banks. Whatever the end, the owner heaves a sigh of relief when his funds reach their destination. His wealth is in sound money and, by China standards, out of harm's way.

The above description, is of course, an oversimplification. Wealth travels in many ways, shapes and forms.

For example, scores of industrial plants in the lower Yangtze valley have been moved to Hongkong. It has been estimated that industrial capital fleeing China for Hongkong, either in the form of money or factories since the end of the Japanese war will exceed 100 million Hongkong dollars (25 million dollars).

Six Chinese cotton mills now are being built in Hongkong. Several Chinese silk mills, soap-making, enamel and thermos bottle plants already have moved there.

A Flight of Capital

ALL THIS represents a flight of capital not from the Communist-threatened north, but from the south, which is supposed to be a government stronghold.

Besides the reverses in the civil war, the mountains of printing-press money in China also frighten wealth abroad.

Who sends this wealth out of China? Everybody, almost, who has any wealth. Some say even the Communists.

There has been a rumor that the Communists have sold surpluses from conquered areas for Chinese money, converted the money into United States dollars, and sent them to Russia to buy supplies.

Not much credence is put in that story. The Reds need everything they can get themselves, and there are no surpluses. And, anyway, they are in no position to engage in big scale black marketing.

There probably is a trickle of such traffic, but the money more likely goes to Hongkong or the United States. The Reds probably have a few nest eggs abroad themselves.

Other rumors, which may have a small gain of fact, tell of similar deals by corrupt Nationalists.

Some are even supposed to have sold American military supplies, probably to the Communists, converted the receipts into United States dollars and spirited them out of China. Again people in a position to know think this traffic is no more than a trickle.

But the exodus of personal and industrial capital which financed the commerce of China in better days is no trickle. It's a flood.

Banks Figure Up Interest by 100 Methods

By Sam Dawson
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, June 19.—Next to clipping coupons or getting money from home, one of the most pleasant of sedentary sports is figuring up the interest on a savings account.

But most of the nearly 60 million persons in this country who have savings accounts, totaling $56,300,000,000, probably figure it thus:

"I have $100 in the bank now; at 1 per cent interest the bank must owe me $1."

Actually, the average depositor will get only between 61 and 92 cents, depending on how his bank figures interest.

American banks use more than 100 different ways to compute interest. Only in the case of an account that hasn't varied one cent during the interest period can the simple method above be used. The average depositor makes deposits and withdrawals, so that his account grows and contracts, and interest figuring is a major chore.

A drive for simplification is being waged quietly by a committee of the American Bankers Association. It reports that 86 per cent of the banks are now using one of seven methods.

Although maintaining an air of impartiality, it shows a strong leaning to the method now ranking fourth, with only 7.76 per cent of the banks using it.

All seven methods are based on the cardinal objective: to penalize the in-and-out saver and benefit the true saver. The No. 4 method computes interest on the lowest balance for a six-month period. This involves the least amount of computation. It also saves the bank money another way.

Applying a sample record of one saver's deposits and withdrawals over a six-month period, and using 1 per cent as the interest rate, the committee shows how much each method would pay the customer.

The most popular method, used by 37 per cent of banks, would pay the customer $4.505 interest on this typical account.

Jungle 'Jupiter'

Machetes' War Record Boosts Sales

By George Tucker

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—One day 108 years ago the captain of a Yankee clipper walked into the office of a Connecticut axe manufacturer and laid a heavy wooden knife on the desk.

"Can you duplicate that in steel?"

The man behind the desk was Samuel W. Collins who, with his brother Dave, 14 years earlier had founded an axe-making firm in an old grist mill on the Farmington River, 15 miles out of Hartford.

Sam hefted the crude instrument. It had a 22-inch blade.

"In the West Indies the natives call that thing a machete. They say you couldn't get 2 feet into the jungle without one," the captain volunteered.

"Sure," said Sam. "Easy as pie."

That was the beginning of a vast trade in the jungles and on the plantations of almost every tropical country in the world.

5 Million Made

LAST YEAR the Collins Co. manufactured more than five million machetes. L. B. Hough, a vice president of the company, says the correct pronunciation is "ma-shet-tes," with the accent on the middle syllable.

They were regulation equipment for the Army and Navy during the war.

Prior to the war the Collins Company was the only machete manufacturer in the United States. Its principal competitors were German and English.

"The large increase in the domestic demand for this tool is due particularly to the thousands of soldiers who used them in the Pacific," a company spokesman says.

Many believe the machete opened the tropical world to trade and commerce and will keep it open.

In some 35 countries it is almost solely responsible for all coffee, chicle, rubber, sugar, cocoa and banana cultivation.

The machete comes in about 400 varieties. Some have curved, Oriental blades, others straight and either broad or slim blades, according to taste. Blades range from 18 to 22 inches in length.

A recent report on customs in various countries said that workers on coffee plantations preferred 22-inch blades that curved thickly at the top. The report added that natives in the West Indies wouldn't be caught dead with a machete whose blade wasn't painted a gaudy red.

Indispensable Weapon

IN WAR the machete is a formidable weapon; in peace equally indispensable as something with which to build homes, shave, slaughter cattle, trim tooth-picks and hack away the encroaching jungle from struggling produce.

Dealers in the tropics say the life of an average machete is six to eight months of "constant use," which means eight hours a day of hacking bamboo, or any other chore essential to jungle life. At the end of this time, the average machete is worn to a thin ribbon of steel.

Largest markets in Latin countries are Colombia, Mexico, Venezuela and Brazil.

Revision Not Needed

Give U. N. the Chance To Work, Say Leaders

By Adelaide Kerr
Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer.

LAKE SUCCESS, June 19 (AP).—Your worry because the United Nations has not lived up to all your hopes will not be resolved by revising the Charter now, in the opinion of the men who head the Big Five delegations.

Nor do they think that a new organization is the answer.

Delegation heads of some smaller powers favor revision, although they do not necessarily regard it as a panacea for all ills.

Their comment was given in reply to an inquiry by the Associated Press. Heads of nine U. N. delegations were asked what needs to be done to obtain an effective world organization for peace.

The men who grapple daily with U. N.'s problems were requested to answer any or all of three questions:

Do you favor revision of the United Nations Charter and, if so, what kind?

Do you think a new organization is required and, if so, what kind?

Have you any other suggestion?

Replies Are Similar

ALL replied. Their solutions varied, but one theme ran through them all: "Stand fast and man the oars."

Here is the gist of their comment:

"I do not favor revision of the United Nations Charter," said Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang of China. "It has not had time enough for a trial. The difficulties that we now face are due to the deep conflict between the USSR and the United States; they are not due to defects in the Charter."

Said Alexandre Parodi of France:

"Only three years have passed since the United Nations Charter was adopted at San Francisco. Three years after the proclamation of the Constitution of the United States, was it the efficient instrument that it is today? And yet no premature reform occurred to alter its terms. Those whose job it was to apply it simply strove, by their daily action, to compensate for the gaps of a text, whose arrangements could not solve ahead of time the multitudinous problems arising from the political life in the United States. May we be inspired by as great a wisdom!"

From Sir Alexander Cadogan of the United Kingdom:

"The United Nations was intended to function after the foundations of peace had been established by the conclusion of peace treaties and with the joint support of the great powers. A revision of the Charter would not remove the difficulties which inevitably arise from the absence of peace settlements or the minimum of cooperation which is essential to the success of such an international organization.

"No new world organization could be created with the consent of all the powers necessary to make it a success, and any other organization without such support could not be devised so as to avoid the difficulties which at present prevent the United Nations from satisfactory achievement of its purposes. World opinion should concentrate upon removing the obstacles which have prevented the United Nations from making the progress which was hoped for and not delude itself into thinking that formal changes, e. g., in voting procedure, are all that the United Nations needs."

Both Answer "No"

WARREN AUSTIN of the United States, and Andrei Gromyko of the USSR, both said "No" to questions of revision and a new organization. But Senator Austin has said that the big five previously considered revision concerning the use of the veto on matters of peaceful settlement and petitions for membership and that the United States was the only one willing to amend the Charter in this respect. He declared that a feasible time to amend the Charter in this respect has not arrived.

"What is necessary is fundamental adjustment between east and west," Austin said. "This will have to be undertaken at the suitable time."

To strengthen U. N. Austin favored such acts as: (1) the European Recovery Program, (2) strengthening the military posture of the United States, thus strenthening her ability to protect international law, (3) strengthening the military posture of the United States' friends and, (4) promoting associations of like-minded states within the U. N. framework.

(The only useful revision of the Charter would be one undertaken with the support of a two thirds majority of members of the United Nations, including five permanent members of the Security Council, at a later date when the United Nations has had some experience of working under the conditions which it was intended to operate.)

Senor Jose Arce of the Argentine delegation, president of the General Assembly, advocated calling a general conference to give all U. N. members a chance to discuss and decide whether the moment is ripe for reviewing the Charter.

He said, if he should represent Argentina at such a conference, he would advocate the review with the aim of eliminating or diminishing the veto power to prevent its operation on questions of peaceful settlement and the admission, suspension or expulsion of members.

Senor Arce declared, "it must be discovered whether or not the time has come for eliminating or amending (the veto) or . . . if it is to be retained until 1955 in conformity with Article 109, Paragraph 3, which provides that a general conference is to be held in that year." Senor Arce does not think a new organization is required.

New Zealand's Sir Carl Berendsen, doughty battler for the rights of smaller powers, strongly favors revision of the Charter to eliminate the one veto power. "(It) stultifies every possibility of the United Nations' becoming . . . an effective system of collective security and restricts it entirely to the functions of a 'talking shop,'" he said.

Favorites Have Won 14 Times Out of 23

A voice from a sick bed nominated a dark horse at the national convention of the Republican Party held in Chicago in 1920.

Warren G. Harding of Ohio was named immediately after Senator Boise Penrose of Pennsylvania, old war horse of the GOP, sent word to his lieutentant, W. Harry Baker, that it "would be pleasing."

The favorites at post time were Gen. Leonard Wood, Governor Lowden and Senator Johnson. The dark horses entered were Hughes, Knox, Hoover, Sproul, Poindexter and Harding. When Lowden and Sproul released their respective delegates, the Harding landslide was on. On the tenth ballot Harding was nominated with 674½ votes, and at the November election he decisively defeated the Democratic candidate, James Cox.

History was made at the 1924 Democratic National Convention in Madison Square Garden, New York City, when John W. Davis, West Virginia's dark-horse entry, was nominated.

No previous convention had ever presented such an array of formidable dark horses. Others besides Davis included Albert C. Ritchie, Newton Baker, Carter Glass, George S. Silzer, James M. Cox, Homer Cummings and David F. Houston.

William McAdoo of California and Al Smith of New York were heavy favorites as the entries left the paddock. Following in order were Oscar Underwood of Alabama and Sam Ralston of Indiana sporting the Tom Taggart silks.

California's favorite son was out in front up until the eighty-sixth ballot, when Smith forged ahead to lead by seven votes. Turning into the stretch McAdoo again led the field on the ninety-fourth ballot. The 103d ballot started off with a few scattering votes for Davis until the Georgia delegation, which had gone along with McAdoo was reached. They voted 27 for Davis and 1 for Smith. Before the balloting was completed there was a mad rush to Davis.

On motion of Tom Taggart, John W. Davis, former Ambassador to the Court of St. James', was nominated by acclamation.

Delegates Do Picking

A recent poll conducted by Elmo Roper, who makes the Fortune magazine surveys, shows significantly that if Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower were a presidential candidate, he could win over the top candidates in either the Republican or Democratic Parties. Against Truman, that poll showed, Eisenhower would get twice as many votes, even with Wallace on the ballot as a third-party candidate. Other polls also show Eisenhower with significant power.

With Truman, Vandenberg and Wallace as candidates, the Roper Poll showed Truman would receive 37.4 per cent of the vote, Vandenberg 35.3 per cent and Wallace 6.9.

But as an entirely separate clew to the GOP convention outcome—and all public-opinion polls of GOP voters' choice to the contrary—50 of the Nation's leading political writers in an election poll conducted by Newsweek Magazine forecast by a large margin that Vandenberg will be the Republican presidential nominee.

Vandenberg Favored

THEY gave Vandenberg 28 votes to 15 for Dewey, 6 for Taft, 1 for Martin, and none for the other possibilities, insofar as their first choices were concerned. Their most likely GOP vice presidential nominees were Stassen, Dewey and Warren, in that order.

In a poll of 815 daily newspaper editors, conducted by the United States News and World Report, the editors agreed with the reporters, which indicates unanimity at least among newsmen. Of the 815, 417 predicted a victory for Vandenberg, followed by Dewey with 195 votes.

Democrats in '24 Took 103 Tallies

By Bob Considine

PHILADELPHIA, June 19 (INS). The Republicans expect to go through six or eight ballots before they decide on their presidential nominee. But some observers predict that it will take considerably longer.

There is no chance, however, that the convention will come even close to challenging the unenviable record established at Madison Square Garden in July, 1924, when the Democrats ruined their chances of capitalizing on the frauds of the Harding Administration.

Their chances were ruined by a 103-ballot fiasco which, after three bitter weeks, nominated John W. Davis, Wall Street lawyer from West Virginia who had been Wilson's Ambassador to Britain and Solicitor General of the United States.

In his engaging and enlightening book on party conventions, "Presidential Sweepstakes" (just published by Putnam and reviewed on page 7 of this section today), the late Henry Luther Stoddard, who covered conventions as far back as Grant's time, shakes a lot of dusty memories of that 1924 embroglio.

Political Hara-Kiri

WHAT THE Democrats did that year was commit a form of political hara-kiri. Cal Coolidge, the White House incumbent, had yet to make his first "eee-conomy" speech and become the symbol of the country's prosperity. The malodorous Harding mess was still in the public's nostrils. This was the year when the politicos agreed that "any Democrat can win."

But this was the dawn of the radio era, and for three torrid weeks the linen of the Democrats was broadcast through the country. The people for the first time learned of the grievous internal dissension in the party, and the end result, of course, was that Davis was trounced in the November elections, though Coolidge hardly moved off his porch.

The two main wheels of the 1924 convention were, as you'll remember, Alfred E. Smith and William Gibbs McAdoo, the latter called the "crown prince" of the Wilson Administration.

Smith's chances were dealt several blows just before the convention. His political adviser, and strong party whip, Charles Murphy, died six weeks before the first gavel sounded at the Garden. He was openly opposed to the Ku Klux Klan and that caused certain grumblings in the Southern States. He also was a wet.

But one of the greatest demonstrations in convention history was touched off when his name was placed in nomination by his then friend and political disciple, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Roosevelt, dramatically carried to the dais, and braced (it was his first public appearance since he was stricken with infantile paralysis) wrung his first wild applause for Smith by booming:

"On our Governor for over 20 years in public office the white light of publicity has pitilessly beaten, and revealed only spotless integrity." But it was his conclusion that remained in the public mind:

"He has the power to strike at error and wrong-doing that makes his adversaries quail before him. He has a personality that carries to every hearer not only the sincerity but the righteousness of what he says. He is the 'happy warrior' of the political battlefield."

The demonstration that followed lasted an hour and 15 minutes. There had never been one like it before, and none has reached its decible content since.

On the first of the 103 ballots, however, McAdoo polled 431 votes to Smith's 241. Davis got 31.

After 38 ballots the old and broken William Jennings Bryan, by that time a Florida delegate, rose in his place and spoke at length. After a time the delegates began booing the old man, bringing tears to his eyes, and he ended his long and rambling speech by indorsing McAdoo.

On the ninety-fourth ballot, Roosevelt announced from the floor that Smith would withdraw if McAdoo also stepped aside, McAdoo refused. After 99 ballots they were tied at 353 each, and it was then that McAdoo's spokesman gave his supporters permission to pull away from him.

When they did, they moved toward Davis, not Smith, put Charles Bryan on the ticket as Vice President, and limped home. They had taken three weeks and had paraded their indecision before all the voters in the land.

"The nomination isn't worth a nickel," one boss said sadly, and, as it turned out, he had overestimated its value.

Convention Headliners

THE twenty-fourth Republican National Convention will be called to order by Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee. He will preside until the temporary chairman and keynote speaker, Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois, takes the gavel.

Reece, a former Congressman from a strong Republican district in eastern Tennessee, has headed the national committee since 1946.

Reece, 58, was a member of the House for 20 years and has long been considered the head of his party in Tennessee . . . Has been a caustic critic of Truman Administration . . . Farmborn, he is a banker-lawyer who taught economics in his youth.

1100 Speeches

KEYNOTER Dwight Green is a prolific speech-maker. He has spoken in 32 States and has made some 1100 speeches since he became Governor in 1941.

A "favorite son" presidential candidate, 51-year-old Governor Green will be supported in the early balloting by most of his State delegation's 56 votes. He has been frequently mentioned as a vice presidential possibility.

Green is a "rock-ribbed" Republican who attacks "Democratic bungling" of foreign affairs, housing, communism and the Palestine situation.

As a young lawyer in the criminal division of the Internal Revenue Bureau, he helped prosecute and convict Al Capone of income tax evasion. He stepped into Illinois political spotlight in 1939 when he made a strong but unsuccessful race against Edward J. Kelly for Mayor of Chicago.

3 Times for Joe

SPEAKER JOSEPH W. MARTIN, JR., will be permanent chairman of the convention for the third consecutive time . . . This record equals that established by another Republican from Massachusetts. The elder Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was permanent chairman in 1900, 1908 and 1920.

Martin, who presides over the House, will wield the gavel when the convention gets down to the main business of adopting a party platform and balloting for presidential and vice presidential nominees.

Martin himself is a prominent "dark horse" possibility for the presidential nomination. A 63-year-old bachelor, he has been in Congress 24 years. An amiable, practical politician, he is rated high as a peacemaker in intraparty quarrels.

Paid Disciples

Hell-Raisers Work for $1

Darting, dancing, sign-carrying Roosevelt enthusiasts swept up an oldster with a be-badged hat as the name of the late President was placed in nomination in 1944

BOTH political parties, as usual, will make use of professional demonstrators. We have not yet discovered whether inflation has hit this calling. In previous conventions they worked for a buck a demonstration.

The pro, more often than not, is a bum who happens to be loitering in the neighborhood of a convention hall and is well-scrubbed enough not to appear conspicuous when called upon to strut his stuff.

He and his fellow pros swell the sound and size of those carefully planned "spontaneous" outbursts which follow the nomination of each candidate. Along with the regular disciples of the candidate in question, the pros are marshalled in a corridor just off the main floor of the convention hall. They stand around, smoking free cigarettes and drinking coffee out of paper cups until their cue.

Then they pick up their banners or New Year's Eve noise-makers, straighten up and march down the hall. The permanent chairman lets them caterwaul up and down the aisles for 5 or 10 minutes and then begins to whack his gavel on the sounding board.

This is a signal for them to raise more hell, which they promptly do. And after another five minutes the chairman gives up in despair, sits down and talks until they run out of steam. The pros fade away and wait a new assignment and a new candidate.

Speaking of Indians, if any appear here as delegates and cannot find a hotel room, Philadelphia has a park in which they can pitch their tepees.

No kidding, it is a public garden set aside in the early days of the Republic for itinerant Redmen who traveled with their homes on the backs of their squaws. It is still here, and the law has never been amended.

A Handy Primer

Radio Offers 'Briefing' On Electoral System

By John Crosby

ON ITS "LIVING-1948" series this afternoon at 4:35 p. m., the National Broadcasting Company again will offer a program called "Notebook for Convention Listeners" and it might be advisable for all of us to latch on to it in preparation for the great event about to take place in Philadelphia.

Unless you know a lot more about national conventions than I do, this program will make a very handy primer for the Republican National Convention which will be more thoroughly covered by radio and television than any other in history.

The "notebook" opens with five questions: How come political conventions? How clean is their history? What goes on there? Do they really reflect the will of the people? Do they permit us to select our best leaders? The first three questions are answered fairly well. The last two are sidestepped.

A Mason Was Named

THE PROGRAM traces the history of our various systems of nominating Presidential candidates—first by the electoral college as provided in the Constitution, later by caucus, and still later, briefly, by State Legislatures. The first convention was held in 1830 by the anti-Masonic Party (which nominated a Mason).

The broadcast has some illuminating things to say about the first "dark horse" (James K. Polk in 1844), some of the shenanigans used by Lincoln's supporters to win the Republican nomination; the phrase "the smoke filled room" and where it came from; a bit of Bryan's "cross of gold" speech and actual recordings of the "We Want Willkie" chant which stampeded the 1940 Republican convention.

There are also a few cynical observations on how Philadelphia got the nod from both major parties this year, how delegates are chosen, and what can be expected in a keynote address. Altogether it's a rather thorough little curtain-raiser.

The actual convention coverage by radio and television will be appallingly complete and far too excessive to go into in detail here. William Brooks, vice president of N.B.C. who is in charge of that network's coverage, boasts with considerable reason that N.B.C. will report every detail, "including what the candidates had for breakfast." And, of course, there will be commentaries about the effect of the breakfasts on the candidates' digestions and political fortunes from a hundred lungs.

Just to give you some idea, there will be almost 700 newsmen, commentators, technicians, editors and executives of the four radio networks and independent radio and television stations on hand to broadcast the convention. Both television and radio will be pooled affairs but each network will have its own facilities also,

All networks will have some of their best reporters wandering around the floor, interviewing candidates, floor managers, and heads of delegations. Mutual will have walkie-talkies on the convention floor. Virtually every major news program, including N.B.C.'s foreign broadcasts, will originate in Philadelphia.

It Was Garfield on 36th in '80

The first Republican nominating convention was held in Philadelphia in 1856. California's Gen. John C. Fremont, Indian fighter, was nominated on the first ballot and the convention lasted only one day. Some convention delegates from the Far West carried long rifles, wore white beaver hats with patented ventilators for summertime cooling.

The first Democratic convention met at Baltimore, May 21, 1832 and nominated President Andrew Jackson for a second term. Before 1832 aspirants merely announced their candidacies or nominations were made at caucuses of leading citizens.

Prior to 1936, the Democratic convention always required a two thirds vote for nomination. The rule was changed to a simple majority vote at the 1936 convention which nominated President Franklin Roosevelt for a second term.

Due to the two-thirds vote requirement, the Democrats have had several longer balloting contests than the Republicans. Longest of all was the 1924 battle in New York City when John W. Davis was nominated on the 103d ballot to end a nine-day deadlock between William G. McAdoo and Alfred E. Smith.

In 1860 the Democrats were deadlocked for 57 ballots in Charleston, S. C., "city of secession and Southern chivalry." When the convention adjourned to Baltimore, Stephen Douglas of Illinois was nominated on the fifty-ninth ballot.

Many Southerners withdrew from the Democratic organization because of the fight over a slavery plank in the platform. They nominated John C. Breckinridge of Kentucky.

One of the strangest convention developments arose in 1872 when the Democrats nominated Republican Horace Greeley. Greeley also was the nominee of the liberal Republicans, who were opposed to the Grant Administration.

Greeley's own New York Tribune said: "The man, who now has received the highest honor of the Democratic Party, a few years ago would have been hanged to the nearest lamp post if he entered South Carolina or Georgia."

Old Connie Mack Is City's Favorite

PHILADELPHIA, June 19 (INS). He won't get a vote in the conventions here, but Philadelphia's favorite son is chipper old (84) Connie Mack, owner and manager of the surprising Athletics ball club.

He came here nearly 50 years ago when he and a handful of then aging ball players, plus a money man or two, created the American League out of thin air and populated it with contract-jumping National leaguers.

Old Connie is a physical marvel. For about 65 years of playing and managing he has looked too frail to weather more than a gentle breeze. Some of the atrocious teams he has had since the early 1930's alone would have been enough to have driven an ordinary man to a premature grave.

But to this day (he happens to have fashioned an excellent team this year, mainly out of spit and baling wire) he makes the exhausting trip to training camp, leads his team tens of thousands of miles around the circuit each season, climbs out of Pullman berths and rushes to hotels in the early mornings, works for hours each day in draughty dugouts and comes back for more. He has no intention of quitting.

Miss Ruth Giles, 1830 17th st. nw. will be a soloist at the Republican convention on June 23.

This is Mrs. Dudley C. Hay of Detroit, secretary of the GOP convention—the first woman of either party ever to handle such a job. She has set up shop in the Bellevue Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia.

Senatorial Fiasco

The filibuster is such a commonplace senatorial phenomenon that preadjournment days would probably seem strange without a talking bout. Yet the effort to substitute wind, noise and tedium for sound arguments and an orderly counting of votes becomes more disgusting with the passing years. There was a time when completely unlimited debate in the Senate was a symbol of free and unhurried democracy. It is that no longer. Today the business of the Senate has been multiplied to many times the volume attained a few decades ago. Under the current pressure to handle momentous items of legislative business with dispatch the filibuster is everywhere recognized as intolerable, except in certain circles within the Senate itself.

With the abolition of fixed adjournment dates, moreover, the purpose for which Senators usually filibuster has changed. Once it was possible to block important legislation by holding the floor during the last hours before the session expired. In Friday's performance Senators Taylor and Langer probably had no real hope of talking the draft legislation into oblivion. Their filibuster became a demagogic dramatization of their opposition. They were bidding for the limelight and attempting to divert consideration of the issue from the intellectual to the emotional sphere. That seems to have been characteristic of filibusters in recent years.

Senators may well reflect on the outcome of this gabfest. Conferees on the draft bill met unofficially while the filibuster was going on and brought out a stiffer draft bill than had been expected. The Senate overwhelmingly approved that bill. It calls for the induction of men from 19 through 25 for 21 months of service, after an interval of three months in which recruiting drives will be stepped up. There is good reason to believe that the conferees were influenced in stiffening the bill by the fact that obstructionists were trying to defeat the will of Congress and the people. In other words, the filibuster probably had an adverse effect upon the cause for which the filibusterers were contending.

That boomerang effect cannot be relied upon, however, to discourage obstructionists in the future. Demagogues will continue to use this device so long as a tolerant people and a tradition-bound Senate permit it. The amazing thing is that it has persisted so long after all excuse for it has passed and the Senate is keenly aware of the contempt which filibusters bring down upon its head.

Legislative Standard

The thanks that Secretary Marshall rendered to the House Foreign Affairs Committee under Chairman Eaton were well deserved. He left them a parting word of significance. Peace, he said, will always be endangered by desertion of firmness and preparedness. In both respects Mr. Marshall has had good support from the House Committee, though the work of that committee has been undermined sometimes by want of support by other committees. The notable example, of course, was the Marshall Plan. The abuses practiced by the Taber Committee were doubtless in the minds of the members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs when they indited the following passage in their report on the U. N. Participation Act:

> . . . the House—the legislative body most closely representative of the people of the Nation—has a peculiar responsibility.
> It was apparent to the membership of the committee, as it must have been to the other members of the House, in the debates on the Foreign Aid Act of 1947 and the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948, that the responsibility for the purse as it relates to foreign policy cannot be separated from the root and substance of foreign policy. The nature of the world commitments and the world aspirations undertaken by this Nation cannot be considered in a compartment separate from the concrete steps necessary to fulfill those commitments and to realize those aspirations . . . it is incumbent upon the House, and the Committee on Foreign Affairs in particular, to exercise leadership in the endeavor to resolve the contradictions and to clarify the confusions before the American people in their earnest wish for a stable world.

To which the reading public will emit a fervent Amen! That the House has not risen to the duty outlined by Representative Eaton's committee is all too obvious. The "confusions" are much more in House conduct than in the public mind. Perhaps the first effort to restore order in the House will come from the committees which are constantly being affronted by the Appropriations Committee. But the real remedy awaits the setting up of a majority policy committee in line with the La Follette-Monroney recommendations.

Matters Of Convention

There was a curious atmosphere in Washington last week, as doubtless you noticed for yourself, if you were in the vicinity of Capitol Hill. In some ways it resembled the atmosphere of a penitentiary warden's office about an hour before the hanging, in others it suggested the atmosphere of the household of the bride's parents on the night before the wedding. The explanation, of course, was that the Republican National Convention, at which from present indications the next President of the United States will be chosen, was in process of convening at Philadelphia. It will be followed, as you know, by the Democratic National Convention, which will renominate Mr. Truman, though probably not without a violent explosion from the Southern delegates, and then—unless some sort of backstage negotiation of which we heard nothing has been taking place—by the Third Party of fellow travelers and assorted mugwumps which is to nominate Mr. Henry Wallace. Thus the members of Congress soared through the last days of legislative activitiy with their minds on Philadelphia, and the sovereign people in whose name it was all being done prepared themselves for the quadrennial debauch of bombast, confusion and bewilderment.

The circuslike character of national conventions, called for the ostensibly solemn purpose of recommending one member of the party as the future head of state and governed by well-defined procedures, was explained more than 60 years ago by Lord Bryce. He attributed it, correctly we believe, to the inordinately large number of delegates chosen for the purpose and to the presence of vast crowds of visitors. "This host, larger than the army with which the Greeks conquered at Marathon, has an issue of the highest and most exciting nature to decide . . . If you wish to realize the passionate eagerness of an American convention, take the House of Commons or the French Chamber during a division which is to decide the fate of a ministry and a policy, and raising the numbers present twentyfold imagine the excitement twentyfold hotter . . . The contrast . . . is perhaps most marked in this: that in Parliament the contest is between two parties, in an American convention between the adherents of different leaders belonging to the same party. We might have expected that in the more democratic country more would turn on principles, less on men. It is exactly the other way. The struggle in a convention is over men, not over principles."

Since Bryce's time, of course, the number of persons attending a political convention has been vastly multiplied, and the radio has enabled the almost-hysterical tension and excitement that attend a close contest among candidates to be communicated to the whole country. The crowd psychology which pervades national political conventions is as much a disruptive as a unifying force and more than once a convention has utterly destroyed the chances of success of the party which convoked it. The bitterness and animosities engendered in the Democratic convention of 1924, to take a fairly recent example, have not wholly disappeared after 20 years.

The national convention is not an integral part of the American system. It can scarcely be said to have existed before 1831. Interestingly enough, the method of nominating candidates by national convention was the innovation of a third-party movement, the Anti-Masons, who assembled at Baltimore to name William Wirt for President and Amos Ellmaker for Vice President. In the following year the example was followed by the Democrats in renominating Andrew Jackson and by the Whigs in nominating Henry Clay. It is probably more than coincidence that since the adoption of this system for choosing presidential candidates with a few exceptions, and these not very happy ones, have been remarkable mainly for their mediocrity.

Universal Civil Service

At the commencement exercises of the University of Virginia, David E. Lilienthal broached an idea as sensible as it is unconventional—the idea of a kind of universal civil service for "every man and woman to whom this country has given the high privilege of a college education." He would not, of course, draft college graduates into public life by law. He suggests merely that educational advantagement imposes obligations to the society and that, indeed, the society can survive in a period of such troubled complexity as our own only if the advantaged voluntarily discharge their obligation.

"This period," he said, "will not only call for steadfastness and faith but for great skills in self-government, great judgment and open-mindedness in the development of public policies, and creativeness in all the arts of government. In these circumstances we must summon all of our talents for citizenship, for self-government, for public service, as we chart our course through these dark waters . . . In the next three decades, I urge that every educated person who is qualified to do so plan definitely to set aside a number of years for the rendering of service in the legislative, or executive branches of his local, State or Federal government, and that as nearly as possible this be full-time service."

Mr. Lilienthal himself has been an outstanding practitioner of what he preaches. He has rendered, in the Tennessee Valley Authority and currently in his unprecedentedly difficult task as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, exemplary service to his countrymen. His experience may not make public service seem enticing to the young men and women emerging from the Nation's universities. The Republican-controlled Congress of the United States is at present threatening to reward his devotion to the national interest by ousting him from office and utilizing the Atomic Energy Commission for purposes of political patronage.

But the first political lesson which the current crop of graduates ought to learn is that if they do not relish this shabby sort of politicking, the best way to remedy it is to bring into public life a higher quotient of conscience and intelligence than the country now appears to have at its command.

Coal Deadlock

Negotiations for a new contract between the mine operators and the UMW broke down last week owing to the operators' refusal to accede to Mr. Lewis' pension fund demands. The suit to block payments from the 1947 pension fund, in accordance with the Lewis-Bridges agreement, was heard yesterday by Justice Goldsborough, and it is barely possible that his decision will clear the way for a resumption of negotiations. Otherwise another coal strike seems to be in the offing, starting early in July at the end of the miners' 10-day annual vacation. Hence the President is taking no chances. He has once again invoked the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act by setting up a fact-finding board to report on the dispute as a preliminary to asking for an 80-day injunction against striking. If Mr. Lewis runs true to form, he can be counted on to put all sorts of obstructions in the way of a peaceful settlement of controversial issues, if enjoined. And he will doubtless be ready to call out his miners at the end of the 80-day "cooling-off" period.

Judging from his recent actions, Mr. Lewis is bent on proving the futility of court injunctions as a means of implementing collective bargaining. Although he dared not disobey the last Goldsborough injunction to bargain with the Southern Coal Producers Association, he has harped on the fact that he was forced to resume negotiations. "In the very nature of things," he said, "the kind of conference the court had directed was bound to fail. Negotiation under duress is distasteful to a freeborn American."

Mr. Lewis' method of bargaining is bargaining in name only. As in the present dispute, he prefers to issue ultimatums based on his own interpretation of contracts, backed by threats of striking. The Taft-Hartley Act has cramped his style, but it has not caused him to reform his methods. His tactics have demonstrated the defects as well as the advantages of the injunction as a means of combating strikes. Injunctive relief of the sort provided by the Taft-Hartley Act affords temporary protection against strikes imperiling the Nation. But injunctions cannot insure a peaceful settlement of a labor dispute. That can be accomplished only if the principals are willing to bargain in good faith and to compromise their differences. When that is impossible, means must be found to impose a settlement that both parties will be obliged to accept.

Prof. Sumner H. Slichter, in an article published by the New York Times Magazine of May 16, referred approvingly to the existing arrangements of the British for dealing with vital disputes. There the employers and the unions have agreed to refer disputes that cannot be settled by collective bargaining to the Minister of Labor. That official may then refer the dispute to a national arbitration tribunal which makes a binding award. This arrangement, Professor Slichter explains, "does not mean universal compulsory arbitration, but it does mean that the unions and the employers have given the government an opportunity to protect the community against all stoppages which might create a national emergency." The defiant attitude of Mr. Lewis is building up support for a similar system of compulsory arbitration in this country, as an essential protection against strikes in basic industries. The time may not be far distant when an outraged public opinion will compel the Government to ban strikes in industries "affected with a public interest" and compel the submission of disputes to arbitration.

Gustav: 90

A word of greeting to King Gustav V who has just turned the ninetieth corner in his long and eventual life. Americans used to be as much against monarchy as they are now against communism. Nowadays there is more charity toward as well as more understanding of a royal house in the scheme of other people's institutions—if, that is to say, he is constitutional. King Gustav happens to typify as well as symbolize a civilized country with which America has much in common. He is devoted to the people, anxious to do his part in keeping them out of other people's quarrels, and dedicated to the ways of peace at home and abroad. It was natural that the United Nations should turn to a member of the Swedish King's family to mediate the trouble in Palestine. He is, as the Swedes are, above the battle. How long the Swedes can stay in their happy situation is problematical. Only by a squeak, and by the exercise of some pretty adroit diplomacy, were they left untouched in the last war. They lived through it in a state of nervous detachment. The so-called peace has not abated it, for on their eastern flank is Finland, for whom they entertain the admiration of age for lusty youth, which has had to yield concessions to Soviet Russia. Any attempt on Moscow's part to extend itself at Finland's expense would probably shake Sweden out of its quasi-isolation. Sweden, however, would move cautiously, as ever, out of her shell, especially if King Gustav is still on the throne, where we and millions of other well-wishers will hope he will remain for many years.

"Congressional Club"

Referring to your June 16 editorial discussing the rider attached to the Interior Department appropriation bill requiring ouster of the Reclamation officials by the use of a "ruse," it seems to me that the door has been opened to the use of similar devices against almost any official in any agency, and can seriously undermine any Government administration.

For this reason the real issue is not between these particular two officials and Senator Downey et al, but between the people of the United States and Senator Downey et al. The issue goes beyond the individuals involved in this instance, and it may be exceedingly unwise to let it go unchallenged.

I am inclined to think that the courts would be fully aware of the use of a "ruse," since the intent of the device is more than obvious. Attainder by any "ruse" is still an attainder, and it is my impression that the court would look to the intent and the effect. Only recently we had the situation in which the court said that John L. Lewis had in fact called a strike regardless of the word or sign he might have used.

Would a court say that this is not an attainder? I doubt it.

Also note that there would be no question about it if the provision concerning qualifications referred to future appointees to those positions, and did not apply to the two incumbents. Also, as a rider it is particularly suspect.

This is not a lost cause. We need improved Government administration rather than the degenerated kind that devices of this kind will create. As far as I can see this case must be fought.

Segregation's Inequality

Nobody with imagination could state that "segregation does not constitute discrimination." How can this be true when one race possesses all the better theaters, restaurants, playgrounds, and jobs from which another race is excluded?

As a white man with some imagination I can picture what it would be like to spend a single day in Washington as a Negro. I would find myself in a straitjacket of intolerable and undeserved humiliation. With my feeling for human dignity and my passion for defending it, I would be lucky if I got through the day without committing some deplorable violence. This fact makes me admire all the more the great forbearance and general good character of Washington's Negro citizens.

Of course one has a "right to choose his own friends." I am quite pernickety in the matter. I demand that my friends have integrity, courage, magnanimity, imagination, artistic feeling, and simplicity of soul—a combination of qualities not possessed by one person in many thousands.

But I have found these qualities in men of every rank and race—in a Hundu prince studying at Harvard; in a Georgia mountaineer who couldn't read; a Negro college professor and a Negro janitor; a cousin of Robert E. Lee; a New York millionaire; a Jewish poet from the East Side; a Chinese scholar; and an illiterate coal miner. Each of these persons I have called friend, with each of them I have broken bread at the same board.

I'm also particular about where I live. I like order and decency and good feeling. For three years I found these qualities in a section of Washington predominantly occupied by Negroes. My Negro neighbors were good people. I watched them play checkers on outdoor benches, I saw them plant flowers by the doorways, I heard their children sing. Not having electric iceboxes or central heating, they had to settle for morning glories and music.

Those who defend segregation will find no defense in reason, science, or humanity. They will find no defense in American principles. They must shrink behind their ramparts of rationalization, expediency, greed, and neurotic prejudices. Are such defenses so hard to overcome? And need we wait a thousand years?

CARE Results

During a recent trip to Europe, I was impressed by the ineffectiveness of American propaganda on the one hand and the great impact which American relief work has made on the other. I spent considerable time in Germany and have come to the conclusion that the most effective American propaganda comes from a source which did not intend to be of such a character at all but was instigated by purely humanitarian motives. Besides the relief shipments of the churches, the activities of the Society of Friends, it has been especially the work of CARE which is having a tremendous influence upon the German people.

I have talked to only a few German people who have ever been reached successfully by Allied reeducation methods but I have seen many who were impressed and touched by the sacrifices which Americans are making for their former enemies in the form of relief work.

Four times I have had occasion to watch the receipt and opening of CARE packages by German families and these moments belong to the most moving experiences in my whole life. Those people who lived for more than four years on a starvation diet are so overwhelmed by the gifts which CARE brings from the United States that it leaves such a great impression with them as no propaganda broadcast or newspaper story can ever create. The receipt of such a package makes them not only extremely grateful but very receptive for ideas and explanations which might come from the same side of the ocean where these packages originated.

CARE is organized and supported by churches and private welfare agencies, but it might be very worthwhile for Congress and the State Department to find methods and means not only to encourage but to support this kind of work in Europe.

Restoring Germany

Those who have been fighting the cut in ERP funds are, of course, entitled to due credit. At the same time, it is impossible to escape the impression that they are straining at a gnat while swallowing a camel.

The proposal to make a major slash in the appropriation for European recovery was as stupid as for a community to appropriate millions for a new hospital, with the proviso that the hospital must not have a roof.

On the other hand, stupidity is hardly a strong enough word to apply to those who appropriate billions to restore somewhat the European destruction for which Germany is responsible, while at the same time restoring German economic and political power. That is like self-righteously building a great hospital and carefully placing in the cornerstone an atomic bomb, timed to explode in a few years and destroy not only the new hospital but the entire community.

"You-All"

I send these comments on Margery Krimont's letter of June 13 on "You-All."

The expression, when used as those who know how to use it, is strictly, philologically and arithmetically correct. Miss Krimont, furthermore, necessarily uses it or an equivalent, whenever she wants to mean more than one person.

Its origin is simple. The personal pronouns are in the nominative case, I, thou and he or she in the singular, and we, you and they in the plural. As the more polite and less familiar form, however, you long ago took the place of thou for the singular, just as in French, vous took the place of tu and in German sie is used instead of du for the singular.

Thus, since you means both one person or two or more, it is necessary, as well as polite and informative, to indicate whether you are using it in the singular or plural on any occasion when you are speaking to one person but mean to include both that person and all the others in a group.

"You all" correctly used means "all of you" and nothing more or less. When so used I have never seen it hyphenated, any more than "all-of-you" or "all-two" or "all-three."

Straining Mercy

Your editorial of Wednesday, June 16, 1948, entitled "Victimizing Children," begins "Whether the quality of congressional mercy toward the hungry children of Europe is to be strained through 'cold war' prejudice and fear . . ."

I am wondering if you are guilty of the same misinterpretation of the oft-quoted speech of Portia in Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice as I was from high school days until my enlightenment, fairly recently, in one of our Washington universities.

During my period of ignorance I pictured Portia as "straining" the "quality of mercy" through a tea strainer and I was somewhat concerned as to how she did it. But now I find that the word means "constrained" and has nothing to do with strainers.

Naturally, I'm hoping you are misguided as was I, for it's most satisfying to put others on the right track.

26-Ounce Baby

I was very much pleased to see in The Washington Post of June 15 a picture of a very happy couple with their baby, whom they had just taken home from Suburban Hospital, where she was born prematurely on March 22, weighing only 26 ounces.

I should like, however, to add to your article which accompanied the picture a sincere note of commendation to the nurses who had the responsibility of caring for the baby.

As a graduate registered nurse who has spent many years specializing in the care of children, I know that it was little less than a miracle that the infant survived.

I know also that in spite of the skills and resources of the doctors in attendance, had it not been for the hours of patient, conscientious nursing this miracle would not have been possible. Any nurse who has zealously guarded the feeble spark of life of a premature baby will join with me in saying, "Congratulations to the nurses to whom was entrusted the care of little Vickie Lovejoy."

Radio Racket

Radio listeners' patience is being exhausted by fantastic—sometimes asinine—claims about soap and tooth paste and powder and cigarettes—for one-third of the allotted time. Now another third of the time is being taken up with the sale of cheap costume jewelery. What kind of a racket is this, anyway?

Soviet Zigzags

By Andre Visson

New Roads, Old Goals

THERE HAS lately been an apparent contradiction in Soviet tactics. On one hand the Soviets pretend to continue to wage their so-called peace offensive. They appear to be multiplying the proofs of their "peace-loving" intentions. They are willing to let the United States, together with Britain and France, participate in the deliberations of the Commission on the Status of the Danube.

They appear to be more conciliatory on the status of Austria. They are trying to reassure the Turks at Ankara. Their Bulgarian and Albanian satellites are making peace overtures to Greece. And even their most violent henchmen in the Balkans—Tito of Yugoslavia—appears to be willing to recognize Italy's claim to her colonies in Africa.

On the other hand they present us with a note accusing us of tolerating in our press "warmongering attacks" against "peace-loving" Soviet Russia. And they continue their efforts to squeeze us out of Berlin, despite our repeated declarations that we are determined to stay there, even at the risk of a showdown.

Which of thse two apparently contradictory lines is the true expression of Soviet intentions?

Our experts on Russia doubt whether there is any real contradiction between the "conciliatory" line in Danubian Europe and the "tough" line in Germany. Both lines are merely tactics. And one should never forget the basic rule of Soviet philosophy: "The tactics may—and must—fluctuate, but the doctrine is immovable." Or, to put it differently, new roads must be constantly explored but the goals must remain the same.

* * *

WHAT, THEN, are the Soviet goals? The ultimate, the ideal goal can be stated as "absolute security through world domination." But the men in the Kremlin know perfectly well that this ultimate goal can be achieved in only two ways: either by a victory in another world war, or by the complete disintegration of the non-Communist world.

They must realize, however, that the chances for such a victory are slim. They are certain to have a number of spectacular "victories" in western Europe, but practically no chance to win the decisive, final battle against the United States.

At the same time the disintegration of the non-Communist world—the very heart of the Communist dogma—is not yet in sight. On the contrary, the non-Communist world is multiplying the signs of its economic and moral recovery. Western Europe is still weak, disunited and defenseless. But it has the will to unite and a chance to become stronger by its own efforts and our aid.

Under these circumstances, something must be wrong from the Soviet point of view. Either their dogma about our "inevitable disintegration" was wrong, or the present recovery of non-Communist Europe is merely temporary and without a tomorrow. But if Europe should really recover and if there should be no economic crisis in the United States, then they will have to accept the terrifying theory that their "Red Scriptures" are fundamentally wrong. To be sure, the capitalistic system fluctuates and continually undergoes adjustment, but it is not doomed. It grows and even gets stronger, and this means that time is no longer on their side.

OUR representatives in Moscow as well as those of western Europe have been unable to discover whether the Soviet policy-makers have made a choice between these two theories, which in the final analysis will determine their present and future policies. The disgrace into which the leading Soviet economist, Hungarian-born Eugene Varga, fell for declaring that an economic crisis in the United States is not in sight, appears to indicate that the men in the Kremlin are reluctant to abandon their dogma about the inevitable disintegration of the capitalistic world. But what line will they follow if and when they decide that their dogma has proved to be wrong and that time is no longer on their side?

Here our and western European experts on Soviet Russia divide themselves into two schools. The pessimists believe that when the Soviets realize that time for them is running out, they will adopt a very tough policy, even at the risk of a showdown. The optimists advance the theory that the Soviets will reluctantly accept the unpleasant realities, will dig in behind the iron curtain in Europe and try to expand their influence and control wherever possible elsewhere—in Asia or in North Africa.

As for the pressure to which they are subjecting the western powers in Berlin, both the pessimists and the optimists agree that it will continue in the months to come. The optimists believe that the Soviets will merely transform the western sectors in Berlin into a sort of ghetto, while the pessimists fear that this "ghetto" may eventually become a concentration camp with gas chambers—unless we withdraw.

There is, however, another point on which the pessimists and the optimists seem to agree. Regardless of the final Soviet decision, and regardless of the degree of pressure to which they will subject us in Berlin this summer, the Soviet "conciliatory" line with all its possible deviations will most likely continue until our presidential elections. It is our choice of the next President, and the Soviet interpretation of our choice that will be one of the main determining factors in Soviet policy.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Gag Rule Sets New High in House

By Drew Pearson

THE CURRENT session of Congress won't go down in history for devotion to the common man, but it did set a new high for gagging free and fair debate.

Most people think Congress is a deliberative body which carefully debates the laws of the Nation before passing them. This is largely true in the Senate. But in the House, the current Republican leadership has been imposing a series of gag rules.

A gag rule is an order by the Rules Committee that a bill cannot be changed or amended on the floor of Congress. It means that a handful of men in committee draft the bill, after which four hundred other Representatives take the bill as is. They can only vote yes or no.

Some of the most important pieces of legislation passed by Congress at this session have been put through under a gag rule, including every major bill reported out by the all-important Ways and Means Committee.

Czar Knutson, chairman of this Committee, insisted on imposing a gag rule on his Wall Street inspired tax "reduction bill," also on his reciprocal trade extension bill. Other Congressmen, not members of his Committee, had no chance to amend these bills. They had to vote for or against them as drafted by Knutson and a small group on the Ways and Means Committee.

Worst "gagger" in Congress, next to Knutson, is New York's John Taber, chairman of the Appropriations Committee. This was how he railroaded the recent Interior Department bill through the House, loaded with hobbles on reclamation and irrigation projects. When the bill reached the floor for debate no one could change it. And since to vote against it meant denying money to the Interior Department, the bill had to be passed.

Congressman Dan Reed of New York is another wielder of the gag. He used it to pass the misnamed social security "liberalization" bill, which barred the doors to 20,000,000 American workers still uncovered by old-age pensions.

That is how the GOP leaders of the eightieth Congress railroaded some of its most vital legislation through the House of Representatives. Fortunately the Senate, in saner mood, undid part of the House's harm.

Note—Broad-gauged GOP committee chairmen such as Kansas' Clifford Hope (Agriculture Committee), California's Richard Welch (Public Lands), and New Jersey's Charles Eaton (Foreign Affairs) ask for an "open rule." This permits amendments.)

THE NATIONAL MARITIME Union has been hounding Congress ever since V-J Day to grant American citizenship to alien seamen who sailed in the U. S. Merchant Marine during the war. However, it hasn't been able to get ten minutes to present the seamen's case before a congressional committee.

Yet a private bill, granting citizenship to Leon Moore, former Soviet Charge d'Affaires at Rome, coasted through the House Judiciary Committee without a hitch the other day after a pleasant, 45-minute hearing.

Moore renounced his Soviet citizenship in 1940 and came to the United States on an illegal visa. During the war, he built up a profitable export-import business in New York City.

Moore was able to get action, while the seamen who risked their lives for this country could not. Moore has influential friends. His case was pleaded by such notables as Allen Dulles, brother of John Foster Dulles; and Arthur Bunker, a partner in Lehman Brothers.

Gross Grazes in Green Pastures

STUBBY, VOCAL Congressman Chester Gross of Pennsylvania joined the symphony of Truman accusers the other day, denouncing as "double-talk" the President's attacks on Congress for inaction on farm legislation and high cost of living.

To prove his point, Gross quoted a letter from a Lakeland, Florida, housewife who had received a Department of Agriculture cookbook with 150 recipes for plentiful, inexpensive foods. "I have been a housekeeper for 52 years," she wrote Gross, "but we just cannot eat grass along with soybeans and all the stuff the cookbook says is so grand and nourishing. Sure, the Department of Agriculture is a crazy bunch."

"I agree that she is exactly right," said Gross. "If that is all that the New Deal has to offer after 16 years of planning, is it any wonder that there is such a wave of righteous indignation rising all over the land."

What the Pennsylvania Republican forgot, however, was that as recently as May 15, he commented as follows on the Agriculture Department's campaign for greater consumption of plentiful foods:

"This time of year the body craves greens. This is the time to buy asparagus, no matter what the food experts tell us. But up in York we don't have to buy asparagus until the price is right. We go out into the fields and get dandelion, mustard greens and poke. These are weeds, the experts might say, but we know they are good eating. There's nothing better for a person in the spring than a nice mess of dandelions."

Party Platforms Cut Little Ice

Republican voter and the average Democratic voter show no marked difference of attitude on such public matters as the draft, Russia, the Marshall Plan, Federal aid to education, reciprocal trade agreements, the Taft-Hartley Act, Government ownership, the United Nations, the oleomargarine tax or social security. There are some differences on civil rights, on the wisdom of reintroducing price control and on the question whether income taxes are too high. But these differences are not great.

Designed to Placate

THE original idea of the presidential party platform was to set forth clearly and boldly the principles and policies for which the party stood.

But voters nowadays apparently believe that platforms are usually vague catch-alls promising all things to all men, designed to placate all groups and offend no one.

This is undoubtedly the reason why a survey in 1944 a few weeks after publication of the Republican platform found that fewer than two voters in every five (36 per cent) claimed to have read any part of it.

Even groups who might be expected to have special interest in individual planks, such as farmers in the farm planks or union labor in the labor provisions, showed almost complete lack of familiarity with those parts of the platform.

In 1940—the year in which the Nation faced the grave issue of war—even fewer voters bothered to read the Republican platform on which Wendell Willkie ran or the Democratic platform of Mr. Roosevelt.

Platforms are necessary to give party workers consistent sets of arguments to use in campaign talks, and through such talks the ideas in the platform gain some circulation. But the platform documents by themselves apparently have gotten comparatively little attention in the past.

Not 'Burning Up'

A SIGNIFICANT fact this year is that only about one third of the voters have any particular idea or plank which they would like to see adopted by their party.

"Is there any particular idea or plank which you would like your party to include in its party platform for the coming presidential election?"

The vote:	Yes	No
Republicans	34%	66%
Democrats	31	69
Indenpendents	40	60
ALL U. S.	34	66

The above survey suggests that there is nothing which seems to be "burning up" any large numerb of people.

The item most frequently mentioned by all groups was "lower the cost of living." The number mentioning this one problem amounted to only one-sixth of the total.

Various suggestions having to do with labor problems came next, followed by housing. Then came a long string of items each of which got only a few per cent—stronger foreign policy, improved education, insuring peace, preparedness, veteran's bonus, health insurance, more old age assistance, government economy.

The scatteration of items, the fact that nothing stood out prominently and above all the fact that so few could think of anything they want done, is an indication of the problem which platform makers face this year.

THE CALL OF THE WILD

Protective 'Musts'

Got Your Atomic Suit?

By Howard W. Blakeslee

Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—An American family breakfast scene on the eve of another war.

Wife: "You had better wear your atomic suit to work today."

Husband: "I have it ready. By the way, maybe we had better start eating atomic bread."

Wife: "Silly! We've been doing that for a month."

New names, atomic suit and atomic bread, but these describe simple and easy protections enumerated for atomic war by Maj. A. J. Bauer, United States Army Medical Corps, and deputy chief of the special projects division, office of the Surgeon General of the Army.

An atomic suit is light-colored and loose-fitting. That single precaution can save thousands of painful burns. There is no guesswork here. Dark colors and tight fits burned many persons in Japan.

White Is Protective

REMEMBER the photos of grilled backs of Japanese women? The grill-work was made by red stripes on white cloth. The searing heat flash went through the red. The white was complete protection.

Any dark color similarly transmits heat. Black possibly is the worst. Black writing on thin white paper exposed to the Hiroshima bomb was burned so that the writing was only ashes. The white was unscorched.

Japanese wearing robes loose in some places but pulled tightly around arms, or across shoulders, were burned where the tight areas had faced the atomic flash. Elsewhere underneath loose clothing, these persons were unscorched.

The atomic bread is something new, and still in the future.

"Considerable work," says Major Bauer, "is being done in the use of drugs as a protection against radiation. So far these experiments have not been conclusive, but future knowledge may well suggest the advisability of incorporating some substance in a common human food such as bread."

Another precaution is to immunize people against tetanus. This disease will have a better chance to hit the unvaccinated through the great numbers of burns and the injuries.

Major Bauer also suggests immunization against diseases of the digestive system. There are protective medicines for cholera and dysentery, but not for most digestive disorders. These diseases would be expected to multiply due to atomic bomb destruction of water and sewage systems.

All Typed for Blood

THE entire Nation should be typed for blood transfusions, Major Bauer thinks. He says the number of transfusions is likely to be fantastic, requiring trained laymen both for typing and transfusions.

The plan for atom bombs, he says, will involve a change in viewpoint.

"One definite statement may be made of such plans," says Major Bauer. "The area which each group can ignore in its plans is its own locality. The shocking power and devastation wrought by an atom bomb so disrupts an area that outside help is necessary to carry out operations.

"This plan for emergency operation must differ from any of the past in that it will have to be on a national basis. Cities must plan to handle the emergencies of their neighboring cities. The director of the emergency plan for one city must be a resident of some other community."

In more powerful atomic bombs, Major Bauer says we may assume that the upper limits of destruction will not more than double the bombs already known, unless some new basic information is uncovered. He says the assumption of doubled destructive area may be considered valid because effects of a bomb fall off rapidly with distance.

The bombs increase their destructive range only as the cube root of their increase in power. A possible exception, not discussed by Major Bauer, is that as bombs get bigger, the distance traveled by the flash of heat and of light, including sunburn, may rise equally with the added bomb power.

72 Degrees, Unfrozen

WATER has been cooled to 72 degrees below zero without freezing. This was done during the war in Germany, says Gabriele Rabel of Cambridge, England, in Science. It was done by repeatedly freezing and melting the same water. At first this water froze as usual, but after a while the water refused to freeze until it got colder and colder. The explanation, says Rabel, is that water ordinarily begins its freezing around small invisible particles. These particles are impurities. Repeated freezing gets rid of them.

In Louisiana

Speedy Tax Actions

By Edmund Le Breton

BATON ROUGE, LA., June 19 (AP).—Louisianans who learned about big programs of public benefits and quick legislative action under the late Huey P. Long have just had another lesson from his brother.

Within a month after Gov. Earl K. Long took office, Louisiana's taxes were increased about 50 per cent and collection of about $200,000 new revenue a day started under emergency procedure.

Governor Long led his faction to victory after eight years in political doldrums. He promised increased old age payments, a veterans' bonus, better roads, more hospital service and guaranteed minimum salaries for school teachers.

New Revenue Measures

BUT, he told the Legislature, in effect, when it convened: find the money first. Then he told them where to find it.

So with record speed and by voting margins never less than 7 to 1, the lawmakers levied these new revenue measures:

A sales tax increased from 1 to 2 per cent and made to apply to many formerly untaxed services.

Beer tax raised from $1.50 to $10 a barrel—a hike of about 2½ cents a bottle.

Gasoline tax raised from 7 to 9 cents a gallon, the highest rate in the country.

Coin-operated gaming machines made subject to a new tax of $100 a year each.

Severance taxes raised on oil, timber and most natural resources enough approximately to to double the former yield.

Natural gas gathering tax doubled.

One more revenue bill—Long says it's his last—still is in the mill. It would boost cigarette taxes from 5 to 8 cents a pack. The program already in effect is estimated to produce 70 million dollars new revenues a year. The cigarette tax would provide eight million dollars to nine million dollars more. Former State revenues ran about 160 million dollars a year.

Now the legislators are at work on appropriations.

One of them took the floor to urge the administration leaders and finance committees not to let the sweet lag too far behind the bitter.

"What we need," he said, "is some medicine to soothe the wounds left by the taxes this House has voted."

A Liberal Bill

THE old age assistance bill has passed. The State welfare department says it is the most liberal in the country so far as eligibility is concerned and among the three or four most liberal in benefits to be paid. It permits persons owning houses, a little livestock, small bank accounts and insurance rights to qualify. All Louisianians over 65 are guaranteed $50 a month for single persons, $90 for couples. The State makes up the difference between their income and these figures. Payments start next month.

The benefits more than double Louisiana's former scale.

The veterans' bonus bill, financed by a 60-million-dollar bond issue backed by part of the beer tax, also has passed, but it is subject to ratification by the State's voters in November.

Legislation for a teachers' scale of $2400 to $3600 is well advanced.

Still to be appropriated are funds for the road program and expansion of hospital services, especially full reopening of the huge New Orleans Charity Hospital, partly closed in recent years.

Matter of Fact

History Rides on GOP Choice

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

THIS is at last the eve of the Republicans' grand quadrennial chowder march, barbecue and delegate roping contest. One of these correspondents who has just returned from abroad can report that the whole free world is waiting for the outcome with agonized anxiety. This time, the Republicans' decision will settle not merely the fate of this Nation but the course of world history. Under the circumstances, it seems a sound idea to try to see what the issue at Philadelphia will really be.

The issue expresses itself in the natural grouping of the candidates. In varying degrees, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Gov. Earl Warren and Harold Stassen all belong to the modern-minded, forward-looking wing of the Republican Party. On the other hand, Senator Robert A. Taft, Speaker Joseph W. Martin and Senator John Bricker are clearly right-wing Republicans whose eyes are fixed upon the past.

There is a battle for control of the Republican Party between the two factions. And since the tone of the Republican Party determines the tone of American conservatism, the real issue at Philadelphia will be the future of American conservatism. This is what will be at stake.

To be sure, there are all sorts of shadings and criss-crossings to be noted among the candidates. Governor Dewey, for example, is the most conspicuous candidate of the modern-minded Republicans. Yet he has been generously supported with contributions from a group of New York bankers, some of whom really prefer the Taft-Martin-Bricker brand of Republicanism. They are for Dewey, as one of them succinctly put it, "because we don't think we can quite get away with Taft or Martin." Yet, if nominated and elected, Dewey will have obligations to these men which will inevitably influence his policies and appointments. Again he will also have obligations to the Grundy-Owlett-Martin group in the Republican organization in Pennsylvania, which is the stronghold of pre-McKinley thinking.

Taft Less Conservative

IN short, the necessities of delegate collecting have hung a large collection of albatrosses around Dewey's neck. And the presence of these rather noisome birds will make the choice of Dewey something of a compromise. Equally, Taft is far less conservative than Martin or Bricker. But these qualifications do not really matter. What matters is that Taft is the candidate of Col. Robert R. McCormick. What matters, in short, is who belongs to the two factions and what they very broadly stand for.

The modern-minded Republicans stand, very broadly, for a strong, international foreign policy, and just enough regulation of business to provide moderate, compromise solutions of such major national problems as housing, conservation of resources, power development and the provision of adequate social security.

Vandenberg, Dewey, Stassen and Warren are businessmen's candidates, just as much as Taft, Martin and Bricker. But they are the candidates of businessmen like Paul Hoffman, and not of businessmen like Colonel McCormick and Gen. Robert Wood. They do not want to do more than is absolutely necessary, either in the way of providing funds for reconstruction of a free world abroad or altering the economy at home. But they recognize that the national Government really must do something to solve the problems listed and a host of others.

Among the Republican right-wingers, Senator Taft is in the curious position of advocating domestically a program of social welfare which, if extremely mild, is a least a program. The Republican right wing supports him because, despite occasional bouts of lip service, he is a thoroughly unconverted isolationist.

Rely on Providence

AS for Speaker Martin and Senator Bricker, their basic policy is to do nothing really decisive about any national or international problems, relying on Providence or free enterprise to provide the solution. The only laws they believe in strongly are protective tariffs and legislation aimed at the political left. These are the differences between the factions.

Since the United States is now the prop and leader of the cause of freedom everywhere, and since the Republican candidate is very likely to be elected in November, it is not surprising that the outcome at Philadelphia is awaited with such almost breathless suspense, not only here in America but all over the world. Among those watching most anxiously, it must be added, are the masters of the Kremlin. For if this country returns to isolationism and extreme reaction, their game will be as good as won.

Production Up Two-Thirds Since 1910

Farmers' Future Hinges on Peace

By John W. Ball

Post Reporter

AMERICAN farmers can expect good incomes for the next quarter of a century, providing a stable peace is worked out, America's leading agricultural economist believes.

To aid the House Committee on Agriculture to write a long-range farm bill, urgently needed to replace wartime agricultural laws, many of which expire this year, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics recently prepared a study to analyze the important trends and the factors that will affect farming during the next generation.

Pointing out that "the long-run prospects will, of course, be affected by events in the next few years," V. O. Wells, chief of BAE, predicts:

1. Prices received and paid by farmers are expected to drop below the record 1947 levels as emergency demands diminish.

"However," he writes, "demand for farm products is likely to stay favorable, especially as compared with prewar.

"American consumers are eating about 15 per cent more food per person than before the war. The foreign market will continue relatively good for some time, partly as a result of the European Recovery Program."

2. Farmers generally are in a good position to work out adjustments.

"They're in a better financial condition to meet a decline in prices and incomes than after World War I," Wells says.

"Stocks of staple farm commodities are relatively low. There already has been a considerable reduction in hog and cattle numbers, so that a forced liquidation of livestock is not in prospect.

"However, it is a fact that prices paid by farmers are 'sticky'—that is, farm costs are likely to remain relatively stable."

3. Over the longer run, several forces will promote the growth of demand for agricultural products.

"One of the most important," Wells asserts, "will be the increase in population. There is a good chance that it will grow at a rate of about one million persons a year which means a larger market.

"By 1975, the labor force is likely to be 10 to 12 million workers larger than in 1947. Productivity of workers is also expected to increase. As a result, the 15 to 20 per cent more people in 1975 could have a third or more real income per capita.

"Rising real incomes probably will still further stimulate the per capital consumption of farm products, particularly food. If consumer income and employment are well maintained, consumption per person by 1975 could easily be 5 per cent, or more, above the current level, 20 to 25 per cent above 1935-1939. Even under relatively unfavorable conditions, substantial declines are not expected."

4. Among the food products, the uptrend in consumption of fruits and vegetables is likely to continue but at a slower rate.

5. Demand for meats and whole milk dairy products should continue high, depending on consumer incomes and employment.

6. Consumption per person of cereal products and potatoes is not likely to change much. Consumption of fats and oils, including butter and sugar, is not expected to be much above prewar, though probably above the rates of recent years.

Farmers have increased their output of food and fiber about two-thirds since 1910. Many of the forces responsible for this upsurge will operate during the next generation.

Farmers will continue to shift to machine power. Since 1918 about 55 million acres have been released from the production of food and fiber for animal power to human use. Another 15 to 20 million acres are likely to be released during the next generation, most of it by 1965.

Will Reduce Workers

MECHANIZATION and other technological developments, such as improved weed and insect control, may reduce the number of farm workers needed another 15 to 20 per cent.

Other practices which will help farmers increase the volume and efficiency of production include development of more productive plants and animals, increased use of fertilizer, drainage, irrigation, expanded soil-conserving and soil-building measures and better forest practice on farm woodlands.

"The rate farm production will increase will depend in part on farmers' confidence in their future market," Wells declares. "If economic conditions are favorable, output might be up a fourth by 1975. With less favorable economic conditions, agriculture production probably will increase at about the same rate as the total population."

The European Recovery Program, Wells asserts, will play a big part in determining how much of our farm products will be taken.

"Increasing restrictions on international trade could cut down our foreign markets. Under unfavorable conditions wheat exports might not be more than 100 million bushels a year, tobacco not more than 400 million pounds, cotton not more than two to three million bales.

"The world needs American farm products. World population is steadily increasing. Wide new areas of easily cultivated land are not in sight. Exports of 200 or more bushels of wheat each year, 550 to 600 million pounds of tobacco, and four to five million bales of cotton would be consistent with foreign needs as well as with our ability to produce."

Inflation Tough on U. S. Dollars

Money Changing In China

By Fred Hampson

Chief of the Associate Press Staff in China

SHANGHAI, June 19 (AP).—What's it like to be an American in a nation where six bits makes you a millionaire and where summer's dollar is autumn's dime?

Not too bad if your income is in American dollars, yet you have to spend an awful lot of time on money matters to protect the dollars and make them stretch.

China's inflated currency loses value every day, both in relation to prices and in relation to the money of other countries.

Workers paid in Chinese dollars are worse off than Americans. They are paid on a cost of living index which always lags behind the growing worthlessness of the money paid them in wages.

An American living on American dollars is in a class by himself. His money goes up faster than the cost of living. At first prices seem low to him but this is an illusion.

There are many reasons why it is an illusion. First, he has to buy his Chinese currency from a money changer. The money changer won't give you a good rate unless you spend at least $10 United States in his shop.

Since he doesn't like that $10 bite, the American buys more currency than he needs for that one day.

Say he buys one million Chinese dollars to $1. At that rate his ricksha ride costs a nickel and lunch 40 cents. Fine.

Next day the rate goes up to 1,200,000 to $1. Prices go up too. But the American still has the currency he bought the day before. So the ricksha ride is 6 cents and lunch is 45. Had he bought currency today his ricksha ride still would figure out a nickel and his lunch 40 cents.

Still he can't afford to buy too little currency. Suppose he shops and doesn't have enough Chinese dollars to pay the bill.

He has to fetch out his good United States dollars and bargain with the shopkeeper, who drives hard bargains.

Corcoran Challenges Artists

By Jane Watson Crane

IN launching a series of small one-man shows by contemporary Americans, the Corcoran Gallery indicates an attitude and policy which should put Washington artists on their mettle.

In the first place the director, Hermann Williams, in his catalogue foreword immediately clears the air of any hint of patronage of the local artist. Lacking altogether is the insufferable, apologetic tone in which the work of the community is sometimes introduced with the clear implication, "a poor thing, but our own."

"The vitality of artistic expression, although unquestionably influenced by environment, is not subject to arbitrary geographical limits," writes Williams. "Healthy competition for New York, long regarded as the center of art activity in the country, has developed in recent years in Chicago, San Francisco and Boston, for instance, as well as here in Washington. The productions of these areas are decreasingly a matter of purely local concern, and increasingly one of national interest. Therefore, although the four painters (Margaret Gates, Ethel Robertson Gath, Samuel Bookatz and William Calfee) in this the first of a new series of exhibitions are from this region, their work is presented by no means as a solely localized venture."

Several by Each

IN further support of the first four chosen, as a result of recommendations made by the jury of the Artists of Washington and Vicinity show held earlier in the season, the Corcoran has given space sufficient to exhibit a number of paintings by each. There was evidently nothing arbitrary about this arrangement. Two of the painters, Mrs. Gath and Samuel Bookatz, reach back to their work of the 'thirties, Margaret Gates is represented by paintings dating from 1946, and William Calfee has a group all done in 1948.

The quartet is oddly assorted; consistency in performance seems to rest in the women's sections, experimentation in the men's. But these are separate shows, not put together for comparison but to introduce the individual and to give the visitor a chance to make more than a casual acquaintance with the work of each.

All we need by way of introduction to the paintings of Margaret Gates is said by Assistant Director Willis Woods, in his notes: "The observer is led into the paintings by their charming simplicity, and then is fascinated by the wealth of beauty they contain."

Ethel Robertson Gath's work has for us always had an almost antiseptic quality—good, clean American realism presented without equivocation. Hers is unusually strong and decisive painting for a woman, of a competence that commands respect.

The most revealing group is that by Samuel Bookatz, which runs from figure studies which suggest the bright, particular star of some academic teacher, to the most recent projections which aim to assimilate more advanced ideas. So far, one sees here virtuosity, but no clear indication that the artist has really struck his stride, either in finding what he wants to say or the right means of employing his gifts.

Calfee Versatile

THE most ambitious paintings are the 1948 color compositions by William Calfee, one of the best known of Washington artists and director of American University's art department. Although only one aspect of his work is shown here, a retrospective would reveal him not only as sculptor and draftsman, but as a painter of great versatility. In the present group the concentration is on color. There is a great mobilization of color, but we are left with a feeling of suspense, as if we were attending the rehearsal of an orchestra. There are some magnificent, smoothly executed passages, but others seem broken off, and we almost expect, as in rehearsal, that the performer will go back and begin all over again.

The Corcoran will show the four exhibitions throughout the summer. Also remaining on view are the American water colors and drawings.

Biggest event of the coming season for this gallery is the biennial, to be held early in 1949. As usual, the American Federation of Arts will circulate a group of paintings from this show on a tour of the country.

Marin Work On Exhibit At Toledo

JOHN MARIN'S "Tonk Mountain in the Autumn," on loan from the Phillips Memorial Gallery, is on exhibit at the thirty-fifth annual show of contemporary American paintings of the Toledo Museum of Art.

The exhibition of contemporary portraits at Chequire House, Alexandria, will be open through July 16. Hours are 2 to 7 weekdays and 2 to 5 Saturdays. The gallery is closed Sundays.

A collection of famous portraits, jewels and costume accessories is on view in the Costume Institute of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, in recognition of the city's golden anniversary. Central part of the show is the group of 17 portraits of society of 50 years ago, 6 of them by John Singer Sargent.

Among the interesting accessories on display are the white pencil-pointed satin shoes trimmed with heavy appliqued Venetian lace that belonged to Mrs. Philip Lydig, a patroness of the arts. Mrs. Lydig had 150 pairs of shoes, all made by hand for her by Yantorny, a bootmaker of Paris. The pair on display is about 2 inches wide at their widest point.

Two employes of the National Gallery have received cash awards of $50 each for devising a new method of hanging the Gallery's paintings. The men are George Egan, 6200 12th st. nw., and William O. Grams, Woodland Beach, Edgewater, Md. The new device consists of a removable pin that passes through a fastening permanently attached to the frame of the picture. Any painting can be taken down by simply removing the pin.

Jane Watson Crane, art critic of The Washington Post, is the mother of a baby girl born June 11 at Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Crane is the wife of J. L. Crane, jr., and their home is at 2224 Evarts st. ne.

The Silver Spring Gallery of Art, 9216 Flower ave., Silver Spring, Md., is showing an exhibition of pastels, drawings, oils and watercolors by F. J. Denis Beatty, Bella Kudisch Weinberg and Tracy C. Coleman. The show will continue until September.

Churchill Traces 20 Years of Pre-War Folly

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

THE GATHERING STORM. By Winston S. Churchill. Book 1: From War to War, 1919-1939; Book 2: The Twilight War, 1939-1940. Boston, Houghton, Mifflin Co., 784 pages, $6.

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL
. . . points the warning finger again

WINSTON CHURCHILL has put the whole world in his debt once more.

Toward the end of a fabulous life, he has done far more than write the first of five projected volumes on the history of the war. He has devoted less than half of this one to what we unjustly called the "phony" war.

He has used its more important half to tell of the 20 years of so-called peace between the wars, and of the follies that enabled Adolf Hitler almost to dominate the earth.

During those years Churchill warned again and again of the blindness of prewar statesmen and politicians, in his own country and others.

Now his pudgy finger is raised again in the warning gesture which the prewar Parliaments came to know so well. Now his matchless eloquence is put to work to steer us from letting such disasters occur again.

It is a pity that this book is too bulky for present-day leaders and legislators to carry around. The American and British commanders in Germany could profit from Churchill's account of the rise of German nationalism from the ashes of defeat.

The Congressmen who cry for a "tough" foreign policy, and then vote against military precautions, might learn from the story of Britain's bitter failure to catch up with Hitler once he had been allowed to seize the advantage.

The Ethiopian Crisis

THOSE WHO put their faith in the United Nations, but who balk at sending a single American soldier on a U. N. errand, might study Churchill's tale of the Ethiopian crisis, when Britain led the League of Nations into sanctions against Italy and then refused to follow through.

Connoisseurs of Churchill's writings may find that the style is not what it was in his books like "The Unknown War" and on the earlier World War.

It would be a marvel if the Churchill of today were as crisp, as vigorous and clear as the cocky Churchill of long ago. Yet this book, like the others, flashes with the color of magnificent prose. It suffers from comparison with no modern historical writing but Churchill's own.

This time he has too much of the historian's sense to let his memories be dominated by "I told you so"—although no living man is more entitled to recall how often he was right and others wrong.

Simply by telling the record of great errors that may be committed again, Churchill gives his account an oddly contemporary quality. The reader can learn and apply the lesson or ignore it at his peril.

That Secret Overture

A CASE IN POINT is Churchill's story of the secret overture from President Roosevelt to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in January, 1938. Most of the story has been told in Sumner Welles' book, "A Time for Decision," and Cordell Hull has dealt with it briefly in his recent memoirs.

Roosevelt, worried by the danger of war yet bedeviled by the isolationists at home, thought he could check the slide to disaster. At Welles' instigation and over Hull's bitter opposition, he decided to invite the representatives of the chief European countries to Washington "to discuss the underlying causes of present differences."

Before taking this step he sounded Chamberlain about it, and said he would carry the plan forward only if it had the whole-hearted approval of the British government.

Chamberlain thanked the President, but poured ice-water on the idea. He thought the Roosevelt plan should be postponed because Britain was then trying to reach agreement with Germany and Italy.

Others have disclosed that this rebuff had a lasting effect in chilling Roosevelt's attitude toward the Chamberlain regime. Churchill reveals that it caused Anthony Eden's resignation from the cabinet the following month, for Eden had been away at the time, and Chamberlain had answered Washington without consulting or telling him.

Churchill does not say whether he thought the Roosevelt proposal sound; one suspects that he doubted the worth or wisdom of any conference with Hitler's Germany. But about Chamberlain's response to the offer he has no doubts whatever.

He looks back upon it as "the loss of the last frail chance to save the world from tyranny otherwise than by war," for it contained the possibility of American help in stopping Hitler.

"That Mr. Chamberlain, with his limited outlook and inexperience of the European scene, should have possessed the self-sufficiency to wave away the proffered hand stretched out across the Atlantic leaves one, even at this late date, breathless with amazement," he writes.

The cast of characters may be different today, but the elements of sound diplomacy are the same. The present-day moral is that you do not alienate your most powerful friend for the sake of Arabs, and you do not undermine democracy in France for the sake of pleasing the people of western Germany.

'At the Time of Munich'

OTHER LESSONS in Churchill's book also have present-day application. Never make agreements, he says, unless you have the power and will to observe them; always deal with other nations so as to avoid strife and war; never let politics transcend the safety of your country; and, in the case of the Munich agreement of 1938, never put off a war for a year "if, when it comes, it is a far worse war, or harder to win."

For it is Churchill's firm conviction, now as then, that it would have been far better to fight Hitler at the time of Munich than a year later.

Although the first half of Churchill's book deals largely with the blindness and folly of Baldwin, MacDonald and Chamberlain, it does not leave the people or Government of the United States free from blame. The theme, in his own words, is "how the English-speaking peoples through their unwisdom, carelessness and good nature allowed the wicked to rearm." The plural in "English-speaking peoples" is important.

Again and again Churchill contrasts the frequent incantations against evil, which came from Washington, with the desperate urgencies of the prewar years.

He regards our debt and tariff policies as "insane." He condemns our Government no less than his own for trying to disarm France down to the level of a resurgent Germany. He says American policy during the Ethiopian crisis was "to keep out of it all, let things rip and see what happened."

His Omissions

WITH ALL HIS clear judgment, however, Churchill neglects the psychological elements that helped to make British and American policy what it was. He has much to say about British pacifism, but little about the profound effect of the 1914-18 slaughters upon the British mind and spirit. He mentions the "economic blizzard" in the United States in 1929, but neglects its repercussions upon the people who elected the politicians who made foreign policy.

He pays little or no attention to the paralyzing effects of unemployment and the dole, and of economic torments generally, upon the British people who might otherwise have turned their attention to the Hitler danger.

Few 'Disclosures'

THERE ARE comparatively few disclosures in the book; Churchill usually told most of what he knew (and he knew plenty) when he was being pooh-poohed as the Cassandra of the prewar years.

We are told, with ample documentation, that Hitler would have withdrawn almost instantly from the Rhineland in 1936 if the French had shown the slightest willingness to use force against him.

We are told, on the testimony of General von Halder and other captured German commanders, that army officers had a well-laid and well-backed plot to arrest Hitler on the eve of the Munich crisis. Their plot was foiled by Chamberlain's decision to fly to Berchtesgaden for the first of his fateful visits to Hitler.

Churchill describes it as "another example of the very small accidents upon which the fortunes of mankind turn."

For the failure of what he calls "the ramshackle campaign" in Norway in 1940, Churchill puts some of the blame on a British Major General Mackesy, who refused to let the navy attack Narvik on the ground that he had orders not to harm the civilian population.

Measure of His Stature

CHURCHILL'S LUCKY STAR had kept him free of official responsibility for the prewar errors; now, as First Lord of the Admiralty, he had a large share of responsibility for the Norwegian campaign. It is a measure of his stature that he does not put all the blame on Mackesy or others, but takes an ample share upon his own shoulders.

He is in his element in writing the history of the naval actions of the "twilight war." Here is the sense of drama at which Churchill is a master, on the platform or in the printed page. Here is the long suspense, the bitter frustration, and finally the climax, in May of 1940, of "the glare of the most fearful military explosion so far known to man."

Churchill has already delivered the manuscript of his second volume, dealing with England's "finest hour." One can only hope and pray that this indomitable old man will be spared to finish the tragic and terrible story.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

EVEN THE DULLEST apolitical being can meet convention week speculation with a know-it-all attitude by dint of a quick cram course in the weekly magazines. Most concise of these is Sidney Olson's analysis of each candidate's chances in Life, accompanied by a chart of the delegates from each State, their probable vote on the first ballot and clues to later switches.

Biggest preconvention story aside from this question, is the elaborate preparation made for television coverage. Cameras on the convention floor and at the entrance to the hall will be operated on a pool basis by the networks, each one of which will take responsibility for a given day, according to Newsweek. Harold Stassen and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower are the most photogenic of presidential possibilities, video experts told Newsweek reporters.

* * *

"CONVENTIONS frequently make history, but they seldom know what kind of history they are making," Beverly Smith points out in a highly entertaining backward glance at other Republican conventions in the Saturday Evening Post. Many of the truly epoch making decisions have been made either casually or unknowingly, he maintains. Cynics to the contrary, the show isn't always manipulated by a few insiders either, Smith proves.

Incidentally, he poses a good quiz question. "What famous Republican was put in nomination in this same city of Brotherly Love in a speech of only two sentences, the punch line of which was: "I know him to be the prince of good fellows."

The answer's on p. 142.

ALBERT DEUTSCH follows up his outstanding reporting job on reform schools in the March Woman's Home Companion with another in this month's issue, "Our Rejected Children." In it he delves into the factors that send children to reform school, but comes up with no one pat answer. The problem extends beyond delinquent parents and even the community to a delinquent society, the author concludes.

Tooth decay can be partially eliminated by coating teeth with a weak solution of sodium fluoridle, says J. D. Ratcliff, in the Ladies Home Journal. A Nationwide preventive campaign should be undertaken, he contends.

* * *

ANOTHER medical report on "Ovarian Dysfunctions" is made by Maxine Davis in Good Housekeeping. She describes symptoms that range from a bother to a major concern to women and the hormone treatments that have been found to relieve them.

* * *

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL devotes the majority of this issue to the life and times of the Henry Fondas, a couple who, despite the temptations of Hollywood, have resisted keeping up with the Joneses. The Joneses are apparently left with the quite impossible task of keeping up with the Fondas.

There is, however, no sign, at least in the 36 pages devoted to them, that the Fondas have ever made a mistake. They built their house the right way.

And whereas other restless individuals are often forced to seek fun outside the home, the Fondas and their three children are self sufficient. "They shy away from including outsiders in their family fun." When they get in the mood though, "they gather a crowd of 30 or 40 friends" whom they entertain with the most carefully planned informality.

Although "appreciation of art is not innate," admits H. B., for the lucky Fondas "who are blessed with both sensitivity and practicality, the rate of artistic maturity was unusually rapid," and they are now surrounded with just the proper prints, paintings, and portraits of their children.

Who Is the Nominator?

How Anything Goes At Party Convention

By Sterling North

PRESIDENTIAL SWEEPSTAKES: The Story of Political Conventions and Campaigns. By Henry Luther Stoddard. Putnam. 224 pp. $3.

STODDARD

ONCE every four years since 1832 political party chieftains have made it a practice to gather in riotous and noisy conclave to nominate a candidate for the office of President of the United States.

The fact that democracy has been able to survive these quadrennial brawls is proof of its vitality.

As Harold J. Laski, who deeply admires our Nation, says in his brilliant study "The American Presidency" (Harper's): "An American presidential convention is like nothing else in the civilized world . . . the power of money . . . of hidden and corrupt influences . . . of hidden prejudices . . . the mythology of the 'favorite son' . . . the technique of the 'dark horse' candidate . . . and finally, the raucous, complex, and hectic atmosphere of the convention itself; its well improvised enthusiasms; its fantastic horseplay; its immunity to thought; its wild rumors; its incredible conspiracies . . . seem about the worst possible way in which to choose a man to occupy the highest executive post in a democratic commonwealth."

This year three such political orgies will be held in Philadelphia. It is well that the American citizen acquaint himself with the historical and hysterical institution whereby we choose our "king for four years."

Henry Luther Stoddard's book, alas, is far from being a critical or philosophical appraisal of political conventions. The author believes that our present system of nominating our presidential candidates is "as true an expression of party spirit and purpose as can be secured by any polling."

Then this optimistic observer proceeds to disprove his contention by showing how conventions can be boss-ruled, stampeded into backing a "dark horse," and manipulated so as to completely frustrate the will of the people. Nor does Stoddard rise to any real criticism of the archaic electoral college.

The book covers conventions and campaigns from 1840 through 1860, takes a 20-year vacation to 1880 (last stand of the "Old Guard"), then jumps from the Blaine-Cleveland election of 1884 to the Bryan-McKinley battle of 1896.

It shows how Teddy Roosevelt shoved Taft down the reluctant throats of Republicans in 1908, and how Taft retaliated by cheating Roosevelt out of the Republican nomination in 1912.

This book, though completely uncritical, is filled with interesting sidelights: Huey Long holding his and Pat Harrison's delegations in line for the crucial third ballot nominating FDR in 1932 . . . The curious Roosevelt-Garner-Hearst deal that clinched the nomination of FDR at the same convention . . . Garfield, on a point of order, attempting to prevent his own nomination in 1880 . . . What General Sherman really meant when he said, "I won't run if nominated and I won't serve if elected" . . . Wilson in 1912 instructing his floor manager to release his delegates (the manager disobeyed these orders) . . . Bryan switching to Wilson hoping in the ensuing tumult to effect his own nomination.

Many strange and curious things happen at these affairs. For instance Cleveland, Bryan and Willkie all leaped from anonymity to fame at political conventions. And there may still be a few upsets of a similar nature in at least one of this year's dull-sounding derbys.

Several times it has taken "more than 40 ballots and almost two weeks for the delegates to find their man."

Until the Civil War, practically all the conventions were held in Baltimore. Since 1860 the Republicans have met in Chicago 13 times, and elsewhere only eight times. Philadelphia is also a popular convention city, never more so than in 1948.

This is a readable, but not a particularly definitive or weighty volume. It does hit the high spots, and covers all the important conventions, including many that the author has personally attended since 1884. This is the book of a competent and interested reporter, not of a politician nor a political scientist. In other words, without any definite frame of reference, Stoddard tells us more about the activities of the boys in those "little smoke-filled rooms" than we could expect from (say) Harold Laski, but less than we might have had from Flynn or Farley.

But those who would like to draw their own conclusions may prefer just such a record.

Winston-Salem New Site

Wake Forest College Moves in '52

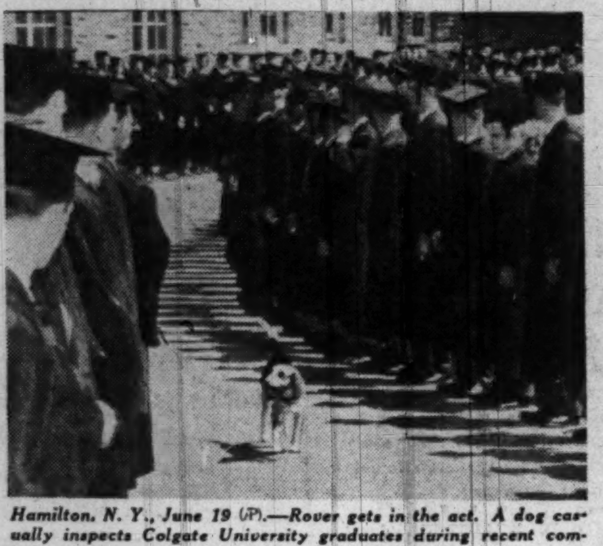
By Mark Ethridge, Jr.

IN the fall of 1952, Wake Forest College will open its doors for the 119th year, but at a new location—Reynolda, N. C., outside of Winston-Salem, instead of Wake Forest.

Since Winston started as a small tobacco market, and gradually became the seat of the Reynolds Tobacco Co. empire, the city has had no cultural side worth mentioning. Salem, an old Moravian town, continued to live partly in the 18th century.

An old college for women, Salem College, has lent itself to Winston-Salem, but for men Wake Forest, 114 miles away, or the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 75 miles away, were the only recourses.

Winston-Salem, overwhelmingly a city of industry, now hopes to become a city of culture and industry. Wake Forest College, when it moves, will be the second large college in the western part of the State.



Hamilton, N. Y., June 19 (AP).—Rover gets in the act. A dog casually inspects Colgate University graduates during recent commencement exercises here

Colleges Near Raleigh

SEVENTY-FIVE per cent of the colleges are located within 30 miles of Raleigh, in the eastern half of the State, but 80 per cent of the population is in the western half. Only other representative in the west is Guilford, located 30 miles east of Winston-Salem, near Greensboro.

For Winston-Salem businessmen, the prospect of a college that will spend some three million dollars a year in the county is most appealing, and the idea of a football stadium attracting 60,000 people only adds to the appeal.

For educators, it is a rare chance to start afresh, with nothing but a long and healthy tradition of 114 unbroken years to date to its credit.

A minor note, not calculated to slow the movement, is the first line of Wake Forest's alma mater. With money provided largely by the Reynolds Foundation, the same family as the makers of Camel cigarettes, Wake Forest's school song starts, "Old Gold and Black."

The move from Wake Forest to Winston-Salem will mark the culmination of nine years of work, started in 1943 as an enlargement plan, and blown up two years later by the Z. Smith Reynolds Fund.

Largest and oldest Baptist college in the State, Wake Forest will follow the steps taken by Trinity College in 1892, which moved and increased in wealth. However, unlike Trinity, now Duke University, Wake Forest will not change its name.

The Baptist Church has, for almost two centuries, dominated the religious scene here. But in recent years Baptists have been anything but an educational force. Lagging far behind Virginia and South Carolina, North Carolina Baptists until recently felt that little could be done to improve their lot.

Endowment Increased

IN 1943 a program was launched to increase the endowment of Wake Forest from three million dollars to five million dollars, with four million dollars being raised, then temporarily called off. This, in contrast to Duke University's 47 million dollars. The Smith Reynolds Foundation, today approaching 11 million dollars with an annual income of $250,000, was set up in 1936, and has since spent about two million dollars in health projects.

On March 6, 1946, the trustees of Wake Forest College announced that the college had been offered the income from the Smith Reynolds Foundation in perpetuity. The terms of the gift were:

1. That Wake Forest move to a site near Winston-Salem.
2. That the name of the college remain the same.
3. That the college raise enough money to build a campus for 2000 students, with a cost originally estimated at six million dollars, but since doubled. The college endowment could not be used for building purposes, but the income from the trust, from 1947 to 1952, would be made available. A deadline of July 1, 1952, was made.
4. That 20 per cent of the income from the trust be plowed back until the fund reaches 50 million dollars. In no year until then would more than $350,000 be given to the college.

To say that the offer was accepted by the Baptist State Convention in unseemly haste is not accurate, but it was at least in a dignified trot. A special session of the convention was called, and voting ran more than 10 to 1 in favor of acceptance. At the same time, a gift of 300 acres on the Reynolds estate was made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Babcock, members of the Reynolds family, with the promise that it would be expanded to 900 acres as needed.

Campus Fate Unsettled

To raise 12 million dollars in five years was a big problem for a school with an endowment of only four million dollars at the time. The physical plant is estimated at eight million dollars and dormitories make up the difference.

The income from the foundation will total about $1,500,000 by deadline time. The North Carolina Baptist Convention, shortly after accepting the gift, pledged to raise an equal amount. Trustees hope to raise another three million dollars from the sale of the buildings on the old campus.

For the next six million, three fourths is expected to come from alumni, special gifts and interested friends of both the college and the Baptists, leaving $1,500,000 to be raised, and this was assigned to Forsyth County, which includes both Reynolda and Winston-Salem.

So far, no plans have been made to sell the old campus, but its fate will be settled this fall. Since the renaissance of Baptist educational activity in the State, it is expected that the buildings will become another Baptist college or junior college.

In April, the fund-raising campaign was begun in Forsyth County, the largest campaign of its kind. Although four years are left before the deadline, unwritten public solicitation rules prevent more than one campaign, especially of this size.

Within a month the goal was oversubscribed by $100,000.

Reports from other sources have not been made, but initial pledges leave little doubt that the goal will be reached.

Now that the financial crisis is past, another tempest has arisen to break the unanimity of groups behind the college. In December, 1946, Jens F. Larson, New York college architect, was retained to draw plans for the new campus. He chose classical revival style and the lid blew off. From all sections of the country architects denounced his plans.

While the tempest rages, construction plans continue, and the chances are slim that when, in September, 1952, the doors are opened, they will be any but classical doors.

It will be an event long and hopefully awaited by the people of western North Carolina.

Airlines Ponder Pooling Services

London, June 19 (AP).—France and Britain are examining the possibilities of pooling certain civil air lines operations, the British Ministry of Civil Aviation says. The inquiries, a spokesman said, are "informal," and are based on the assumption that other European air lines might wish to take part in pooling arrangements.

The ministry would not comment on published reports here that a pooling arrangement with American airlines, to improve transatlantic services and to bring about economies, is also under consideration. Washington dispatches published here said that Belgian and Dutch airlines were studying suggestions that duplicated services be discontinued and that maintenance services be unified.

DISTRICT AFFAIRS

D. C.'s Home Rule Bill Is 'Unfinished Business'

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

THE Washington home rule bill that flew so far in the House is now grounded.

Sponsors, satisfied to let the bill remain "unfinished business," have mapped strategy for next year.

The bill, calling for granting a limited form of home rule to the District and for streamlining its government, went through two days of angry House debate in late May.

It rode past two close votes, 177 to 147 admitting the bill to debate, 182 to 163 refusing to kill it by erasing its enacting clause.

Then the pressure of the drive for passage drained away in the face of filibuster threat.

He'll Try Again

NOW, its chief sponsor, Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) is planning to launch a new fight for passage.

"If I am elected, I shall introduce a new home rule bill early in the new Congress," Auchincloss declared.

One big brickbat thrown at the bill was the complaint by many House members that it was too long, too complicated, and impossible to understand.

Many members admitted privately they had not read the bill. It was 180 pages long. There is now a move to revise the bill by trimming out all the material that can be deleted—without injuring the basic features of the home rule idea.

A Weeding Out

MAIN PROJECT along this line is to leave out of the bill the detailed pattern of District agency reorganization. The thought is that the main outlines of the desired reorganization can be sketched in the report that would accompany the bill to the floor.

Working out of the details would then be left to the home rule government.

Untouched in the revision would be the plans for an elected city council to replace the present appointed District Commissioners, an elected school board to replace the present appointed one, and an elected District nonvoting delegate in the House.

The council-manager setup would remain in the bill, with the manager to be appointed by the council and serve at its pleasure.

But where the present bill recites in detail all the agency shifts that would result in a streamlined setup of 12 departments under the manager, the streamlined bill would leave much of the reorganization to be worked out by the council and manager.

"That alone would be in the direction of a greater degree of home rule for Washington," Auchincloss said.

Other Ideas

THERE have been other ideas for revision. One called for dividing it into four separate bills: (1) reorganization, (2) elected school board, (3), District delegate, and (4) home rule.

Sponsors fear, however, that such a division would lose more than it would gain. It would make for a piecemeal program, they believe, and would in all likelihood leave their first aim, home rule, as the last to be enacted.

Altogether, members of the Eightieth Congress made three separate approaches to some suffrage for the Nation's Capital. Congress killed them all.

Early in the first session, the Senate Judiciary Committee voted, 8 to 4, to bury the resolution of Senator Arthur Capper. It called for a constitutional amendment that would pave the way for giving the District representation in Congrss and its residents a vote in presidential elections.

Another move in early 1947 was Senate District Committee approval for the bill of Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) to set up a commission of Washington citizens to draft a home rule District charter. The plan had a reserved spot on the Senate calendar and died there.

After Year of Existence

Taft-Hartley Act Still Complex

By Max Hall
Associated Press Labor Reporter

THE first year of the Taft-Hartley Act vibrated with activity, but the job of applying this enormously complex law has barely begun.

Legal battles only now are starting to reach the Supreme Court.

The National Labor Relations Board has not yet ruled on a single "unfair labor practice" case arising under the new law.

It was a year ago next Wednesday, June 23, that Congress overrode President Truman's veto and made Taft-Hartley the law of the land.

Hitting the highest spots, here is the score to date:

The courts have issued about a dozen injunctions. Two were against John L. Lewis, one against both union and employer in an atomic energy laboratory, one against the International Typographical Union, one against General Motors.

Used by President

MOST of the injunctions were for the purpose of blocking "secondary boycotts"—that is, of preventing a union from fighting a company by forcing other companies to stop dealing with it.

Mr. Truman has used the "national emergency" weapon five times, appointing inquiry boards and in some instances getting 80-day injunctions when strikes occurred or were threatened in these industries: atomic, coal, meat, telephone, maritime.

Only one provision of the law has been ruled unconstitutional by any court, the ban on union political spending. A Federal district judge made the ruling, dismissing charges against CIO President Philip Murray.

There have been two criminal indictments under Taft-Hartley (but no convictions). Both indictments were under the political spending provision. One was the CIO case, the other against the AFL Painters Union in Hartford, Conn.

About 85,000 labor leaders have filed non-Communist oaths, required under the act if a union wishes to avail itself of NLRB services. All the officers of 159 national unions and 9035 local unions have filed affidavits.

The main holdouts are Lewis' United Mine Workers, the CIO Steelworkers and a dozen "left wing" CIO unions. Lewis failed to carry the AFL along with him, in a fight against the affidavit requirement, which was the first big swirling storm under the law, and it was the first important provision to be fully interpreted by rulings of the NLRB.

Unions File More

TAFT-HARTLEY made unions subject to "unfair labor practice" charges for the first time, but unions still are filing far more charges against employers than employers are filing against unions. In 2704 cases, 2116 involve charges against employers.

(The figures on plant elections and "unfair" charges are for the period starting last August 22, when the Taft-Hartley provisions which are administered by the NLRB went into effect, and ending May 1. No figures are yet available for May and June.)

The favorite charge against unions has been that of secondary boycotts. The favorite charge against employers has been that of firing workers for union activities.

Some of these "unfair" cases arising under Taft-Hartley have been ruled upon by NLRB trial examiners, but none by the five-man board itself.

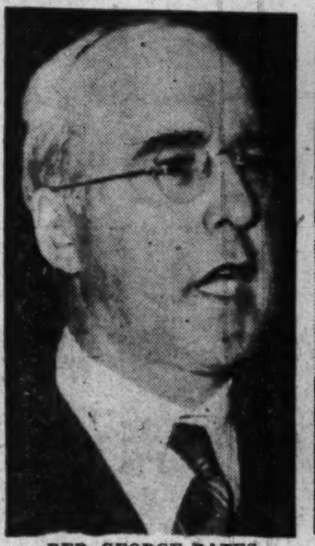
The board, however, has been extremely busy with cases involving the choice of collective bargaining representatives. It has also issued rulings in many "unfair" cases which started under the old Wagner act.

The investigating and prosecuting arm of the NLRB, now operating as an independent agency under General Counsel Robert N. Denham, has been overloaded with duties, too.

The backlog of NLRB cases pending at various levels climbed to an all-time record of 14,467 on May 1. Many grave questions are still to be answered by the labor board and the courts. For example, how far does the law go in the control of picketing? Is a union always responsible for the actions of pickets? When is a peaceful picket line illegal?

The next 12 months may bring the answers.

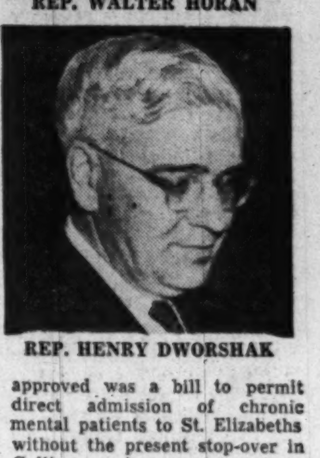
New Hands to Grapple Issues



REP. GEORGE BATES

REP. C. DOUGLASS BUCK

REP. WALTER HORAN



REP. HENRY DWORSHAK

CONGRESS' main decision about the District this year was to guarantee that major District decisions would be left to a future Congress.

Congress let the excuse of too little time sidetrack the home rule bill, which had as an aim to relieve Congress of time-consuming District trivia.

Congress stifled chances for an early effort at clearing Washington's slums, and it squelched the idea of tapping Federal and District funds to bring Washington's private hospitals up to modern standards.

While major District projects fell by the wayside, Congress approved the biggest city budget for Washington in history, crowding the total so close to the 100-million-dollar mark that before the next 12 months are done that figure will probably be passed.

Same Problems

THEN it linked the problem of District financing to the issue of Federal pay raises whose outcome was uncertain until the closing hours of the session.

Next year it will be the suffrage issue, and the question of what to do about Washington's slums, and other unsettled major problems.

Some old hands at the Capitol in the management of District affairs will be out of the picture. Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), a leading figure in House handling of District legislation for many years and chairman in this Congress of the House District Committee, will not be back.

Changes in committee assignments following election may bring an entirely new lineup to head the committees which handle District business. The key District figures include Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), chairman of the Senate District Committee; Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) and Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho), heads of the District budget writing committees; and Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) and Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), heads of the District tax-writing committees.

Records of this year's District business at the Capitol showed anew that one member or a few with a solid objection could override the legislative efforts of the many to deal with District problems.

Two years ago Congress authorized a 10-year program of slum clearance for Washington, to be underwritten by a 20-million-dollar Federal fund. The idea was to enlist private enterprise in large-scale projects to redevelop slum areas, with a municipal agency assembling the necessary land. This spring, the first real move to make a start on the program was blocked by refusal of appropriations leaders to approve funds. Sponsors of the original program accepted the move without show of protest.

The idea of extending Federal grants to private Washington hospitals to modernize their plants—with the District to repay 30 per cent of the costs—received the backing of a House District Committee majority. Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) renewed the fight which blocked a similar program two years ago, and the plan wound up in a committee pigeonhole.

In the Senate, Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) went to the floor in a single-handed drive to block the sales tax plan backed for the District by the House and a majority of the Senate District Committee, of which he is ranking minority member. He tied the bill tightly to the uncertainties of the closing adjournment rush.

In contrast to the stack of outcast bills, there were important positive District decisions.

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), long a practicing physician, worked through many conferences with legal and medical officials to develop a new approach toward handling persons of abnormal sexual behavior in the District. On the strictly law-enforcement side, the bill sharply increased penalties for sex crimes, and put extra heavy penalties on offenses involving children.

On the medical side, the bill set up a system for routing so-called sexual psychopaths to St. Elizabeths for treatment. Also approved was a bill to permit direct admission of chronic mental patients to St. Elizabeths without the present stop-over in Gallinger. A separate measure calls for permitting voluntary admissions to St. Elizabeths Hospital without the present complicated routine of legal commitment.

Settle Armory Matter

REPRESENTATIVE Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) took the lead in negotiating a compromise settlement of the lengthy feud over how nonmilitary activities at the District National Guard Armory should be handled. The answer approved by Congress was a three-member board, representing the National Guard, the District Commissioners, and the public.

District rent control was extended to March 31, 1949, with some modifications. Congress, doling out daylight saving a summer at a time, let Washington have it again this year. With caution keyed to uncertainty about future District finances, Congress told Washington firemen they could have a five-day week, but not until six months after money for it is provided. Firemen now work six days a week.

Two big new public buildings in Washington were given the go-ahead signal by Congress—the 18-million-dollar Federal Courts building to be built at 3d st. and Constitution ave. nw. and the 22-million-dollar General Accounting Office building to go at 5th and G sts. nw.

But the main conclusion Congress wrote on District affairs was the familiar note "to be continued."—EDWARD RYAN.

Pilots Map Safe Speeds For Storms

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Aviation Reporter.

HOW much thunder is there in a thunderstorm?

A select group of pilots bucked wind, rain, hail and lightning for two years to get the answer. Now there is a chart of safe speeds in thunderstorms for nine types of transport planes.

The work was done at the Air Force all-weather flying center near Wilmington, Ohio. It was a joint project of the Air Force, Navy, Weather Bureau and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Other projects are concerned with the effect of rough air on high speed aircraft. Only the thunderstorm project under Capt. Lou C. Kappil has been completed and released, however.

Low and High Speeds

THE chart shows safe speed ranges from a low of about 135 miles an hour for a C-47 (military counterpart of the DC-3) to a top of 280 miles an hour for the C-97 (military version of the Boeing strato-cruiser).

The study concerned the buffeting from vertical wind gusts, the beating from hail, formation of ice and danger of lightning. It learned that average thunderstorms have vertical gusts of up to 30 feet per second (about 20 miles an hour). Heavy thunderstorms have gusts up to 43 feet per second.

The report noted that flying would be prohibited in such weather.

Five Northrop P-51 black widow night fighters were used in the project. This plane was chosen because of its rigidity, speed, high altitude performance, radar equipment and the fact it has two engines. They made 2000 flights without major accident.

Enter at 5 Levels

THUNDERSTORMS were hunted with long-range search radar at the airbase. The P-51's were sent directly to the storm, entering at five levels—6000, 10,000, 15,000, 20,000 and 25,000 feet. This gave a picture of the inside of the storm at all levels normally used by transports.

In addition to personal observation of the storm characteristics, each plane's recording instruments were photographed every four seconds.

Big Concerns Speed Hunt For Gulf Oil

NEW ORLEANS, June 19 (AP).—Major oil companies are stepping up their search for the liquid black gold treasure buried under the gulf's waters off the Louisiana coast—even though they're not sure yet who owns it.

While Federal and State governments argue over title to the rich offshore gulf bottom, new wells are being drilled from man-made hurricane-proof islands of steel and wood.

The companies are operating on leases from the State, and have paid Louisiana more than 16 million dollars for drilling rights in the past four years, assuming that Congress will pass a pending bill confirming State ownership of bottoms to a distance 27 miles from shore.

Interest High

INTEREST in ownership of the coastal bottoms has been particularly high since Kerr McGee industries brought in the first producing well in the open waters of the gulf last November 14.

The Kerr McGee wildcat came in at about 1700 feet, in rather shallow water 10 miles off Pointe Au Fer Island, about 85 miles southwest of New Orleans.

The State Conservation Department has allowed production of 400 barrels a day from the discovery well. The company says it could make 900. However, there hasn't been any commercial production at all, pending settlement with the Coast Guard of details as to types of barges and pipelines which may be used to carry off the fuel.

Some 20 companies have leased sections of the gulf floor, and plan definite operations costing 25 to 30 million dollars.

An Ambitious Venture

THE Humble project shows how ambitious an initial venture must be in the gulf operations. The drilling base is as high as a 17-story building.

Humble's mammoth platform is the first to be erected in water as deep as 50 feet. It covers a half acre, and is anchored by steel piles driven nearly 200 feet into the gulf floor. Parts exposed to waves are wound with layers of glass, fiber and tar to prevent corrosion.

The derrick floor rises 60 feet above the water. Two decks, each a third the size of a football field, provide living quarters for 54 men, racks for 15,000 feet of pipe, space for much other equipment, and for enough food and materials for two weeks' operations without new supplies.

Jersey Formula

'Know Thy Neighbor,' Given Trial

By Hilliard A. Schendorf

SOMERVILLE, N. J., June 19 (AP).—A New Jersey county peopled by farmers, factory hands and millionaires is trying a formula of being neighborly to solve its problems.

"We've been growing too much apart," explains the father of the idea, advertising executive Gerard B. Meynell. "Folks just don't know one another's problems."

If people understood each other better, he argues, there wouldn't be so many problems. There wouldn't be so many disputes either.

"And that goes for the world," he says.

The idea of a neighborliness campaign started over lunch a couple of months ago. Meynell and Sampson Smith, supervising principal of Somerville schools, decided people don't think enough about each other.

The talk led to a meeting of 75 civic leaders. The committee quickly expanded to 800.

The county has wealthy estates in the northern part, booming industrial areas in the south, with broad, rich farmlands in between.

"We thought if we could get together those diverse interests, maybe there is hope for the world getting a little closer together," Maynell said.

A five-way campaign was planned:

1. Three county-wide forums, winding up June 22 with a coast-to-coast radio broadcast (America's Town Meeting of the Air, NBC).
2. Volunteer speakers before local civic, religious, fraternal and union groups.
3. Town meetings wherever there are local problems, to "just talk things over."
4. Open houses, with farmers entertaining factory hands and industrial plants inviting the farmers.
5. A display of historic antiques to remind folks of their historic heritage.

Well-known speakers like Dr. Benjamin A. Cohen, assistant secretary general of the United Nations, spoke at the first general forum.

The day sessions were given over to Somerset County public schools children. Adults took over at night and everybody had a voice.

Pieretti Needs Help but Beats Nats, 9-5

Chico Goes 7 Innings as Nats Drop 7th in Row

By Morris Siegel,
Post Reporter

Chicago, Ill., June 19.—It was 9-5, Chicago over the Nats today, and the White Sox have only themselves to blame that they didn't score eight or nine more times.

Five Nat pitchers certainly did nothing to stop them. The Hose paddled 17 hits to all corners of Comiskey Field to keep themselves warm and a private gathering of 1157 topcoated customers delighted.

In dropping their seventh straight, the Nats also returned Chico Pieretti to the winner's circle, something they were rarely able to do for the little righthander when he was on their payroll, only two weeks ago.

Chico Walks Nine

Pieretti's debut with the Sox wasn't a glittering affair. He allowed only four hits in the six and two third innings he worked, but the nine walks he issued kept him in a stew most of the time.

He was finally excused in the seventh inning after he had walked his ninth man and yielded Washington's fifth and last run. His successor, Howard Judson, finished up for the little man, permitting Washington's fifth hit, but no more runs.

Early Wynn long-time friend and former roommate of Pieretti's when they both wore the Nat colors, was called upon to oppose his ex-cohort, but he offered practically no opposition.

Wynn Shelled From Hill

Wynn lasted only 1 1/3 innings, just long enough to pitch two-run, four-hit ball and be branded with his seventh setback.

Three second-inning doubles blew Wynn off the windswept mound and brought on Earl Harrist, obtained from the Sox in the Pieretti swap. Reliefer Harrist was of no immediate relief and neither were those who followed him.

After their second-inning explosion against Wynn which resulted in a pair of runs, the cellar-dwellers teed off on Harrist for four hits and two more runs in third to vault into a 4-0 lead before the Nats could dent home plate.

Kuhel's clan made it in the fourth, twice, when Pieretti issued three walks, his first hit—a single to Jake Early—and a fly by Al Kozar.

Ferrick Also Raked

In the sixth the Nats got back into the ball game when Earl Wooten's triple and Early's fly added up to another run, but the Nats were out of it again in the lower half of the frame when the Sox punished Tom Ferrick for five hits and three more runs to own a 7-3 lead.

Stewart's single, Coan's triple off the scoreboard in right center, and Vernon's infield out brought the Nats up to 7-5 in the seventh and also saw Pieretti retreat.

The Nats counldn't do anything with Judson, but the Sox found Milo Candini easy, wrenching their final two runs from him in the eighth. Pat Seerey, who got three hits, used his third single to chase across the eighth and ninth runs.

IN SHORT—The Nats are no cinch to remain in sixth place before they leave here tomorrow . . . They have a Sunday doubleheader with the Sox and a loss in both games would make them close neighbors to the Chisox, who are now a few pegs below the Browns . . . Ray Scarborough and Sid Hudson are the Nat hurlers tomorrow, with Lefty Bill Wight, former Yankee, and Al Gettel, former Indian, serving for the Sox . . .

There's more to this harness racing than the trotting (right). At left, Meredith Capper, Falls Church nursery man who trains and drives two horses, checks on his sulky seat while Danny, his 9-year-old son, watches.. In the center is picturesque Ross Rapalee, 60-year-old leather craftsman who's been repairing harness equipment for horsemen for 20 years from Maine to Florida. The activity was photographed at Laurel Raceway which inaugurates its 20-night pari-mutuel session tomorrow

JERSEY JOE WALCOTT is bucking a double jinx in his quest for Joe Louis' title on Wednesday night in Yankee Stadium. The world's heavyweight title has never changed hands in a New York ball park, and none of the nine men who fought Louis a second time ever lasted the limit . . . Walcott predicts he will be the new champion but there's always one large difference between being picked to beat Louis by the betting fans and picking yourself to beat Louis. Unlike the betting man, the fighter who says he can beat Joe Louis could be not only wrong, but dead wrong . . . Louis is making his twenty-fifth defense of the title he won from Jimmy Braddock 11 years ago at Chicago, and has put his championship on the line against challengers more times than did Johnson, Willard, Dempsey, Tunney, Schmeling, Sharkey, and Baer collectively . . . five men have had Louis on the floor, however. Braddock put him down with a right uppercut, Schmeling floored him with a long right, Walcott's short rights put Louis down twice, and Buddy Baer and Tony Galento dumped him to the canvas with lefts . . . Louis has always maintained the man who hit him hardest was Max Baer, and he says the hardest punch he ever threw was the straight right hand off his shoulder that knocked Lou Nova out in the sixth round at the Polo Grounds in 1941.

THE GROWTH OF HARNESS RACING has created such a demand for horseshoers that the ancient art is now being taught in three colleges—Rutgers, California and Michigan State. The United States Trotting Association is sponsoring the courses for returned GIs at those institutions of higher learning . . . the St. Louis Cardinals are so desperate for catchers they are now eyeing 39-year-old Bill Baker, their farmhand who is hitting .323 for Columbus of the American Association . . . Pasadena's Rose Bowl after scorning professional football for years, has capitulated and will follow the lead of the Los Angeles Coliseum in renting its plant to the pros. First in will be the Los Angeles Dons and the San Francisco 49'ers, who have scheduled an exhibition game for August 18 . . . the empire of World Middleweight Champion Tony Zale does not include the Empire State. New York has taken no action to recognize him as champ following his knockout of Rocky Graziano who was under suspension in that State . . . There's nothing timid about the deer that forage in New Hampshire, apparently. The Manchester Union reports: "State Road Patrolman George Merchant says two large deer in quest of clover recently drove his watchdog off the lawn and into a nearby shed." . . . unlike running horses who reel off their fastest quarter mile early in the running, the trotter's last quarter is their fastest.

WHEN WHITE SOX PITCHER Joe Haynes returned to the mound Friday night after a two-weeks absence occasioned by a badly bruised knee, the first batter he faced was Eddie Yost whose line drive had put Haynes on the shelf . . . which recalls that after Cecil Travis was beaned a few years back and spent three weeks in Georgetown Hospital, the first pitcher he faced on his return to the lineup was the man who beaned him, Thornton Lee. Travis was so bat-shy against Lee he tripled on the first pitch . . . the late Lou Gehrig once lost credit for three triples against Washington pitching when rain stopped the game before the fifth inning was completed . . . and Harry Heilmann once hit a home run over the right field wall in Griffith Stadium that didn't count. He had batted out of turn . . . Johnny Longden, currently the country's leading rider, is not the first jockey to pilot 3000 winners in a career. Though it might be argued he was not strictly a jockey, one Marcus Aurelius Liber (circa 350 A. D.) boasted 3000 chariot victories, according to "Rome and the Romans" written by Grant Showerman . . . Bobby Brown, the Yankees' hard-hitting, non-fielding second baseman, is putting the pressure for a regular job at second base on Manager Bucky Harris under threat of quitting to pursue his medical degree . . . Clark Griffith says of Connie Mack's outburst in firing Pitchers Bill Dietrich and Nelson Potter, "Connie's entitled to lose his temper every 20 years."

GIL DODDS, THE FAMED MILER, and Pole Vaulter Bob Richards of the Illinois A. C. won't be the only ordained ministers who'll compete in the National AAU track and field meet July 22 at Marquette U. The Rev. Harold O. Massie of Blue Springs, Nebr., has entered the 10,000-meter run . . . Tom Ferrick of the Nats, will be honored in home plate ceremonies at Shibe Park June 29 by his fellow members of the Augustine Social and Beneficial Association of Philadelphia . . . Sportfolio reports that Hal Newhouser was so disgusted with his eight wins and 17 defeats after the 1943 season, he asked to be traded. A deal with Cleveland for Jim Bagby was arranged until Tiger Owner Walter O. Briggs stepped in and called it off . . . One of the first 1949 Fords to be delivered in Washington will be delivered to Yankee Catcher Gus Niarhos, the only player of Greek extraction in the major leagues. It will be a gift from the Ahepa Athletic Association in home plate ceremonies July 9 when the Yankees play the Nats . . . the first man in the American League ever called out for passing a runner on the bases after hitting a home run was Pat Gharrity of Washington. It happened in Chicago in the early '20s. After the umpires made that decision, a rule covering it was written into the books . . . Mel Allen, who brodacast the blow-by-blow of the last Zale-Graziano fight, was one of the student managers of the Alabama Rose Bowl team that beat Washington State in 1931.

Pari-Mutuel Harness Racing Starts Tomorrow at Laurel

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

MARYLAND JOINS in the country's harness racing revival tomorrow night with the opening of Laurel Raceway.

The $600,000 trotting plant on Route 1 midway between Baltimore and Washington, begins a 20-night meeting with an eight-race card featured by the $1000 Inaugural.

First post is 8:15 o'clock and the last race is scheduled to be over by 11:15.

Harness racing, time-honored country fair sport, is booming with the help of a few twentieth century touches.

Not the least of these is pari-mutuel wagering. Familiar to thoroughbred racing fans will be the $2 to $50 straight, place and show windows and Laurel also will provide daily double action on the first two races.

Together with the betting attraction, racing under lights and an improved mobile starting gate have combined to make harness racing one of the fastest growing sports in the Nation.

In the past seven years trotting purses have increased sevenfold until they reached a record $7,528,870 last year.

THE LAUREL RACEWAY Association hastening to get aboard the gravy train is headed by Dick Hutchison, jr., 30-year-old World War II lieutenant colonel. He's assisted principally by Tom Claggett, jr., equally youthful secretary-treasurer.

They have a sizeable investment in their gamble that harness racing will take hold in thoroughbred-conscious Maryland.

At the present the nearest harness track is Harrington, Del. In this community of less than 2000, located 63 miles from any large city, a crowd of 3741 bet $80,044 on opening night.

In true race track tradition, construction of Laurel has been a battle to meet tomorrow night's deadline. Late Friday only part of the roof was on the grandstand; the area under the stands still had to be surfaced and enough else had to be done that it didn't seem possible the track could open.

But the Laurel officials quietly maintained that they'd be ready.

Pending the building of the clubhouse, now shelved until next season, a flat admission price of $1.50 will be charged.

With a 10-horse field the limit on the 100-foot wide half-mile oval, most of tomorrow's eight races will have nine or ten entries. Exception is the $1000 pacing feature with five.

Going in The Inaugural, they're about the best pacers among the 500 assorted standardbreds on the grounds. In the order of their post positions and with probable odds, the field includes Edgar Hanover, 8-1; Mr. Morris Scott, 4-1; Prince James, 7-5; Watson E. Direct, 7-2, and LaTosca, 6-1.

How to Go

The new Laurel Raceway is located right on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard, U. S. Route 1, 1½ miles past Laurel. Special bus service direct to the track is being provided. Capital Transit buses leave 1416 F st. nw., from 6 until 7:30 p. m. Buses from the Grey Line terminal, 1315 New York ave., leave from 5:15 to 7:30 p. m. Buses will remain at the track and return after the seventh and eighth races.

Tribe Snaps Streak, Beats Macks, 4 to 0

Cleveland, June 19 (AP).—The league-leading Cleveland Indians, who haven't been getting much pitching lately, got plently of it today when Bob Muncrief and Russ Christopher combined for a brilliant three-hit shutout as the Indians downed the Philadelphia Athletics 4 to 0.

The win snapped a five-game losing streak for the Indians and boosted their first place margin over the pesky A's to two games.

Muncrief throttled the A's with three singles for the first seven innings, but was forced to retire after that stanza when a line drive from Hank Majeski's bat struck him on the elbow of his pitching arm.

Sain Keeps Braves on Top

Boston, June 19 (AP).—Righthander Johnny Sain protected the Boston Braves' half-game first-place lead by shutting out the Cincinnati Reds, 5-0, with a six-hit performance tonight before a 24,425 crowd.

The Tribesmen gained all eight of their hits at the expense of Tom Hughes during the first five frames.

While winning his eighth game, including two previous shutouts, and his fifth in a row, Sain was in trouble twice.

He filled the bases with none out in the first, on singles by Frank Baumholtz and Johnny Wyrostek and a pass to Grady Hatton. But then Hank Sauer whiffed and Babe Young hit into a double play.

Bucs Score Three in Ninth To Defeat Philadelphia, 7 to 6

Philadelphia, June 19 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates kept pace with the league leading Boston Braves today, coming up with three runs in the ninth inning on one hit to defeat the Philadelphia Phillies, 7-6. The victory kept the Pirates one-half game behind the Braves who beat Cincinnati, 5-0, in a night game.

It was the sixth straight victory for the Bucs and the third successive triumph for Rookie Bob Chesnes, who has yet to be defeated.

The Phils socked Chesnes for 12 safeties and held an apparently safe 6-4 lead going into the ninth, but Walt Dubiel, pitching in relief of Schoolboy Rowe, promptly ran into a peck of trouble.

He gave up a single to Johnny Hopp and then walked Frank Gustine. Dixie Walker sacrificed and reached first when Dick Sisler dropped the throw.

Ralph Kiner's run-producing fly brought Kenny Heintzelman in to pitch. He promtply uncorked a wild pitch allowing the tying run to score.

The winning counter came across the plate on Max West's pinch-hit fly to right. Kirby Higbe replaced Chesnes on the mound in the ninth and held the Phils hitless.

Johnson Paces Yanks' Win

St. Louis, June 19 (AP).—Led by Billy Johnson, who drove in seven runs, the New York Yankees defeated the St. Louis Browns, 10 to 5, to even the series at one victory apiece.

The Yankee third-sacker slammed two home runs, one with the bases loaded. Johnson hit his first off the starter and loser, Ned Garver, with one mate aboard in the sixth to feature a four-run attack. His second round-tripper came in the ninth off Lefty Clem Dreisewerd with the bases loaded.

Ed Lopat received benefit of the Yankees' 10-hit assault to record his fourth victory against five losses. The triumph enabled the Yankees to move within a game and a half of the second-place Philadelphia Athletics.

Babe Ruth was presented before the game with a Sporting News trophy in recognition of his service to the youth of America.

Sauer, Blackie, Stallcup Chased By Umpire Goetz

Boston, June 19 (AP).—Cincinnati's Hank Sauer, who leads the National League in runs batted in with 51 and home runs with 19, tonight was ejected by Umpire Larry Goetz after arguing over a called third strike in the first inning of tonight's game against the Boston Braves.

The Reds had three men on base and none out.

Sauer was followed almost immediately by Pitcher Ewell Blackwell, who shouted from the bench.

Virgil Stallcup, Reds' shortstop, was ejected in the next inning for complaining over a called third strike.

Short of infielders through injuries before the game began, Cincy Manager Johnny Neun sent veteran Augie Galan to left field, Outfielder Danny Litwhiler to third and moved Grady Hatton from third to short.

Goetz also ordered the Reds off the steps of the dugout until Neun protested the Braves were on the steps of their dugout. The Boston crowd applauded the Cincinnati manager.

Bob Feller, Winless for a Month, Decides To Limit Himself to Pitching for a While CLEVELAND, June 19 (AP).—Bob Feller says he'll stick strictly to pitching from now on.

The erstwhile ace of the Cleveland Indians' mound corps announced that he is curtailing all his activities, including between-game physical exercises, in an effort to recover his mastery.

"I have notified my commercial sponsors that for the rest of the summer I will be unable to appear at their various awards luncheons or any other public functions," Feller said.

Bob hasn't won a game since May 19 and has dropped five in a row for an unimpressive season record of five wins and seven defeats. He makes his next start tomorrow against the Philadelphia Athletics.

Feller repeated that he never has considered his various connections outside of baseball a handicap in his work for the Indians.

"But other people think they are," he added, "and I'm certainly willing to make the test. I'm willing to try anything to regain winning form. Some of the folks on whom I cancelled appointments didn't like it. But my appearances wouldn't have much value to them or anyone else if I couldn't start winning again."

HE HAS CANCELED two autograph parties in book stores handling his latest book, "How To Pitch," and also has withdrawn from his activities for a confectionery firm.

"My spare time schedule is absolutely clear," he said. "Except for small dinners in the homes of friends, or occasional visits to hospitals, my so-called extracurricular activity is over for the summer."

ASKED IF HIS WITHDRAWAL from public activities also included abandonment of the barnstorming plans which have occupied much of his attention the last two years, Feller replied:

"I'm not even thinking about barnstorming. In the first place, unless I win some games, no one would be interested in watching me barnstorm. In the second place, if I can carry my share of the pitching load, we'll be in the fight for the Pennant. And I've said it a thousand times if I've said it once—I'd rather pitch in one World Series game than make the most profitable barnstorming trip in history."

Nats Sign Kelly, Tar Heel Slugger

James Kelly, outfielder of the University of North Carolina team that went to the finals of the national collegiate baseball tournament last week, has been signed by the Washington club.

Vice President Calvin Griffith announced yesterday that Kelly will join the Nats' Charlotte farm team of the Tri-State League tomorrow. He was signed on the recommendation of Scout Ike Reeder, who termed Kelly "the best college prospect in the South." Kelly, a power hitter, bats left handed and throws right. He is 5 feet 9 inches, weighs 180, and is reported to have a fast turn of speed.

Old Bobo Unemployed Again

New York, June 19 (AP).—The New York Giants today released outright Veteran Pitchers Bobo Newsom and Thorton Lee and announced the recall from Minneapolis of Southpaw Monte Kennedy.

Kennedy, who has been sent down to the American Association for more seasoning, hurled a no-hitter for the Millers recently. The Giants expect him to arrive in time tomorrow to pitch against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Both Newsom and Lee had been signed as free agents. They haven't been able to give much help to Mel Ott's weak mound staff.

It's Willie Pep

Champion Is In as Sub on Fight Show

Flint, Mich., June 19 (AP).—In an unusual move, a world's boxing champion was signed today as a substitute fighter on next Friday's fight card here.

Featherweight Champ Willie Pep of Hartford reached terms at a Detroit meeting and will trade punches with Luther Burgess of Detroit in an overweight, nontitle scrap at Atwood Stadium.

Pep will sub for Jackie Graves, who suffered a hand injury in a fight at Duluth last Wednesday.

11-Inning No-Hitter

New Bern, N. C., June 18 (AP).—Ernie Sawyer of New Bern achieved a no-hit baseball game the hard way—flinging 11 innings of hitless ball at Rocky Mount tonight before New Bern finally won, 1-0.

Veteran observers termed the 16-year-old hurler's stint on the mound "the best in Coastal Plain League history." The league is Class D.

Sawyer, whose home is Waterbury, Conn., walked the first batter to face him. He didn't issue a pass thereafter.

In the eleventh, Jim Gudger, Sawyer's mound opponent, walked a man with the bases loaded to force in the winning run.

Foul Hits Ump

Brooklyn, June 19 (AP).—Umpire Dusty Boggess, struck on the collarbone by a foul tip, was forced to retire at the start of the third inning of today's Chicago-Brooklyn game. Umpire Butch Henline relieved Boggess behind the plate while Umpire Bill Stewart took over the base assignments.

Blue Blood Boiling

London, June 19 (AP).—Britain's blue blood horse players were gone from fashionable Ascot today with nothing in the pockets of their hired gray pants and black coats, and regret in their hearts.

The bookies trimmed them all.

Throughout the four-day Royal Ascot meeting the longshots rolled home with a monotony that brought smiles to the round, red faces of the bookmakers and frowns to society bettors.

"It was one of the blackest of "black Ascots" in history— and Ascot is noted for the demise of the bettors' favorites.

William Hill, one of London's biggest bookies, said: It's been a good week for us—we're quite happy."

British Olympics in Form

London, June 19 (AP).—Jack Holden, 41-year-old British Olympic hope, won the amateur Athletic Association marathon race from Windsor Castle to Chiswick for the second straight year today.

Holden covered the 26 miles, 385 yards in 2 hours 36 minutes 44.6 seconds in heavy rain.

In an Olympic tune-up at Chiswick Stadium, E. MacDonald Bailey of the West Indies was beaten for the second time in seven days in the 100-yard dash. Alistair McCorquodale of the London Athletic Club, caught Bailey 30 yards from the tape and won in :09.9.

McCorquodale also took the 220-yard race in :22.1, the fastest time recorded in Britain this season.

Rain and a heavy track handicapped the athletes.

Gleeson's .339 Leads League

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—Jimmy Gleeson of Milwaukee slammed his way to the top of the American Association's individual batting standing this week with a .390 average.

Following in order are Joe Muffoletto, Kansas City, .373; Mel Hicks, St. Paul, 354; Earl Turner, Indianapolis, .351, and Al Rosen, Kansas City, .350. St. Paul's Eric Tipton's .342 average includes league-high totals of 143 total bases and 14 home runs.

New Yorkers End 5-Game Loss Streak

New York, June 19 (AP).—Using their most potent weapon to end a five-game losing streak, the New York Giants today lofted four home runs into the stands to overcome the St. Louis Cardinals, 10-1.

The quartet of round-trippers gave the pounding Polo Grounders 11 home runs in three days and 63 for the season.

Behind the heavy barrage, Clint Hartung had an easy time coasting to his fifth victory. The tall righthander spaced eight hits and held the mighty Stan Musial hitless.

Giants Go to Work

The Giants went to work early on Red Munger, scoring in the second inning when big John Mize walloped his twelfth home run into the upper rightfield stands. A walk and a pair of singles by Enos Slaughter and Ron Northey enabled the Cards to knot the score at 1-1 in the fourth.

Sid Gordon's tenth home run followed by doubles by Billy Rigney and Whitey Lockman and a single by Buddy Kerr gave the Giants three runs in their half of the fourth.

Marshall Homers

The Giants added another run off Relief Pitcher Gerry Staley in the fifth. Willard Marshall joined the home-run brigade, collecting his seventh round tripper in the seventh with two aboard. Gordon smacked his eleventh of the season and his second of the day in the eighth. It came with one on.

Munger, who now has failed to go the route since May 18, was charged with his sixth loss. He has won three.

Bosox Survive Tiger Rally, Triumph, 9-7

Detroit, June 19 (AP).—The booming Boston Red Sox got away to a 9-1 lead over Detroit today, and needed it all, as they ran their winning streak to four games wth a narrow 9-to-7 decision over the Tigers.

Detroit, held to five hits by Jack Kramer in eight innings, came to life in the ninth after waiting out a 33-minute delay because of rain.

The Tigers scored four runs after two were out in their last turn at bat and had men on first and third with the tying runs when Boo Ferriss, working in relief, got George Kell on a pop fly to end the game.

Boston's twelfth win in 15 games moved the Red Sox within a half-game of the first division.

A walk and three straight hits, including Stan Spence's three-run homer, chased Virgil Trucks from the box trailing 4-0 in the first inning before he retired a man. Hal White was touched for the other five Boston runs in the fourth, two of them scoring on Johnny Pesky's first home run of the season.

Backed by 13 hits, Bob Rush, 22-year-old righthander, pitched his first complete game of the season to register his second triumph. He has lost four. He walked none and allowed only seven hits, including Gil Hodges' second homer in as many days.

Harry Taylor started for the Dodgers and was charged with the loss. Joe Hatten finished.

Plate Umpire Dusty Boggess suffered a possible collar bone fracture when struck by a foul tip off Ed Miskis' bat in the third inning. He was sent to hospital for X-rays.

Locke Posts 70-200, Leads By 13 Strokes

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—Bobby Locke shot his third straight subpar round at Midlothian today, banging a 36, 34—70 for a 54-hole total of 200 and a 13-stroke lead in the $15,000 Chicago Victory golf tourney.

The 30-year-old pro from Johannesburg added the 70, one under par for the 6587-yard course, to pull up at the three-quarter mark 13 strokes under regulation figures.

Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., required a 75 for a 214 tally to give up his second place spot. He was nine taps behind Locke yesterday.

John Bulla of Phoenix, with three 71's; Skip Alexander of Lexington, N C., and Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago were tied for second with 213 aggregates.

Alexander fashioned a 72 today while Mangrum posted a 35, 33—68 for the lowest third round. He collected an extra $200 for this job.

Heafner was tied at 214 with George Fazio of Chicago and Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kans. Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., and Henry Ransom, of Chicago, were locked in the 215 bracket.

Atlantan Wins Southern Golf

Atlanta, June 19 (AP).—Atlanta's Gene Dahlbender, jr., won the Southern amateur golf championship this afternoon by defeating George Hamer, jr., of Columbus, Ga., 3 and 2, over the 6339-yard Capitol City Country Club course. The 36-hole championship match was a give-and-take proposition through the first nine holes of the afternoon session.

On the front leg, both the new 24-year-old champion and the runner-up, had 35's, 1 under par. At the turn they were also even. On the par 5, 545-yard tenth, Hamer went into the rough twice and in a trap at the edge of the green.

Hamer's score skyrocketed to a 6 while Dahlbender came out of the same trap to card a birdie 4.

At the end of the seesaw 18-hole round this morning, the count was all square in both strokes and holes. Neither Dahlbender or Hamer ever held more than a one-hole edge.

Foot Trouble of Top Players Makes Frankie Parker Cinch

By Gayle Talbot

London, June 19 (AP).—An outbreak of foot trouble among the top players threatens to take some of the gloss off the Wimbledon tennis championships starting Monday.

The field of men entrants was nothing extra to begin with, and now both Gardnar Mulloy of Miami and Jack Bromwich, the eminent Australian, have come down with ailing dogs which almost surely will hamper their play.

This appears to leave Frankie Parker of Los Angeles an absolute standout to win the title surrendered by Jack Kramer when he turned professional.

Bromwich has something akin to a fallen arch. When he withdrew from the Queen's Club tournament two days ago he was advised that he would require treatment before playing each day at Wimbledon.

Mulloy has a case of athlete's foot which London papers described today in considerable detail. He was limping badly and could scarcely move off the baseline before he forfeited his semifinal yesterday to Eric Sturgess, the South African.

When Mulloy and Bromwich quit yesterday, Sturgess and Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, Calif., moved into the final round. And when it stormed and rained today the two were declared co-champions.

Today's weather also brought co-championships to Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont of Wilmington, Del., in women's singles.

Four U. S. women divided up the women's doubles spoils. They are Mrs. Dupont, Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., Mrs. Mary Arnold Prentiss of Los Angeles and Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio.

One of England's leading bookmakers made Parker the 5 to 4 favorite in his advertised prices today, with Jaroslav Drobny, the lefthanded Czech, second choice at 2 to 1.

Bromwich is quoted at 5 to 2. The two young Californians, Falkenburg and Tom Brown, are next at 9 to 2. Mulloy and Budge Patty of Los Angeles are given equal chances at 5 to 1 and Sturgess, last of the eight seeded players, may be had at 8 to 1.

Washington's Bogart, Gardner Play for Maryland Title Today

Baltimore, June 19 (AP).—Two Washington golfers reached the finals of the Maryland State Amateur Golf Championship tournament today after wading through a hailstone-covered course and the toughest competition each has met in this tourney play.

Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase defeated Billy Collins, long-driving youngster from Clifton Park, 2 and 1, after besting John Roth of Aberdeen by the same count in the quarterfinal round.

Jim Gardner of the Washington Golf and Country Club, squeezed by Dr. Walter Panowski of Mount Pleasant by a slim one-up margin. Earlier he outplayed Spencer Overton of Rolling Road, 2 and 1.

Collins was two up on Bogart at the turn, but the Washingtonian birdied the tenth and won the thirteenth, fiftenth and sixteenth with pars. The Clifton amateur was unable to take a hole on the back nine, and the seventeenth which they halved.

Collins had advanced to the semifinals by a 4 and 3 win over Charley Yearick of Forest Park during the morning round.

Gardner played some of the best golf of the tournament. In his morning round with Overton, Maryland open champion, the match was all even at the end of the first nine, with both golfers carding sub par 34s.

On the back nine, however, Overton shot a par 38, while Gardner was a stroke better to win 2 and 1.

In the semifinal round with Dr. Panowski, Gardner completed the first nine in 36 strokes for a 1-up lead at the turn. Dr. Panowski took the tenth, eleventh and twelfth to go 2 up, but Gardner won the next four holes with pars to gain the lead.

Panowski cut Gardner's lead to 1 up by parring the seventeenth. On the eighteenth, Panowski's third shot hit the green and stopped 20 feet from the cup. Gardner then placed his third shot within 5 feet of the cup using an 8 iron. Both golfers putted to halve the hole and the match went to Gardner, 1 up.

Tomorrow's finals between Bogart and Gardner will be a 36-hole affair, 18 in a morning round and 18 in the afternoon. The winner will succeed Bobby Brownell of the Manor Club as Maryland State Amateur champion.

'Win-or-Else' For Smuggy

Fight observers are calling next Monday's Griffith Stadium bout between Smuggy Hursey, local hopeful, and California's Cecil Hudson a "win-or-else" fight for The Smug, whose most recent outings have all reesulted in lickings for the D. C. contender.

Hursey's chances of whipping the classy Hudson seemed slim, indeed. One of the "hottest" articles in town up until last September, Hursey has since suffered losses to Sonny Horne, Tommy Bell, Harold Green and Anton Raadik. One more setback, even Hursey admits, will just about wind up his boxing career.

Hudson, meanwhile, has run up an impressive record. Since beating Jake LaMotta in Chicago last fall, Cece has chalked up a pair of decisions over Tommy Bell and beaten such journeymen as Ossie Harris, Chuck Hunter, Tony Riccio, Fritzie Zivic and Chester Slider.

Hursey is training seriouly for the 10-rounder, to be promoted by the Liberty Athletic Club, and expects to enter the ring in excellent physical condition. He will be seconded by Henry Armstrong, former champion in three weights.

MacKenzie Favored In Club Tourney

Roland MacKenzie will be the favorite in the special golf tourney which will be the feature of the University Club's annual field day at Manor Country Club Friday. Frank Pace and Carroll D. Bird are chairman of the sports and entertainment committees .

NOT A REVIVAL—It's just the way bobby-soxers take to heart a ninth-inning rally that just misses. The above wailing and gnashing of finger-nails took place at Chicago's Wrigley Field, when Steinmetz High lost to Lane Tech, 4-3. The defeat cost Steinmetz the city baseball title and enabled Lane to win the thirteenth crown. This group is from Steinmetz, we'd say. Associated Press Photo

At Poughkeepsie

Crew Mentors Won't Praise Own Boats

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 19 (AP).—College crew coaches are just like college football coaches.

They always pick the other guys.

That's why it's difficult to appraise the forty-sixth renewal of the Poughkeepsie Regatta which will reach its climax with the varsity shells along about twilight of Tuesday evening.

But—consult the coaches, toss in a little garnish from interested bystanders, and you get a predicted order of finish something like this:

Navy, Washington, Cornell, California.

The other seven shells in the race—from Columbia, Rutgers, Syracuse, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Penn, Wisconsin and Princeton—are expected to be scattered behind the four leaders in almost any order.

One observer said he considered Navy, the defending champion, the cream of the East, despite two losses to Harvard. Seven of the eight Middie oarsmen are veterans of last year's race.

He hadn't seen Washington yet but picked the traditionally tough huskies from Seattle for second just on general principles.

Cornell's Big Red, whose only loss was to Navy, he considered as "not as good as it was" and to California he consigned the dark horse role.

Question the coaches on either side of the river up here and they'll mournfully point at somebody else.

Coach Norman Sonju of Wisconsin, whose Badgers have lost by varying margins to Cornell, Washington and California, said he liked the two Western boats.

"California is stronger than Washington, but the Huskies are smoother," is the way Sonju described them.

Coach Al Ulbrichson of Washington, also pointed to California as a potential troublemaker. "They've looked better on the Hudson than they did when we beat them at Oakland," he said.

Washington whipped Cal by four lengths on the West Coast.

The undefeated Huskies will ship one of the lightest varsity eights in the main event, averaging 176 pounds. Cornell scales 189 and Navy 187 to rank among the heaviest.

Odds Drop To 12-5 on Champion

By Jack Cuddy

New York, June 19 (U.P.)—Joe Louis and Jersey Joe Walcott will clash again for the world heavyweight championship Wednesday night in the ring's richest extravaganza since the Louis-BillyConn fiasco two years ago.

Under the bright lights in Yankee Stadium, they will settle the dispute caused by their first title fight at Madison Square Garden on December 5, when Louis retained the crown on a split decision that many fans and experts deemed undeserved.

A crowd of 50,000 was expected to witness this first outdoor heavyweight title fight between Negro principals. The gate was expected to range between $900,000 and one million dollars. Receipts from radio and television, plus profits from the movies, may swell the total "take" to $1,500,000.

Louis Now 12 to 5

Sol Strauss, acting promoter, said today the advance ticket sale approximated $700,000.

Louis was favored at 12 to 5 in the latest odds to retain the crown in his record-breaking twenty-fifth defense—a defense that may be his last fight.

The champion from Detroit announced he would retire after the bout, but Co-Managers John Roxborough and Marshal Miles stated this week Joe's showing in the fight would decide the question of retirement. There is a contract for a third Louis-Walcott title scrap in September if Jersey Joe wrests the crown from Louis.

As the two Joes went through light boxing drills at their camps today, Louis was favored because of his brilliant record of 60 victories in 61 professional fights.

Also because he had achieved knockout triumphs in return bouts against every one of the nine men who fought him twice. They were Willie Davis, Lee Ramage, Natie Brown, Max Schmelling, Bob Pastor, Arturo Godoy, Abe Simon, Buddy Baer and Billy Conn.

Louis to Come in at 215

Moreover, Louis supporters believed that the shuffling, stalking champion will catch up with the fleet-footed, side-stepping challenger from Camden, N. J., who floored Louis twice in December. They believe the champion was not in sharp condition for the December bout because he regarded Jersey Joe too lightly.

Louis contended he had weakened himself by "drying out"—taking no liquids—for 48 hours before the December brawl. He said he will not dry out this time. He expects to fight at about 215 pounds, 4 more than he registered in December.

Some experts who watched the champ training at Pompton Lakes said he was improved; others said he wasn't.

Meanwhile, heavy support for Walcott—father of six children—shortened the betting price this week from 14-5 to 12-5. Jersey Joe's backers clam his ringcraft and punch will beat Louis this time because he will not repeat his December mistakes.

In the fourth round, when he floored Louis the second time, Jersey Joe became too eager and he missed the floundering Louis with five consecutive rights to the head—any one of which might have put the champ down again.

Television Reported on Slate

Also in the fifteenth round, he "ran" because his handlers thought he already had the title won and didn't want to risk a last-round knockout.

The stocky, bull-shouldered challenger appeared razor sharp in training at Grenloch, N. J., two weeks ago. Since then he has not been as impressive. When he steps on the scales in Madison Square Garden's lobby, Wednesday noon, he will weigh about the same as in December—194½.

Louis will receive 40 per cent of the net gate and 40 per cent of all other receipts. Walcott's share of everything will be 20 per cent, except for the movies of which he gets about 21¼ per cent.

Although no announcement has ben made, it was learned reliably that the bout will be broadcast at 10 p. m. (E.D.T.) Wednesday over the ABC network, and that it will be televised by NBC.

Minnesota Wins NCAA Track Title for 1st Time in History

By Austin Bealmear

Minneapolis, June 19 (AP).—Underdog Minnesota captured the National Collegiate track and field championships for the first time in the 27-year history of the meet today as this country's undergraduate spikesters elected 108 of their best performers for the coming Olympic tryouts.

The surprising Gophers, rank outsiders in the premeet speculation over the team title, won two of the 18 events and placed in seven others to amass a total of 46 points in the scoring on a 10-8-6-4-2-1 basis.

Southern California's favored Trojans finished in second place with 41½ points, barely missing their bid to regain the national title they relinquished in 1944 after nine straight years of victory. Even a double sprint triumph by the great Mel Patton, one of them achieved in world record time, couldn't lift the Trojans to the team championship they have won a dozen times in the past.

Not until the last event had been completed before a throng of 15,563 in the sun-drenched stadium of the victorious Gophers was the close battle for team honors determined. Then Loyd Lamois, who until that time had scored only 1 point on a sixth in the broad jump, came through with a victory in the lightly regarded hop, step and jump which enabled Minnesota to sweep past the Trojans into first place.

But it was Fortune Gordien who carried the major load for the Gophers on his broad shoulders. The big Minnesota weight man won the discus, an event he is expected to dominate in the Olympics, and placed second in the shot put.

Between them Gordien and Lamois tallied 29 points, well over half the Minnesota total.

Behind Minnesota and Southern California came the University of Texas with 40 points, while the University of Illinois, defending champion and winner of three of the last four team titles, finished fourth with 34¼ points.

Other leaders in the team scrap were California, 19¼ points; Ohio State and Michigan 18 each Stanford 17¾; Northwestern 16; Rhode Island State 15¾ and Texas A. and M. 14.

Exactly 50 of the record entry of 98 colleges and universities figured in the scoring. Minnesota's triumph was all the more surprising since the Gophers could do no better than fourth in their own Western Conference meet.

Patton led all the way in the century as he scored over Pacific Coast Champion Don Anderson of California and Charley Parker of Texas in 10.4 seconds.

Patton's 20.7 time equalled the world record for the 200-meter run around a turn, set by Jesse Owens of Ohio State in the 1936 Olympics but a tail wind of more than 6 miles on the home straight away probably cost him an official share of the mark.

The top scorers in each of today's 17 events, plus half a dozen from the 10,000-meter final held yesterday, qualified for the final United States Olympic Tryouts at Evanston, Ill., July 9 and 10.

Six others from each of the events held in the National AAU championships at Milwaukee July 2 and 3 will earn similar qualification.

The only variations in this plan of elimination come in the 5000 and 10,000-meter runs. At Milwaukee, the AAU 10,000-meter grind will serve as the final Olympic trial.

A spokesman for the United States Olympic Committee announced today that the 5000-meter run at the Evanston trials would be an open event, not limited to the scorers here and at Milwaukee.

How the Teams Scored

Minnesota, 46; Southern California, 41½; Texas, 40; Illinois, 34¼; California, 19¼; Ohio State, 18; Michigan, 18; Stanford, 17¾; Northwestern, 16; Rhode Island State, 15¾; Texas A. and M., 14; Colorado, 12½; Villanova, 12; Yale, 11; Wisconsin, 10; Harvard, 10; Arkansas, 10; Kansas State, 10 San Diego State, 10; Notre Dame, 9; Oklahoma, 9; Oregon, 9; Auburn, 8; Indiana, 8; Maine, 8; Michigan State, 8; Penn State, 8; Pennsylvania, 8; Tulane, 7; Ohio Wesleyan, 6; Wayne, 6; UCLA, 6; Dartmouth, 6; U. Okla. Aggies Lose to Baylor In NCAA Play

Denver, June 19 (AP).—The Baylor Bears, with little Jim Blair almost blowing an eight-run lead, squeezed past the Oklahoma A. and M. Cowboys, 9-8, today in the semifinals of the Western NCAA baseball playoff.

The Bears, now with two victories and one defeat, will meet unbeaten Southern California in the finals. If Baylor wins, a second and deciding seven-inning game will be played.

Blair, a 140-pound sophomore from Dallas, held the Cowboys to two hits in the first seven innings. His wildness in the last two frames almost cost him the ball game as he walked eight men, hit one batter and uncorked three wild pitches.

Rollins Students In Net Finals

Kansas City., June 19 (AP).—A Couple of Rollins College (Winter Park, Fla.) students, national intercollegiate champion, Gardner Larned, and Herbert (Buddy) Behrens, national junior titlist, will meet for the men's singles crown tomorrow in the Heart of America tennis tournament.

Larned, a Chicago lad and number one player at the Florida school turned back Ricardo Balbiers, champion of Chile and Brazil 6—4, 6—3, 6—4 in the semifinals.

Behrens, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., beat Tom Mulloy, New Orleans, 6—0, 4—6, 6—1, 6—4 in a singles semifinal match.

Budge Gives Kramer Scare Before Losing

Forest Hills, N. Y., June 19 (U.P.). Defending Champion Bobby Riggs had an easy time and second-seeded Jack Kramer had a tough time today as they battled their way into the finals of the National Professional Tennis Tournament.

Riggs had far too much court savvy and bounced off Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., 6—3, 6—2, 7—5, in one semifinals match.

Kramer had it tougher, playing fiery-haired Don Budge, last year's runner-up. But the younger Jack had the stamina it took to come from behind and down Budge, 6—4, 8—10, 3—6, 6—4, 6—0.

Kramer and Riggs meet tomorrow for the title.

Kovacs Falters

Kovacs couldn't match the champion's steadiness and Retriever Riggs allowed his opponent to more or less beat himself by netting the ball and driving it out of bounds. In addition, the two-time winner of the grass crown displayed a rugged service which produced 20 services aces to but 4 for Kovacs.

Budge was on the defensive as he dropped the first set, but put on a beautiful display of sharpshooting and net tactics to take the next two sets. That put Kramer in hot water.

But although Jack's service was broken twice in the fourth set, he broke the Red Heads once, copping the last three games in a row, to win the set after trailing 4-3.

Match Is Evened

That evened the match at two sets each, but it was clear that Budge was a tired and beaten man. And he proved it in the final by bowing out in love in 7 minutes.

The runner-up to Riggs last year, Budge was full of errors in the final set. He frequently netted the ball and had difficulty in keeping it in bounds.

But the Pacific Coast star of yesteryear proved that he was still a factor to be contended with and got a rousing ovation from the crowd as he left the courts.

The singles final is slated for 2:15 p. m. (EDT) tomorrow and will be followed by the doubles title match. Riggs and Budge pair up against Kramer and Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Ecuador.

Both Fight Camps Report Boys 'Open Up'; Joe Weighs 214¼, Walcott 195¼ at Finish

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 19 (AP).—Joe Louis' stock shot upward today as the heavyweight cut loose with his old body attack against Tiger Roy Taylor, a sparmate with a style similar to that of Jersey Joe Walcott.

Off this workout, the best of his long training siege, the champ showed every appearance of being a solid favorite. This may have been the tipoff on what to expect Wednesday night in Yankee Stadium when he meets Walcott in a return title bout.

In their first meeting, Louis did not thump to the body but he certainly let Taylor have it today. He never knocked Taylor down but he had him holding on in trouble at the end of the round.

The Bomber, weighed 215 before today's drill. He will come into New York at 1 a. m. Wednesday, arriving just in time for the noon weigh-in. When he finished today he scaled 214¼ pounds.

Walcott Opens Up

Grenloch, N. J., June 19 (AP).—Jersey Joe Walcott opened up on his sparring partners today in his semifinal workouts before Wednesday's fight with Joe. Louis.

The challenger worked on his left jab, hooks to the body and punching his way off the ropes.

Walcott went four rounds and will wind up his boxing drills tomorrow with another three or four rounds.

After going two rounds with Austin Johnson and one each with Curtis Sheppard and Cliff Dyes, he tipped the beam at 195¼—just three-quarters of a pound over what he weighed for the first Louis fight last December and what he expects to scale Wednesday.

After tomorrow's final boxing before the fight, Walcott will do nothing but calisthenics and road work to keep his edge until he leaves here Tuesday night for New York.

Then Bogley teamed with another Landon man, Jack Yates, to take the doubles championship, defeating Squires and Gilbert Rothrock of Hill, 3—6, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2, after spotting their foes the first two sets.

Filly's 1st Stake

Sweet Dream Wins Gazelle At Aqueduct

New York, June 19 (AP).—Sweet Dream from the Havahome stable of Joseph Rabinovich was just a nightmare to five other 3-year-old fillies today as she stole an early lead then held on gamely to capture the fifty-third running of the $25,000 Gazelle Stakes at Aqueduct.

The frisky chestnut daughter of Lovely Night-Tea Leaves, taken to the front immediately by Jockey Bobby Permane, defeated the stretch-running favorite, King Ranch's Scattered, by a head in a photo finish as the crowd of 32,739 groaned.

Scattered closed with a rush and also nipped the leader in the mile and one sixteenth event, but it appeared that Jockey Warren Mehrtens waited too long. Lester Manor Stable's Compliance was third, four lengths back of Scattered. George D. Widener's Watermill, second choice in the betting, was fourth.

Sweet Dream had never won a stakes until this afternoon, but she completed the distance in the slop in 1:45 1/5, rewarding her few supporters with $14.30, $5.60 and $3.30.

The $19,350 prize was the biggest "pot" in Sweet Dream's career, and boosted her total earnings to $35,075. She had won $12,225 in six previous 1948 starts, and this was her fourth trip to the winner's circle this season.

Favored George Gains Wins at Narragansett

Pawtucket, R. I., June 19 (AP).—G. R. Schneider's favored George Gains, a 5-year-old, splashed 6 furlongs in 1:11 1-5 to win the $10,000 Blackstone Valley Handicap on Narragansett Park's sloppy track today before a 20,721 crowd.

The winner had 2½ lengths on Myron Newmeyer's Turbine as Dave Gnano's Black Knave gained the show, a length and a half back. George Gains paid $4.60, $2.80 and $2.40. Turbine returned $4.20 and $3.40 and Black Knave $4.60.

Victor Leads All the Way, Pays $5.20

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 19. Mrs. George Saportas' High Heart, a 3-year-old and the youngest member of a field of eight, won a thrilling stretch duel here today. Hooking up with J. T. Harris' Blue April a furlong from the wire, High Heart held on with gameness to win the A. S. Allen Memorial purse by a scant nose.

In third position came E. P. Minor's The Demander with Mrs. J. Rodgers' How Happy fourth in the test of about 7 furlongs.

High Heart, in turning in her third success of the meeting, was a slight favorite over Blue April in the betting and paid a $5.20 mutuel to her backers in a crowd of 7500.

The track was in good condition and the winning daughter of Grand Slam was clocked in 1:29.

Right to Front

High Heart went to the front just after the break and came in towards the rail to have Bold Boy in close quarters going to the back stretch. The latter then faltered and Rubicon and How Happy came up to challenge the leader.

High Heart shook them off and then Blue April rallied. The 4-year-old mare looked all the part of a winner but her younger rival just refused to give up. Both boys and horses were all out at the end.

The day's short sprint, a purse affair, brought an upset when Mrs. H. R. Miller's Alimony, well handled by Apprentice Jimmy Rankin, drove home a length in front of E. P. Price's hard luck horse, Stanley. In third position was Mrs. M. Paul's Talcum Spray.

Rave On Red Scores

Alimony returned a $10.80 mutuel and was clocked in .50 3/5 for the abbreviated sprint of about 4½ furlongs.

Stewards announced today that Jockey Willie Nertney, Baltimore boy who rode the disqualified Whipped Cream yesterday, has been suspended for five days.

The program opened with a $77.20 mutuel on W. E. Baekey's Rave On Red, a gelding who has been trying to win a race for the last four years. He was ridden by Jockey Albert Vesselli. When R. F. Livingston's Pete's Gold, $4.40 favorite, won the second race, there was a $355.20 pay-off on the daily double.

Miss Grillo Romps Home At Delaware

Stanton, Del., June 19 (AP).—Miss Grillo finally ran back to her fine 1947 record today as she soundly whipped six other fillies and mares in the $25,000 added New Castle Handicap at Delaware Park.

Never better than third in six previous starts this year after winding up in the money in 10 of her 1947 trips to the post, Miss Grillo carried the silks of Mrs. Barclay Douglas' Mill River Stable to victory by 2½ lengths.

An outsider in a field reduced to seven by the scratching of the highly regarded Honeymoon, the 6-year-old daughter of Rolando trailed the early pace, moved rapidly into contention coming out of the back stretch and went out in front in the final eighth of a mile.

William G. Helis' Elpis also came from far back to take second money, two lengths in front of Mrs. Helene K. Haggerty's Rampart. Then followed Howell E. Jackson's favored Red Shoes, Whipsaw, First Flight and Camargo.

Ira Hanford piloted Miss Grillo over the muddy mile and one-sixteenth in 1:49 to pick up the purse of $20,850. Her backers received $19, $7.10 and $4.40 across the board.

A total of 20,882 persons wagered $1,322,354.

U.S. ARMY OFFICER CANDIDATE SCHOOL

NOW OPEN TO HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES
THIS is important news to every young man from 20½ to 28 who has graduated from high school or who can pass equivalent education examinations. Under a new ruling, you may now enlist in the U. S. Army for the specific purpose of attending Officer Candidate School, provided the quotas are not filled.
You must be a citizen of the United States, and a man of high moral character, able to meet the necessary physical requirements.
To take advantage of this unusual privilege, you may submit your application to the Commanding General of the Army area in which you live. If you are selected, you will be enlisted in the Army as Staff Sergeant. If you have not had basic training or its equivalent, you will be given this training before entering Officer Candidate School.
If you are a successful candidate, you will be commissioned as Second Lieutenant in the Officers Reserve Corps and placed on active duty for two years, during which time you may compete for a Regular Army Commission. Should you fail to complete the course successfully, you will be released from the Army.
The opportunity to qualify for Officer Candidate School is, and has been, open to men in the Army. But never before during peacetime has such a remarkable opportunity to become a commissioned officer been open to civilian high school graduates. Find out all the facts about it today at your U.S. Army and U.S. Air Force Recruiting Station.

80 Drivers On Day-Long Program

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Power boat racing on the Potomac makes its 1948 debut today as the Junior Board of Commerce sponsors its first National Capital Regatta on a 1¼-mile course between the 14th st. and Memorial bridges starting at 11 a. m.

To date approximately 80 drivers, including many of the country's best, have entered the 18-event affair under the sanction of the American Power Boat Association.

Some 200,000 spectators are expected to line the Potomac Park rail and the Virginia side of the river, where a limited number of reserved seats will be available. Space for spectator craft also has been arranged by Chairman Hudson S. Moses of the regatta committee.

Y., Bob Schroeder of North Tonawanda, N. Y., Joe Palmer of Arlington, J. B. Broadus of Fredericksburg, Va., and this city's I. E. Hale, Joe Thacker and Bill Preston.

A hot entry in the Class B, C and F hydroplane races is Vic Scott of Forest Hills, N. Y., winner of last year's Albany-to-New York marathon.

THE SCIENTIFIC WRESTLER—Herman Rubenstein, Montgomery Junior College sophomore, demonstrates one of the scientific holds which he wants to bring back into the professional wrestling game. The fellow on the bottom is Irv Ornstein, former Georgetown basketball star

'Rube' a Scientist . . .

Old-Time Wrestling Is Forte Of Local Lad, Turning Pro

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

HERMAN RUBENSTEIN doesn't claim to be an "Angel" but lovers of old style scientific wrestling will vouch he is a godsend when they see him make his bow in Baltimore Tuesday night.

Rube, a 21-year-old Montgomery Junior College sophomore, who has "played at weight lifting for four years, promises he'll breathe science back into the ancient game.

A native Washingtonian, living at 1417 Primrose rd. nw., he has been a wrestling fan all his life, but his ambition to take it up as a livelihood is something new.

It started a few months ago when Jesse James, an established local grunt and groaner, watched Rube tossing his muscular 5-foot, 8-inch, 190-pound frame around the Jewish Community Center gym.

"Why don't you try professional wrestling?" asked James of Rube.

"Never thought of that," replied Rube, "although often I thought I could lick a lot of those guys."

Jesse took Rube in tow, and helped by Al Bakish, a former grappler, and Jim McNamara, an oldtime boxer and athletic director of the J. C. C., gave Rube daily lessons.

Then James arranged for Rube to referee a few pro matches at Turner's Arena. He's ready now, they and Rube think, and he's wrestling in a prelim Tuesday in Baltimore against an opponent to be designated Monday.

WHY WOULD a collegiate liberal arts major want to take up a "profession," tainted with burlesque, and often accused of not being on the level?

"I've always liked body contact competitive sports," he says, "and this is a good way to assert myself and make money too.

"Sure, most of the wrestlers put on a show," he continued, "but that's what a lot of the customers want. I, personally, go out to watch them wrestle. All of the pros are experts in wrestling and tumbling, and when they're wrestling and not grunting and groaning, they're good to watch. I plan to lay off the showmanship.

"In my short experience as a referee, if there has been a fix, I haven't been let in on it. Those guys mean it in between their teeth gnashing and growling."

The former Roosevelt High footballer, who played guard at Montgomery last season, says he's given up the grid permanently for the hammer lock and toe hold. "But I'm going to finish college anyway, just in case I don't make money and keep improving," he concluded.

Memphis Netman Wins Southern Title

Davidson, N. C., June 17 (AP).—Heat and endurance gave second-seeded Steve Potts of Memphis, Tenn., the junior singles title in the Southern junior and boys' tennis tournament here today.

Potts won by default when top-seeded Charles Devoe of Indianapolis, Ind., could no longer continue their finals match after 3 hours and 45 minutes of play.

At that point, the two stars were tied up in four sets. Devoe took the first, 15—13, and the third, 6—3. Potts took the other two, 6—2 and 8—6.

Earlier, top-seeded Ham Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., captured the boys' title by whipping second-seeded Bobby Sierra of Tampa, Fla., 6—0, 6—4. Richardson and Sierra teamed up to take the doubles crown, defeating the New Orleans, La., combination of Mickey Sheehan and Gamble Favrot, 6—2, 6—3.

Arcade Nine Scores

Fredericksburg, Va., June 19.—Arcade Pontiac Indians of Washington, D. C., trounced the Fredericksburg A. C., 6-2, here today behind the three-hit pitching of Earl Lewis, who fanned nine. Al King led the winners' 10-hit attack with a triple and single, driving in two runs.

Big IFs Still Surround Robinson Bout

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—When—and if— Welterweight Champion Ray Robinson gets into the ring at Comisky Park Monday night, he'll be ready for raw meat, literally and figuratively.

Robinson belatedly is scheduled to take on 21-year-old Bernard Docusen of New Orleans in his third title defense, IF:

1. The champion can make the 147 title poundage at Monday noon's second weigh-in for the fight.
2. He doesn't call the whole thing off and go back in a huff to New York, causing the Illinois Athletic Commission to declare his title vacant.
3. It doesn't rain again as it did last Thursday night when the 15-round title go originally was scheduled.

Robinson's manager, George Gainford, at first said Robinson would forget about the whole thing rather than undergo another weakening weight-trimming schedule.

But the champion, who has put up $10,000 as a performance guarantee and another $1000 as a weight forfeit, apparently thought the loss of $11,000, plus a good chance of meeting Middleweight Champion Zale if he Kayoes Docusen, would be much more painful than whittling away a stubborn pound or 2 of flesh.

Grays Play Philly Today

Bolstered by the addition of Ervin Foulkes, 24-year-old shortstop, Washington's Homestead Grays renew their battle for the Negro National League first-half pennant in a double-header with the Philadelphia Stars at Griffith Stadium at 2 p. m. today.

Foulkes made his local debut Thursday night as the Grays beat the Black Yankees, 6-2, and played a bang-up game, handling seven chances without error.

The Grays now hold a one and one half-game edge over the Baltimore Elite Giants, with the Stars in third place, two and one half games off the pace.

Settlement Of Maritime Row Sought

New York, June 19 (AP). — The United States Conciliation Service will call a meeting of shipowners and leaders of three seamen's unions next week in an effort to settle a threatened Nation-wide maritime strike.

This was announced tonight by J. R. Mandelbaum, assistant regional director of the service. He said the meeting would be fixed Monday.

The unions involved are the National Maritime Union, the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, and the American Radio Association, all CIO.

To Represent Shipowners

The shipowners will be represented by the American Merchant Marine Institute.

The unions and the shipowners are under orders of a Federal judge to engage in collective bargaining.

Crux of the dispute is the union hiring hall—through which ship workers are processed for job vacancies.

The owners contend the halls are illegal under Taft-Hartley law conditions. The unions also are seeking improved wages and working conditions.

Meanwhile, Ferdinand Smith, secretary of the NMU, said the union's national council voted "without authority" to call off a strike in the face of an injunction.

Smith said he would call the national council back into session next Wednesday because its action was contrary to the NMU's constitution.

Under the constitution, he said, a strike cannot be called off without simultaneous meetings in all ports and a majority vote of the membership.

Curran Has No Comment

There was no immediate comment from NMU President Joseph Curran, who is opposed in the union by Smith.

The union, along with six other waterfront unions, had set June 15 as the date for joint strike action. The NMU membership voted approval of the strike.

On June 14 a Federal Court judge issued a 10-day injunction here against the NMU, American Radio Association and Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

Similar injunctions were obtained in other districts against the strike threats of other maritime unions.

Yesterday Federal Judge John W. Clancy ordered the unions and East and Gulf Coast operators to resume contract talks immediately pending the end of the temporary injunction next Thursday.

Goldsborough to Rule On Rail Strike Case

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough said yesterday he will rule next Thursday morning on the Government request for a permanent court order to prevent three railroad unions from striking.

The unions involved are the locomotive engineers, firemen and enginemen and switchmen. They threatened to strike May 11, but were forestalled when the Government got a temporary court order banning the walkout.

President Truman then ordered the railroads seized. The Army technically has been operating them since.

Goldsborough said a further hearing in the injunction proceedings, which he had scheduled for next Tuesday, will not be held. Instead, the judge said he will accept formal statements from the contesting parties out of court next Monday afternoon.

Baltimore Board Decrees Ban on Reds in Schools

Baltimore, June 19 (AP).—Baltimore's school board ruled yesterday that "neither a Communist nor one who supports those principles of communism which are in conflict with our American ideals of democracy should hold any position in the school system.

The new policy announcement came after a charge by William J. Muth, vice president of the Baltimore City Council, that two teachers had communistic leanings.

The two teachers attacked by Muth were Mrs. Regina Frankfeld and Harry Specor. Muth said Mrs. Frankfeld is the wife of Philip Frankfeld, head of the Communist Party in Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Spector, Muth contended, "was dismissed from the Federal service at Aberdeen Proving Ground in July, 1946, by the War Department, and that order dismissing him contained the statement that it was done in the interest of national security."

Lane Intervenes For Ex-GI Sought As Jail Fugitive

Cumberland, Md., June 19 (AP).—A 32-year-old father of four, who compiled an enviable war record and operates a grocery store started with a GI loan, had new hope today from Governor Lane in a fight against extraditon as an Ohio jail fugitive.

A Circuit Court hearing on Harlan G. Harmon's writ of habeas corpus to prevent his extradition was postponed this morning when Lane intervened. The defendant's attorney, Harold E. Naughton, said the Governor had notified him a hearing in Annapolis Tuesday for Harmon.

Ohio authorities sought Harmon's return after he was arrested June 3 in connection with a motor vehicle violation.

Harmon allegedly walked away from a prison farm at Mansfield, Ohio, in 1935 when he was serving a sentence for unauthorized use of an automobile.

Weather Stops Tuck Flight to Bank Session

Hot Springs, Va., June 19 (AP).—Governor Tuck was unable to address the Virginia Bankers Association convention here this morning when a low ceiling at the air field forced his plane to turn back without landing.

The Virginia Air National Guard plane in which the Governor was flown from Richmond landed at Lynchburg.

The association expressed its support of the proposed graduate school of commerce and business administration at the University of Virginia.

Actions of the convention included:

A recommendation to Congress that the Federal tax structure be carefully reviewed with the purpose of discontinuing unnecessary Federal services, thus enabling greater budget economy. The resolution recommended elimination of "inequities" in the tax structure and stated that the "burden of Federal taxes required to meet our domestic and international commitments rests heavily upon our competitive business system."

A commendation for Governor Tuck and the General Assembly for the State government reorganization program.

Indorsement of the security loan program.

Indorsement of the anti-inflation program of the American Bankers Association and the recommendation that State banks follow credit policies in line with the program.

2 Get Pen Terms For Assault on ABC Officer

Hrrisonburg, Va., June 19 (AP).—Two men were given penitentiary sentences in Rockingham County Circuit Court yesterday on charges of assaulting an ABC special investigator.

Lawrence Deane and Floyd Shifflett, both of Elkton, were charged with feloniously assaulting Special Investigator H. E. Taylor while he was performing his duties in Rockingham County.

Deane was given a two-year term and Shifflet 15 months. Witnesses said Taylor was assaulted by the two men after he had made arrangement to purchase "bootleg" whisky from them, and that both men knew that he was an ABC agent.

Dallas H. Johnson of Fluvanna, president of the association, will preside over the four-day gathering, which will be addressed by Ervin Martin, Salem, Ind., national president of the Future Farmers of America.

Livestock, dairy and poultry judging contests by federation teams, degree team contest by districts, and the district baseball tournament will highlight the convention activities.

Sixteen fire departments, eight ladies' auxiliaries and seven bands were represented in the 1½-mile-long parade. The Harrisonburg company had 65 members. The Mount Jackson Fire Company took second prize in this class.

First prize for the largest and best appearing company without a band was awarded Harrisonburg's No. 1, with the Gordonsville company second. "PLAY BALL" is the order of the afternoon at Landon School's ball diamond, and most of the fathers content themselves with positions on the spectator's bench. Small fry, from left to right, are Robert and Paul W. Neal and Arthur Lambert, jr. Dads are, from left to right, Mr. Lambert and Dr. Paul A. Neal

Harris & Ewing

ALTHOUGH he can boast two silver stars on his Army uniform, Maj. Gen. Willard A. Holbrook still has to prove himself on the tennis court in a match with young Willard, jr. Here they test the strength of the net before they begin their afternoon's game

Dad Has an Inning

DADS are frequently such busy creatures that they can find little time to spend with their lively offspring. But the boys who go to Landon School have a way of changing all that. Each year, just before the end of the June term, they celebrate their own "Father's Day," and drag their respective papas to class with them. After they have proven what they can (or cannot) do in Latin, history and algebra, they all troop outside for an afternoon of fun and relaxation. It's a day no father dares to miss

FATHERS get the best of service when their sons play hosts to them at the school. Young Johnny Farrington takes careful aim with the spout of the coffee urn as he fills a cup for his dad, Joseph R. Farrington, Delegate from Hawaii

HEADMASTER P. LANDON BANFIELD, known to hundreds of Capital boys, is hounded by young autograph hunters as the students make ready to leave for summer

Lively Feminine Trio Runs Campaign Show At Dewey Headquarters

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 19.—Learning that Governor Dewey's headquarters was organized and run by women, we moseyed down there today, talked with New York National Committeewoman, Mrs. Charles W. Weiss, jr., and her partner, Jane Todd, vice president of the New York State Committee, who also happens to be deputy commissioner of commerce. Mary Donlon strolled in. Discovering she was not only a member of the resolutions committee which drafts the Republican Party platform but also the first woman to be made chairman of its subcommittee on labor and social welfare, we cornered her too.

Since men invariably organize headquarters for presidential candidates, we wondered why the ladies had taken over. Simple. Masculine Deweyites, overwhelmed working out the Oregon campaign, asked the women to carry on. "I'm sure," confided Mrs. Weiss, "they didn't think we could raise the money."

But they did. A committee of 120 New York State women not only topped their budget but garnered a rich harvest of donations, cigarettes, chewing gum and the like plus handsome door prizes to be awarded to every hundredth Dewey headquarters visitor.

Call for Color

WHILE Mrs. Weiss talked to me she dashed between two telephones, gave instructions to secretaries, met an assortment of feminine callers and wriggled out of a pale pink linen dress into a green print one.

"All national committeewomen must wear bright prints, never black," she said in a voice muffled by pink linen. "I simply have to go to all these cocktail parties as Russ refuses to do anything social." (Russ is Russell Sprague, new York national committeeman.)

Handsome Mrs. Weiss, who's tall, svelte, disappeared into the closet to change her shoes, and Jane Todd filled in a few background details. Judy Weiss hails from Rochester, became vice chairman of Monroe County 11 years ago and has built up some 40 women's Republican clubs. In 1940 she was made member of the New York State executive committee, a high policy-making group, and headed up the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs, Inc.

Shod in high-heeled red pumps, Mrs. Weiss emerged from the closet to run a comb briskly through her curly gray hair. "What do I do? Well, I have a husband and three children, and I went into politics because I hate housework. Anyway, I love it. I just pitch in and work. I go to my office every day, help people get jobs, straighten out their troubles, do what I can. I'm an easy speaker and go from club to club. I represent the Republican Party at every imaginable kind of function and help iron out policy questions at meetings. I work on a volunteer basis, have no political ambitions."

Mrs. Weiss pencilled on lipstick, got out a directory and suggested half a dozen interesting women for me to see, making a few humorous but not unkind remarks about each.

"The era of wealthy women who made large party contributions is past. All the gals you'll see around here are real workers," she said as she slipped on a short staccato red coat and skipped out the door.

Headed Peacetime Committee

GOVERNOR DEWEY has appointed 224 women to key posts. Jane Todd is the first woman in the United States to hold the State government job of deputy commissioner of commerce. Until 1928, when she became vice chairman of Westchester County committee, she kept house for her father, a country doctor, brought up motherless brothers and sisters. She worked her way up in State politics. Just before VE-Day, when Governor Dewey determined to form a committee which would help women get jobs once war industries closed, Jane was asked to head it.

She picked as assistant, Helen Thompson, a former Women's Home Companion editor, built up a staff of 12, formed an advisory council of 34 topflight business and professional women, ranging from Elizabeth Arden to President Blanding of Vassar, from the chief feminine executive of the CIO to Altman's head of women personnel.

Jane Todd has enlarged her scope recently. The committee makes business surveys in communities with difficult problems. In an up-State city, very little fish was eaten. Why? They found women didn't know how to cook it, children didn't like it, the fish was not sufficiently fresh. They stepped in, fixed up tantalizing displays, gave cooking lessons and almost overnight sales of fish skyrocketed.

The Todd mail is enormous. Women from other States write in for advice, and other States are planning to follow the New York plan.

Mary Donlon Is Full of Fun

WHILE Jane Todd was talking, Mary Donlon breezed in, tossed off her hat, ran a wet towel over her face. Mary Donlon is white-haired, chubby, full of fun. A lawyer, Miss Donlon is chairman of the New York State Workmen's Compensation Board. Over six and a half million workers are covered by her program. She is also president of the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards and Commission, and spare moments are occupied with the chores of being a trustee of Cornell, her alma mater.

Here in Philadelphia she is a member of the resolutions committee, which is chairmaned by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. The resolutions committee is made up of two members from each State. Mary Donlon and Senator Ives are New York's representatives. "And you know where Senator Ives is right now," sighed Miss D.

The main committee is divided into eight subcommittees. Mary Donlon is chairman of labor and social welfare and has to deal with social security, labor regulations, health and housing. During the day she held hearings with spokesmen from over 30 different organizations stating the policies they'd like included in the Republican platform. In addition over a hundred other written statements have been filed. CIO, AFL, women's organizations, all have had their say. When everyone has been heard, Miss Donlon's job is to analyze their presentations, boil them down to precise recommendations which eventually will be drafted into the Republican Party platform.

A Vandenberg fan ourselves, we liked Dewey's ladies so much we're seriously considering casting our vote for New York's Governor.

Julie Bowdoin Bows At Long Island Ball; Achesons in Hawaii

By Marie McNair

UP on Long Island the debutante season is in full swing, and right in the center of things is Julie Bowdoin, daughter of Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr., wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Just out of Foxcroft, Miss Bowdoin made her debut last night at a ball given by her father, George Temple Bowdoin, and in July she and her sister, Helen Bowdoin, will sail for a tour of Europe. Meanwhile, the debutante is taking in all the debutante parties on Long Island, going to Baltimore and Wilmington this week and then back to Nevis, her father's home at Oyster Bay.

Wearing her debut frock of white net and lace with strapless bodice and bouffant skirt, Julie first attended the dinner last night given by Mrs. William Lippincott for her debutante daughter, Lydia Taylor, at the posh Seawanahaka Yacht Club. Then, at home, picking up her bouquet of white orchids, she stood with her father to welcome guests who began to drift in after 10.

Lights, twinkling from the trees in the garden, were reflected in the waters of the Sound. A dance floor topped with a red and white marquee was set up outdoors and Meyer Davis was there to play.

MRS. McNAIR

Miss Barbara Barry, daughter of Col. and Mrs. David S. Barry, who made her debut at a dance at the Chevy Chase Club Wednesday night, is one of the score of young people in the houseparty going on at Nevis for the week end. Also from Washington are Hugh Auchincloss, jr., Chauncey Parker, jr., and Robert Hooker. From other cities are Miss Isabelle Haskell, Miss Jane Houghton, Miss Katherine Evans, Miss Julia Bissell, Elwyn Evans, Thomas Brittingham, David Look, Clement Despard, Oakleigh Thorne and Jim Wallis.

TED AND ELIZABETH ACHESON, who got the usual flowery welcome when they arrived in Honolulu, are well pleased with their present estate. They're living in a big house with a dramatic view of Diamond Head, the intensely blue Pacific at their feet and miles of lush rolling land dotted with "fantastic twisted trees and flowers of every exotic color on the palette." That's the way Elizabeth describes it in writing to her Washington friends.

The Achesons went out early this month and don't expect to be back until October. Ted Acheson—whose brother, Dean, is a former Undersecretary of State—was offered a post as summer lecturer at the University of Hawaii. A professor of economics at George Washington University, Dr. Acheson also writes travel books and mystery stories on the side.

From the look of things, there will be no lonely moments for the Achesons during their stay on the islands. They're looking forward to welcoming Bill Huggins in July, and about the same time Col. Robert Guggenheim and Polly Guggenheim will be arriving, fresh from the Republican National Convention. William Bullitt, our former Ambassador to France and Russia, who's been on a hush-hush trip to China and the Formosa Islands, blew in last week and so did Pei Tsu-yee.

ONCE upon a time a Vanderbilt mansion was a sacrosant social temple. Its portals opened only to the Astors, the Whitneys and the like.

Today the upkeep of a palace demands the income of a king, and so—more and more big houses are being closed up or torn down.

I mentioned the other day that The Breakers, Italian-style villa built by the late Cornelius Vanderbilt on the cliffs of Newport, is to be opened to the public for the first time under the auspices of the Newport Preservation Society.

Now another Vanderbilt estate is going "commercial." Elm Court, show place at Lenox, Mass, high up in New England's Berkshire Hills, is to be opened this summer as an exclusive club-hotel. Built 60 years ago by Mr. and Mrs. William Dodge Sloane (the latter, Emily Vanderbilt, daughter of the William K. Vanderbilts), Elm Court is now the property of Mr. and Mrs. Helm George Wilde. Mrs. Wilde was Marjorie Field, daughter of Lila Vanderbilt Sloane, youngest daughter of the Sloane's several children.

Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Sloane married Henry White, once United States Ambassador to Italy, later to France. After a long and distinguished career in our foreign service, Mr. White retired, and with Mrs. White came to Washington to live in the big house on Crescent Circle.

Prince Peter Here Enroute to Tibet; Claudels Feted at Farewell Parties

By Elizabeth Maguire

A HANDSOME anthropologist, Prince Peter of Greece, is in town en route to Tibet.

The Prince is first cousin to King Paul of Greece, and a cousin of King Michael, as well as Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma. The latter two were guests of Prince Peter's parents in Paris just prior to their marriage in Athens.

The Prince is a direct descendant of Napoleon's brother, Lucien, and he somewhat resembles the great Emperor. His wife was born under the old regime in Russia, and she was an emigre in Paris when they met in 1939.

The Prince is preparing to join the expedition to Central Asia of the National Museum of Copenhagen, Denmark. He plans to remain in Tibet two years, and he is particularly interested in finding out the reason for polyandry there. So far, whenever he has questioned a Tibetan on the matter, he has simply been asked, "Why are you monogamous?"

During his short stay in Washington, the Prince is the guest of the Iranian Ambassador, Hussein Ala, whom he knew n Persia, when the envoy was Court Minister. Prince Peter has motored through Arabia and Persia several times, and he is a good friend of the Shah of Persia.

Yesterday the Prince had appointments at the Smithsonian Institution, the Research Council, and the Geographical Society. On Monday he will make a call at the Association of Learned Societies.

Prince Peter and his wife have been stopping at the Carlyn Hotel in New York, where King Peter and Queen Alexandra of Yugoslavia have also been staying. Confusion in phone messages has resulted. Yesterday a new note was added, when a local maid carefully announced "Saint Peter is calling."

TWO of the town's most popular Parisians, Mr. and Mrs. Henri Claudel, are leaving in July. Mr. Claudel, an Attache at the French Embassy, is the son of the former Ambassador of France, Paul Claudel, who was here from 1927 to 1933. At that time Henri was a student at Georgetown Preparatory School, later finishing his studies in France.

Many farewell parties are being given in honor of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Elliston entertained last evening, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McClintock gave a party last Tuesday, and Mr. and Mrs. Andre Visson will entertain for them one day this week. The couple will say good-bye to 200 of their friends at their own party on Wednesday.

The Claudels are looking forward to a gay summer in Paris, and a still gayer September, when many of their friends will be in Paris attending the U. N. conference there.

THE Ambassador of China and Mme. Koo gave one of their delightful garden parties on Thursday afternoon in honor of Dr. Chen Li-fu, visiting Vice President of the Legislative Assembly of the Republic of China.

Later, the Ambassador and Mme. Koo dined at the Romanian Embassy with the Minister and Mme. Ralea. Other guests were the Ambassador of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Outrata, the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Mevorah, and the French Minister and Mme. Berard.

Sheikh Ahmed Abdul Jabbar, First Secretary of the Saudi-Arabian Legation, is still looking for an apartment for himself and his wife and young daughter, Maha, age 6 months.

The wife of the Saudi-Arabian Minister, Mme. Al-Faqih, has gone to the Poconos for the summer with her six children.

PARTIES for the coming week include a reception at the Siamese Embassy on Friday in celebration of the Siamese National Day, and a cocktail party at the Shoreham Hotel on Tuesday to celebrate Army Day in the Dominican Republic, with the Military Attache and Senora de Feliz acting as hosts. The following week, on June 30, the Counselor of the Greek Embassy and Mme. P. Economou-Gouras will entertain for a group of their friends at a cocktail party at their house on Garrison st.

Baron and Baroness Constantine de Stackelberg entertained Thursday evening at a small dinner in honor of the British Minister and Mrs. F. R. Hoyer Millar.

Le Fevres Here To Attend Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Le Fevre are in Washington, stopping at the Mayflower. Mr. Le Fevre is head of the California-Texas Oil Co. in China, and he and Mrs. Le Fevre have come to Washington to attend the wedding of their daughter, Miss Catherine Le Fevre, to Neal P. Rutledge on Tuesday.

Miss Le Fevre has just graduated from Wellesley. Her fiance, the son of Associate Justice and Mrs. Wiley B. Rutledge, has just finished his first year at Yale Law School.

Bowens Celebrate

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Bowen celebrated their twenty-third wedding anniversary at a dinner at Normandy Farms last evening. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dan I. McKeithen, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert T. Magruder and Mr. and Mrs. John L. McElfresh.

To California

Alfred Joniaux, portrait artist, left Friday to spend the summer in California. He has just finished painting the portraits of Secretary of the Air Force, W. Stuart Symington, and of Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army.

Rehoboth Beach Ball to Fete Queen in National Contest

By Virginia Cullen

Rehoboth Beach, Del., June 19.—The grand finale of that "Chicken of Tomorrow" contest that is now keeping the whole Delmarva Peninsula agog, will be staged here at Rehoboth Beach next Thursday with the Queen's Ball at the Rehoboth Country Club.

Some 50 beauties from Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia, will compete for the Broiler Queen title next Wednesday at Easton, Md., when the two-day festival gets under way. The ball at Rehoboth is being sponsored by the local Lions Club, and will follow the festival parade in Georgetown, Sussex County seat. Honored guests will include the Queen and members of her court, as well as winners of the Chicken of Tomorrow contest.

This contest is Nation-wide among poultry men to find the world's champion meat-type "chicken of tomorrow." Rehoboth Beach is headquarters for the national committee, and editors and scientists interested in the experiments.

Rehoboth has entered Miss Cheryl Ann Ritchie in the contest for "Broiler Queen." Last summer she was Delaware's choice as "Miss V. F. W." at the State convention here.

The convention season this month is bringing an extra influx of visitors. Sixty-three members of the Washington Centennial Chapter, 26, Order of Eastern Star, had their summer outing here last weekend.

Of interest to Washington's social circles was the announcement here last Sunday of the marriage of a former Washington girl, Miss Marian Armstrong Ruckman, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John Hamilton Ruckman, to Robert Mapes Dodge. Mrs. Lydia L. Bishop gave a tea in their honor at her home in Henlopen Acres. The young couple had just disclosed to their friends they had been married last New Year's Eve in Salisbury, Md. They left for Ithaca, N. Y., where Mr. Dodge is taking a post-graduate course in civil engineering at Cornell University.

Mrs. W. Wallace Chiswell of Washington was at her Rehoboth cottage, Hemlock Hedge, over the weekend. She came over to attend a town board meeting of which she is a member.

Today in the Epworth Methodist Church Miss Gloria Hudson Williams, niece of U. S. Senator John J. Williams of Millsboro, Del., will become the bride of Robert Hinckley Johnson of Rehoboth Beach. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Williams of Millsboro, and was graduated last June from Southern Seminary, Buena Vista, Va. A wedding reception will follow at the Rehoboth Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shettle of Beverly, Pocomoke City, Md., were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix duPont, who are now settled in their resort home in the pines section after wintering in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Raymond of Washington and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., have arrived to occupy their resort home, Cedar Knoll, in Henlopen Acres.

Congressional Capers

The Ladies Hold Forth In G.O.P. Stronghold

By Genevieve Reynolds

SENATOR ARTHUR VANDENBERG was mildly shocked last Tuesday when he discovered that his private dining room in the Capitol was jammed with a group of dyed-in-the-wool Democrats.

Mrs. May Thompson Evans, special assistant in the United States Employment Service, and Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas were hostessing a luncheon in honor of the Maharani of the Indian State of Nabha and her beautiful, regal-looking daughter, Princess Velma Deri.

In the midst of the tiffin, Senator Vandenberg telephoned to find out who was occupying his quarters. Mrs. India Edwards, executive director, Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, answered the query with, "We're a bunch of Democratic women.'

"Don't you think that you're a little previous," quipped the Michigan Senator who is a GOP potential presidential candidate.

* * *

PRACTICALLY impossible to find in Washington this week is a GOP congressional man, woman or child. They're all in Philadelphia for the Republican National Convention's colorful show. About the only one left in town is affable Mrs. Alexander Wiley, wife of the Wisconsin Senator, who has attended several conclaves in the past. She'll stick around for a little rest and moth balling of winter wear before heading for the home State.

Two congressional daughters—Patricia Hale and Nancy Morse—are having their first convention fling from ringside posts. Both will serve as pages at the convention.

Patricia, daughter of Maine's Representative and Mrs. Robert Hale, was graduated from Barnard College a few days ago. Before taking her sheepskin, she served as copresident of Barnard's Students for Stassen Club.

Seventeen-year-old Nancy is the daughter of horseback riding Senator and Mrs. Wayne Morse of Oregon. The slender, blonde, blue-eyed miss is a popular senior at Woodrow Wilson High School here.

And while the Chairman of the Republican National Committee, Caroll Reece, helps decide the fate of the next GOP presidential candidate, his attractive daughter, Louise, will be doing her special stint, too. She'll be one of the pages for the Tennessee delegation.

Incidentally, a New York designer reputedly created special costumes for the pages. They're to be snappy, complete with elephant buttons and hats

* * *

MRS. JOHN W. BRICKER, wife of the Ohio Senator, together with her son, John Daly, will join the Senator in the City of Brotherly Love. Mrs. B. jumped back to the home State for John's graduation. John D. expects to enter Dartmouth in the fall. End of convention will find the Brickers heading for a Canadian vacation.

By the way, national conventions are no novelty to Senator Bricker. He has attended every GOP one since 1920.

Among the congressional spouses sure to attend the conclave doings are Mrs. Wayland Brooks, wife of the Illinois Senator; Mrs. Homer Ferguson who will be with the Michigan delegation rooting for Senator Vandenberg's presidential nomination.

Mrs. Karl Le Compte, wife of the Iowa Representative, will join the convention throng Tuesday. Already on the scene are the Hawaiian Delegate and Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington. Popular Joe, who has fought so strenuously for Hawaiian Statehood, will serve as one of the island's delegates.

No doubt, Mrs. Harry McGregor of Ohio, will be one of the most sought after women at the convention. Her husband will be one of the assistant sergeants-at-arms. All the no ticketers will be haunting the affable McGregors for admission badges. The Representative says that he won't carry a club . . . unless friends become too numerous.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Respected Citizen Chokes Wife Almost Into Insensibility Because She Planted Flower Seeds Between His Lettuce and Radish Rows

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are in our late fifties and have been married 34 years, and of late he has become so rigid and exacting that I wonder if I can keep on taking it.

For example, it is a serious matter to him if a chair accidentally gets moved a couple of inches from its usual place. If he finds it so he makes haste to move it back to the exact spot it occupied before.

If I change the slightest thing about the house—which I very seldom do—he changes it right back without a word the instant he gets home, and he does this with an air of administering needed correction.

He has always had a hot temper and tended to be dominating, in trifling matters, and I have always tried to humor him, because I hate quarrels and wanted our home to be reasonably happy for the children; but the worm turned recently.

She Didn't Mean To Offend Him

HE WAS away two days, during which I planted some flower seeds, and having a few too many for the flower beds, I planted the surplus between the lettuce and radish rows he planted this spring.

We are already harvesting lettuce and radishes for the table, and I know many people who plant flowers between vegetable rows, to bloom after the early garden crop goes to seed—in ground that otherwise would be waste space.

I hadn't the slightest thought of displeasing Steve, but when he heard what I had done he flew into a rage, saying he wouldn't have his garden messed-up, that he would plow the flowers right out. For once I talked back.

I told him the seeds would stay right where I'd planted them, inasmuch as the flowers would be too small to interfere with the vegetables while they were in season. At that he became so infuriated that he choked me almost into insensibility.

He is a man of education and ability, generally quite charming to people outside the home, and he holds a responsible position. Does marriage have to be like this? What's wrong with us? C. G.

Case of Neurotic Becoming Psychotic

DEAR C. G.: When a person is goaded by irrational impulses which he recognizes as such, and continues to strive for control of them, he is emotionally disturbed but not unbalanced. In brief, he is neurotic.

But when he allows such impulses to overrule reason, when he gives them the upper hand in his actions, indulging irrational behavior as if it were justified, he is crossing the border into psychosis, as seems to be the case with your husband.

The difference between neurosis and psychosis is one of degree, not kind. It is somewhat the difference between the acorn and the oak,—all the potentials of the latter are contained in the former.

Spartan mythology tells the story of a lad who turned an unrevealing face to the world while a fox was consuming his entrails, and Steve has been keeping up a similar bluff in going through motions of normal behavior outside the home, but he is nearing the breaking point, to judge by the recent sharp increase in irrational symptoms.

Man's Grievances Relate to Rearing

IN 34 YEARS' marriage, you have been dealing with an emotionally sick man, the nature of of whose anxieties and grievances —bearing on home and intimate relationships—he cannot explain, because it doesn't occur to him that they reflect his reactions to injustices suffered in early childhood.

This sort of thing invariably gets worse as time goes on, unless ably diagnosed and the trend reversed by competent analytic treatment while the patient still has the stamina and resiliency to remold his emotional responses in the light of reasonable evaluation of human nature. And after middle age, the chances of such a person's accepting essential therapy and profiting from it begin to dwindle.

Thus to your question, "What's wrong with us?" I say the trouble inheres in Steve's personality. You personally display a high order of merit in bearing so valiantly with his distortions for so long; and as matters stand, you may have to leave him in self defense, if he doesn't immediately take steps to relieve his progressive illness, which now has reached a critical phase. M. H.

Ask Anne: What to Wear For June Wedding

Could you tell me if a fuchsia colored faille taffeta gown is too bright and therefore in poor taste to wear to a church wedding at this time of year? I'm to be matron of honor and was told by the bride to choose any color I wished in a gown. The maid of honor will wear aquamarine. There are no bridesmaids. The mother of the bride is to wear blue and the bridegroom's mother, a warm beige. Do you think yellow roses would be nice for me to carry or have you a better suggestion? R. S.

A fuchsia-colored dress would fit into the color scheme of the wedding you describe very nicely. However, the bright fuchsia shades are difficult for many women to wear as they tend to rob the skin of its natural tones. Unless you have an exceptionally clear and young complexion, you will probably find another color more flattering. A true rose shade with undertones of lavender would contrast well with the aquamarine of the maid of honor. Pale yellow roses should be very pretty with a fuchsia dress. Another idea would be to carry a mixed bouquet featuring fuchsia or rose-colored snapdragons and blue delphinium. I'd suggest taking a sample of the dress material to the florist when you go to select the flowers. I'm sure he would be helpful in selecting a bouquet that would be pretty with it.

I have a new red leather shoulder bag. When I get it wet on rainy days, the color comes off. What can I use to prevent this and make it waterproof? C. M.

Waxing the bag will help a lot. Clean with a neutral cream or saddle soap first, and rub to a polish. Then apply liquid wax sparingly (the same type of wax you use on furniture). Let dry and polish well. If this doesn't give complete protection against fading in the next shower of rain, repeat the waxing to help build up a better film on the leather.

I want a brown dress for travel that wouldn't wrinkle. What material would you suggest (shantung, butcher linen)? M. M.

Jersey is a cool summer fabric for a traveling dress and wrinkles less than most. Also good are butcher linen and seersucker.

Attention A. H. M.: We have just been advised that cork (¼ inch thick and 5 feet wide) is sold by one company here, for about 40c a square foot. You can contact this concern by telephoning Republic 1937.

Pop, It's Your Day— Let's Take Your Picture

And if you get out to take Pop's picture today, it may turn out to be a real sharpie like this one

By Irving Desfor

HEY, POP! This is your week-end. They named a day especially for you and that includes being the head of the photo department in your family.

You might casually want to display a little knowledge about outdoor flash photography which puts you in the advanced amateur class. Not too many snap shooters go in for it yet.

Imagine a brilliant, sunny day. Shoot normally and you get deep, dark shadows. Reflectors help, but not many amateurs carry aluminum sheets around. Then somebody (the flash bulb industry, no doubt) came along with the idea of shooting flashes outdoors to lighten the shadows. That did it all right, except that all the pictures took on a nighttime look as backgrounds went dark.

Here's where you tell them, Pop, how to retain the outdoor quality. Merely give the regular outdoor exposure for whatever light conditions call for. Then add a subdued flash, either by putting a handkerchief over the reflector or by moving the flash back to 12 or 15 feet, in that way you do not eliminate the shadows; you soften them.

* * * *

IF THE family calls for entertainment, steer them to a movie house showing the short subject called "Photo Frenzy." It recognizes the existence of the great army of shutterbugs, pictures its many activities and looks at its future. The gang will then understand, if they don't know already, why your hobby is almost a career.

Later, to show your practical nature, you might trot out the new "all-in-one-evening's-work" photo chemical package. This contains in one envelope powders to make enough developer, short stop and hypo to process a couple of rolls of film or make 50 prints.

And all for 20 cents. No need to slosh solutions in bottles, label them and find a place to store them. When the work session is over there goes your 20 cents—right down the drain. But you have your prints or film.

* * * *

THERE MAY come a time when the dark room safe light goes blooey! It only happens on a Sunday when the stores are closed. That's when you can save the day, or maybe evening. Just get a brown paper bag and put it over a regular 25 watt electric light bulb. There you have an emergency safe light for printing!

That shows 'em, Pop, why they set aside a day to honor us fathers.

P. S. Aside to the rest of the family: If it's not too late and you're still wondering about a different gift for the man of the house, how about the new light meter which slides on the wrist?

Beach Colony to Attend Ball

Monkstown, Md., are occupying their cottage on Pine Reach in the Acres, which they recently bought from the James R. Morfords of Washington. Mrs. Boyer is an excellent horsewoman and has brought with her two of her own horses to stable at the Henlopen Acres Riding Club.

Judge and Mrs. J. Edgar Goodrich of Washington and their daughter, Molly, have arrived at Sandy Bottoms, their summer home on the Rehoboth canal banks, for the rest of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Dallas Blades and daughter, DeeAnne, of Federalsburg, Md., will arrive next Saturday for a two weeks' vacation at their cottage.

Col. and Mrs. A. G. Dezendorf of Washington are at their summer home, Clover Patch.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Koones of Bethesda, Md., and sons, Charles and Tony, are spending some time at Rehoboth Beach, and expect to get in their new cottage around July 1.

Artist Thornton Oakley of Villanova, Pa., his wife and daughter will visit Rehoboth Beach Monday and bring with them some of Mr. Oakley's paintings to enter in the first exhibition of the Rehoboth Art League from July 2 to July 13. Mrs. Oakley is the author of a number of travel books, "Enchanted Brittany," "Scandinavia Beckons" and others.

Gen. and Mrs. C. B. Drake of Washington have again taken the Higgins cottage on Park ave. for the season. Mrs. Henry R. Higgins will spend the rest of the summer at Lake George, N. Y.

Dr. James Beebe, head of the medical staff of the Beebe Hospital at Lewes, Del., moved this week into Willow Oaks in Henlopen Acres, which they recently bought from Mr. and Mrs. Ivan R. Drechsler of Baltimore. The Drechslers leave next Wednesday for a tour of the British Isles.

M. and Mme. Christian Valensi of the Washington diplomatic set, are planning a vacation in the Raymond cottage, while the Marquis and Marquise Raoul de St. Cyr will arrive shortly from New York in July to spend the remainder of the season in the Ross cottage on Park ave.

There is speculation about when the summer crowd at Rehoboth Beach will get the digging "bug" for Indian relics, along with the year-round residents. Since last summer a new organization of archeologists has been formed, calling themselves the Sussex Archeological Association. They have run across some "fertile" burial sites around Lewes and Rehoboth, and their finds to date are expected to make archeological history, according to Dr. Thomas Dale Stewart, curator of the division of physical anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution. Dr. Stewart was lured here in May by the significant artifacts uncovered by these amateur diggers. "You have about the richest site in this part of the country with much material on hand," he told the local group after giving them some expert advice on how to unearth and record the treasures.

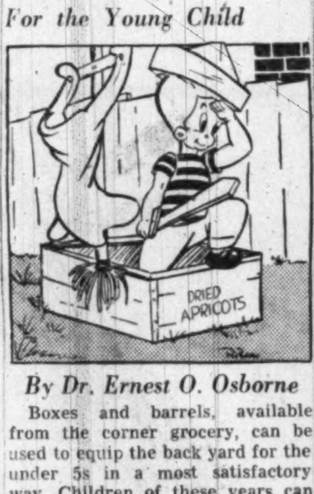
Backyard Play Materials For the Young Child



By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

Boxes and barrels, available from the corner grocery, can be used to equip the back yard for the under 5s in a most satisfactory way. Children of these years can hardly have enough boxes.

Small crates, such as those in which dried prunes or apricots are packed, make fine wagons or sleds to be dragged about with dolls or toy soldiers as passengers. Larger, sturdier ones, after they are well smoothed and sanded to avoid splinters, will serve as boats, trains, and airplanes—almost anything in the imaginative play that young children enjoy so much. A barrel open at both ends is lots of fun, too. It can be rolled around, crawled through, stood on end and used as a hiding place.

A broad, flexible plank an inch and a half in thickness and 10 to 12 feet long is another useful and fascinating piece of equipment. Supported on two low boxes, it makes a fine jumping board. It also can be used as an incline down which wheeled toys can be rolled. Children will find many other uses for such a board, along with the boxes and barrels.

Four-Week Exhibition of New Furnished Homes Planned Here

Public Invited to View Newest Home Trends

By Conrad P. Harness

THE GREATEST furnished home exhibition ever staged in this area is set for a four-week period beginning September 12, when 10 brand new homes, completely decorated and tastily furnished, will go on public view.

Cosponsors of this gigantic mass home presentation will be 10 building firms, 10 furniture stores and The Washington Post. Homes will range from $15,000 to $45,000 and will be located in all parts of the metropolitan area, some in the District and others out where the bird songs replace traffic noises.

Builders and furniture dealers are out to make friends and influence home buyers in a gigantic, well-planned, month-long promotion of dream homes.

The newest trends in household decorations, furnishings and equipment will be on public view in this "Homes of '48 for Better Living" Exposition.

Some Under Way

PROSPECTIVE home buyers and home improvement customers will be exposed to all the new and exciting developments in the home field. The project will serve as a standing tribute to building and furnishing accomplishments of 1948.

Plans for all 10 homes are completed; most are already under contruscion. Some will be especially built for the event; others will represent typical homes in established subdivision.

All homes will be a cross section of what is available this year to Washington home buyers. Furniture on display will be from available stocks.

No visitor will fume to the familiar: "Sorry, this was built for display purposes only and no more are available." Both homes and furnishings will be representative of what the home buyer can actually buy in Washington this year.

Promoters of the show have vetoed any ideas for construction of $100,000 ramblers, crammed with every electronic gadget known to science, with furnishings only a Rockefeller, Vanderbilt or Wall Street tycoon could afford.

Doesn't Cost to Look

THE exposition will be a living example of good design, in both construction and furnishings. It costs very little more to build good design than bad, experienced builders will point out. If you've ever been in love with the cover house on your favorite magazine, you'll feel your heart skip a beat at these beauties!

Visitors will be invited to explore to their heart's content. There is a certain fascination about new homes which few people can resist, especially when it doesn't cost anything to look. Although sales representatives will be avail-

Costs Still Up

Construction Shortages Sharply Cut

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—The construction industry has gone into high gear, with the worst of the shortages behind it and high costs acting as the only brake. Your chances for getting a home are much brighter.

New buildings going up this year will cost nearly 16½ billion dollars, the Producers' Council predicts in Chicago. This is a 17% gain over 1947.

The housing shortage remains acute, but many builders say they now have "broken its back." They mean they are now building new homes at a faster rate than new families are being added to the United States total.

This reverses the immediate postwar period, when the high marriage and birth rate meant new families were so far in excess of available homes that "doubling up with the old folk" became an American custom.

Construction of homes this year will top the six-billion-dollar mark, the council says, for a gain of 18% over 1947.

Publicly financed construction will be 27% above last year, the council believes, for a total of nearly four billion dollars.

Labor supplies are now in balance, it adds, steel shortages may hold up some building for a time, but the outlook for the would-be home owner is much better.

There are more than 300,000 separate businesses, small and large, in the private building industry. They erect buildings ranging in size from the Empire State to backyard garages.

Melvin H. Baker, chairman of the Construction Industry Information Committee, says the industry couldn't get along without its subcontracting system.

Bethesda's Top Attraction Soars 18 Stories

You ride out Wisconsin ave., past Bethesda's booming business district, past the rolling Maryland countryside dotted with new and old homes, the fringe of Washington's housing overflow. Then your car tops a rise in the road, and WHAM, the full towering beauty of the majestic Naval Medical Center practically overpowers you. This breath-taking beautiful aerial photo, taken at 2000 feet altitude, shows the huge project in its entirety, something that can't be seen from a passing auto. Completed in early 1942, the center covers 247 acres off the Rockville Pike. The 285-foot, 18-story, central tower dominates the entire project. President Roosevelt, who laid the cornerstone in 1940, is said to have a hand in drawing the basic design. Next week the aerial camera will shift to south Arlington to depict the Pentagon Building, now carrying the weighty building title of National Defense

Lustron, Other Prefab Firms, Seek Steel

Large-scale production of steel prefabricated houses, such as Lustron and Harmon, will be effected by results of a forthcoming meeting here Tuesday, it was learned yesterday.

The steel advisory committee of the Department of Commerce will meet in Washington Tuesday to take up the requests of manufacturers of steel houses for 58,000 tons of steel for the remainder of 1948. The committee, a voluntary group, is composed of representatives of large steel corporations.

Ray H. Brannaman, VFW commander in chief, yesterday called upon the steel industry to provide steel to prefabricated house manufacturers. In a letter to Carl G. Strandlund, president of the Lustron Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, Brannaman declared:

"We are hopeful that uninterrupted production will enable your organization to supply a substantial part of the homes so desperately needed by countless thousands of families. The VFW is sincerely hopeful that you will receive the cooperation of those industries and suppliers which furnish the materials used in the manufacture of the Lustron home."

The Lustron Corp. is now tooling up to turn out porcelain enameled steel homes at the rate of 45,000 starting next month. More than 25,000 persons have inspected Lustron's model home erected at New Hampshire ave. and Rock Creek pkwy. nw.

The Nation's organized home builders have requested the Department of Commerce to allocate steel for home furnaces and heating units to forestall any possible shortage of home-heating equipment.

The National Association of Home Builders, in a statement to the Commerce Department, said more than one million housing units will be built this year, provided the present home construction rate continues. This total, it warned, would outstrip the amount of steel presently contemplated for residential heating equipment.

VA Appraisals Hit

Financing Is the Villain In Realty Sales Issue

KNOW the one big item which John Q. Public is looking for today in his search for a home?

A ranch-style rambler? Nope.

Lots of picture windows? Nope.

One bedroom and bath downstairs? Nope.

It's financing. The lack of it has killed many sales here in the past few weeks and a check of realtors, builders and bankers this week shows that the situation isn't improving.

"Financing sells the house" is a phrase heard widely in realty circles these days. Property promoters say that if the asking price of a new home is, say, $16,500, and the most a bank will loan on a first mortgage is $10,000, then the prospective buyer has to fork over $6500 cash or else get a second trust.

It's the latter item which is making the difference between sales and "sightseers." Fewer people can pay high cash-down payments and the second-trust method makes for a high monthly payment. In addition, some builders don't like to take back $2000 or $3000 second-trust notes. It ties up too much of their capital, stymies further investments in home construction by the builder.

VA Appraisals Hit

VA APPRAISALS came in for their share of criticism this week by builders. If a builder can sell his home at a sales price which VA says it is worth, then the veteran buyer has a good chance of excellent financing at 4%, provided he can make around 10 per cent down payment and meet other requirements.

However, if the builder finds a VA appraisal on his house is too low for him to sell and make a profit, the builder must list his home for sale to anyone, with the buyer using conventional financing. The latter method requires the buyer to put up the necessary cash-down payment between the asking price and the first mortgage, or else put up a smaller down payment, and secure a second trust, plus the first trust.

Conventional financing is more expensive because of a higher interest rate, usually 4½ or 5% on the first trust and 6% on the second note.

William J. Flather, jr., head of the mortgage loan firm bearing his name, told his side of the story: "It's disheartening, but we are forced to tell young people that we can only build houses for people who can get standard, conventional financing, unless they can get their own GI loan at 4%. The big lending agencies want to make 4% net

97,000 in May

Two Million Post War Home Starts

The two-millionth postwar house has been put under construction somewhere in the United States this month, the Construction Industry Information Committee stated Saturday.

"From VJ-Day through May, 1948, the building industry started 1,979,000 nonfarm dwellings, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics," the group said. "Housing starts in May numbered 97,000, the highest monthly figure since the war.

"We entered the month of June only 21,000 houses away from the two million, so that the two-millionth house undoubtedly was started before the middle of June.

"This represents a gross addition to the housing supply of about one new house for every 17 already existing.

"If we assume that each new dwelling unit is occupied by an average-sized family of 3.3 persons, housing starts have been made for 6,600,000 persons.

"Previous studies by the committee's economists, based on houses built in 1947, reveal that 86 per cent of the postwar single-family houses had sales prices that could be afforded by families having annual incomes between $1000 and $5000."

Lack of Financing Slowing Realty Sales

on their mortgage loans and they can't do it making GI loans.

"There are several reasons for this tightening of the money market in GI loans. At the start of the GI loan program too many loans went bad because of insecurity, borrowers were risky, and no down payments were required. It's all changed now."

Few 4 Per Cent Loans

THE president of a large building and loan institution here, who requested anonymity, gave these reasons why mortgage money was scarce:

"Banks don't want to loan at 4 per cent. Plenty of money could be had for GI loans if the interest rate was raised to 4½ per cent. Furthermore, many banks are loaned up. They need a secondary market where they could sell some of their loans and get cash for more loans. There isn't enough money to go around. People aren't saving as much as before due to high cost of living, withdrawals are heavier."

Harry Poretsky, a home builder of long experience, said he could no longer build for the GI market and make a profit.

Poretsky said he had the choice of using cheaper materials in his two-story brick homes in nearby Maryland and selling them for the VA appraisal of $14,750 or "building a first-class home for $15,950."

"Although they cost me $14,800 each to build," he added, " I was willing to sell them for $15,500 under the GI loan sales terms. However, the VA appraisal was $750 under that. If I can't make $750 profit per house, then I can't afford to stay in the home-building game."

He said his bank would loan $9000 on his $15,950 home. He was forced to tie up at least $5000 cash in each house until it was sold. Of the last nine homes sold, he added, six buyers had paid cash above the first trust of $9000. He has taken back a second trust on the others.

Banks Are Choosey

AN OFFICIAL in the local VA office said VA appraisals were based on "reasonable value" and that VA would stick by their appraisers. He admitted scores of builders were no longer selling homes at the VA approved price, but were setting their own prices and buyers were using conventional financing methods.

Commenting on the scarcity of money for GI loans, this official said: "A veteran can't walk in off the street and get loans as before. However, VA has often called up various loan agencies and secured loans for good risks. Nearly every loan company wants at least 10 per cent down. There are no more loans where no down payment is required."

A loan financing arrangement made over 1½ years ago is still paying off for Leonard Raffell, realtor of Takoma Park, Md. The broker is one of the few able to give buyers of his GI homes in "Stewart Manor," at Laurel, financing at 4 per cent. An $800 down payment is required on a Cape Cod bungalow with a $10,500 price tag.

Investors Syndicate is handling the loans for Raffell. If GI financing were not available, buyers would have to pay the difference between an FHA insured mortgage of $8100 and the sales price, or $2400. The average veteran doesn't have that kind of money, Raffell reported.

J. J. Kahn, broker handling sales for several homes in the Carole Highlands section off New Hampshire ave. extended, said the B. F. Saul Co., was handling financing on his VA approved homes selling for $12,700, $13,500 and $14,000.

"The loaning institution wants at least 10 per cent down," Kahn declared, and they won't touch any risky cases. If monthly payments come to $80 monthly, the buyer must make at least $90 a week."

Kahn estimated he had sold over 220 homes in the Carole Highlands area in the past 18 months. At least half of the veteran buyers, he said, have paid the difference between the first trust and sales price in cash.

Another broker, whose firm has been handling a large per cent of GI loans here, charged that "unrealistic and too low" VA appraisals teamed with the scarcity of mortgage money, had scared many builders out of the home building into apartment and commercial construction.

He said one large-scale builder in District Heights, Md., had lost thousands of dollars selling homes at the VA appraised figure. The builder has stopped construction, the speaker declared.

Permit Issued for 11 Homes in Hyattsville

A building permit has been issued to Yates P. Boswell, owner and builder, for construction of 11 homes in the 3300 block of Nicholson st., 5900 and 6000 blocks of 34th ave., Hyattsville, Md.

Homes will be one and one-half stories, with basement, of brick and cinderblock.

Students Swamp "Bricklayer's University"

NEWEST school in these parts is "Bricklayers U.," now running in high gear on a 16-acre campus at Ayrlawn Farms, in Bethesda. Faculty is composed of skilled journeymen bricklayers, plasterers and home builders. The whole institution is "endowed" by the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

"B. U." now has 100 students and 7 faculty members. Officials hope to have facilities for 400 students within three months. There is already a waiting list of 300 students.

The school expects to turn out apprentice bricklayers and plasterers in three or four months, according to each student's adaptability to the trade. Graduates face no job hunting trouble. Local home builders already face a mounting shortage of bricklayers and other skilled craftsmen.

"B. U.'s" campus is located at the extensive Ayrlawn Farms tract, now taken over by the Montgomery County Recreational Center. Students are being taught in large buildings formerly housing chickens, livestock and dairy products.

Everett Searl, Montgomery County builder, headed a committee which was responsible for extensive face lifting of buildings, making them suitable as an apprentice school.

Now in its third week, school founders hope it will aid in producing more economical and better housing for the local area.

Home Building In '48 Likely To Set Record

New records for home building are in sight again this year, the National Association of Home Builders reports.

The number of houses started this year has outstripped all comparable periods, the association says. Basing its figures on Bureau of Labor Statistics reports, the builders estimate that some 357,000 new homes were started in the first five months of 1948.

May "starts," as new houses put under way are termed, are expected to run somewhere around 100,000, the biggest building month of all time. Starts have increased rapidly since the first of the year. The figures are: January, 50,000; February, 47,200; March, 70,000; April, 90,000, and May, 100,000.

The swift pace is 25 per cent ahead of last year's record-breaking output. Last year, the million-houses-a-year rate was not attained until fall months. This year it was reached in April.

More Articles

SKILLED interior decorators are now planning the home furnishings, working closely with each builder. Drapes, floor coverings, pictures, furniture, etc., will be selected especially for each home.

Future articles throughout the summer will keep readers up-to-date on construction progress of "Homes of '48." Exteriors, interiors and floor plans of every home will appear in the pages of The Washington Post real estate and women's sections.

The four-week affair is the middle event in a series of stunts scheduled this fall, all designed to stimulate interest in housing. "National Home Week," beginning September 5, will educate the public as to accomplishments in the building field. The Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington will open its second annual Home Show Exposition at the National Guard Armory on October 16 for eight days.

Her Birthday Suit Act Ends Housing Feud

Turin, Italy (U.P.)—Louisa Constanza, 30, was arrested for disrobing before her neighbors just for spite.

Since the housing commission assigned her a room in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Giovanni Dorati, pretty Louisa has been waging a campaign of irritation against her unwilling hosts. The climax came when she strolled into the living room like a Venus. Dorati was not as indignant as his wife, who called police. The judge told Louisa to find another place to live.

Untapped Home Market Among Negroes Cited

An untapped housing market among Negro families is revealed in the Housing and Home Finance Agency's study of Census surveys of income and housing. This study reveals considerable upward shifts in both income and rent distribution among Negroes. About one fifth of the urban Negro families received annual incomes of $3000 and more in 1946, and about 185,000 households were paying monthly rents of $40 and over.

Couples Doubled-Up

Real estate salesmen have a vast potential market among married couples living doubled-up with relatives, or in rooming houses, hotels and the like. Recent Census figures show there are 2,900,000 such folks, about half of them veterans of World War II.

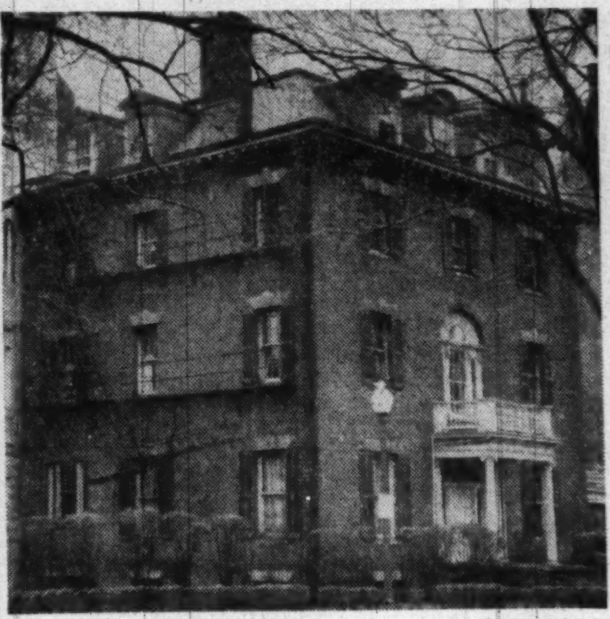
AVC Opens Nonsegregated Clubhouse in Downtown Area



The Washington Post

New AVC clubhouse at 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

The American Veterans committee has opened a clubhouse which it considers the only one of its kind in Washington. Located at 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., it will be operated on a nonsegregated policy.

The clubhouse is a four-story brick, Colonial-type structure formerly used by the King-Smith School as a dormitory and music studio. In it AVC's 2500 members in the District will hold meetings, social events and house the members from other parts of the country when they come to town.

Purchase of the clubhouse represents a successful climax to "two years of talking and drumming" about the project, according to Ely Wagner, chairman of a committee appointed by the Greater Washington Area Council of AVC to make plans for it.

The building was located by Wagner's committee and a fund-raising drive for loans and contributions was launched. About $25,000 was collected and the remainder of the $50,00 structure was financed by a mortgage.

At present, the clubhouse group is attempting to raise another $25,000 for interior decoration and furnishings.

Evils of Decentralization

Growth of Suburbs Snarls D. C. Traffic

By Dorothea Andrews

Post Reporter

SUBURBAN living is naturally attractive to city-dwellers, even when it is not agitated by a city's blight.

But in Washington, it has had at least three undesirable results:

1. Mounting expense to lay utilities to serve new areas on cheaper lands, while between the city and the cheaper developments, areas on more expensive land which have not yet been developed become competitively less salable.
2. Mounting requests for money for arterial highways, street straightening and widening on connecting roads, to keep the retail trade of suburban residents.
3. Mounting traffic congestion, funneling in from a wider and wider area, converging on Washington's central business district.

That Old Bugaboo

AS IT NOW stands, this district is easily accessible to between 150,000 and 200,000 persons, in addition to those who work in the area. One reason for this is that Washington does not have extremely narrow streets and high buildings.

But even so, the central business district cannot accommodate all the automobiles and public vehicles that would like to come into it. So one of the knottiest problems planners face is the flow of traffic.

The master plan for Washington is expected to provide for routing through-bound traffic, probably using Fort Drive as a line for receiving and distributing business-area bound traffic immediately outside the congested area.

By this means, every vehicle can reach a point near its destination with as little use of the congested area as possible.

Where greatly congested intersections exist, planners may advocate grade separations, to speed traffic flow.

Subways Come High

DISCUSSION of the merits of an underground streetcar system in Washington's downtown area has been heated during the past several years.

The engineering firms of J. E. Greiner Co. and DeLeuw, Cather & Co., reporting in 1944 on cost of putting three major streetcar lines in underground tunnels, estimated the projects at 56 million dollars.

While most planners agree that the major reason for Washington's traffic problem is the conflict on the streets between fixed and free-wheel vehicles, they are not expected to recommend the underground project, because of the huge backlog of other unmet District needs.

(Because Washington requires an underground trolley system, the cost of streetcar construction and maintenance here is already much higher than in most cities.)

The District's complex parking problem also is expected to be touched on in the master plan. The Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, created just before World War II, already is studying the problem of off-street parking facilities and fringe parking in outlying districts. Some suggestions for solution of the bus and truck loading problem in the business areas of the city also are predicted.

Air Traffic Growing

IN ITS expanding role as a world capital, Washington's out-of-town transportation facilities are getting more and more use. The Washington National Airport, opened to traffic in 1941, already is severely taxed by increasing commercial plane traffic.

Equally burdened are facilities at nearby military fields, such as Bolling, Anacostia Naval Air Station, and Andrews, one of the largest ports in the world.

Washington needs another large commercial airport and a number of smaller airfields, for private planes, and the master plan is expected to indicate this. The District may match Federal funds to get private airfields, and similar matching arrangements are available to nearby Maryland and Virginia counties.

Grade crossings in the Washington area need to be eliminated where possible; but local communities are well built up, and the cost of grade separation construction is prohibitively high. Any recommendations planners make on this problem are expected to go far into the future.

To augment rail freight lines, the Planning Commission is studying locating a freight terminal in the Buzzard's Point area. This may be recommended in the master plan. Such a terminal would permit combination of rail and water transportation, and assure transshipment.

Park Tracts Outlined

WASHINGTON'S eventual park system already is pretty well outlined. There are to be 4126 acres of city-wide parks, to which all residents will have access, and 2507 acres of neighborhood parks, to serve more limited community needs.

The neighborhood parks are part of a Park and Planning Commission theory of grouping such facilities as schools, branch library, assembly hall and police station, whenever possible, around an attractive park or playground.

Washington's older sections, particularly the Northeast and Southeast, are not now as well provided with parks as are other areas, but this situation may be remedied as redevelopment advances.

The city's school population is constantly shifting, and surveys are always under way to determine what school sites, because there is no longer educational use for them, should be abandoned and turned over for recreational, park or administrative purposes. These surveys are conducted jointly by the Board of Education, D. C. Recreation Department and National Capital Park and Planning Commission. This year, four school sites have been abandoned.

These are the bare bones with which the planners work as they strive to make this Nation's Capital reflect "the soul of America."

Stone Competing With Brick in Midwest

D. C. Visitors Help Indiana Fete Limestone

BEDFORD, IND., June 19.—A favorite question around this city of 18,000, perched atop a chunk of limestone two miles wide and fathoms deep, is: "When's Uncle Sam going back into the building game?"

Uncle's prewar purchases of Indiana limestone for use in construction of Washington landmarks comprised as much as 30 per cent of the output of Bedford's larger stone companies.

Typical Government buildings using the local product are: Department of Commerce, Internal Revenue, Labor, Justice, Archives, New Interior and dozens of others.

Government orders since V-J Day for Indiana limestone have been at zero, since Uncle has done little building of any kind. However, commercial orders from D. C. builders and architects still flow westward. The Indiana Limestone Co. has an order for 40 carloads of finished stone pieces for the Washington Cathedral.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. is using the local stone in its expanded building program. Scores of smaller office, fraternal, church and college buildings will have Indiana limestone exteriors.

Six-Day Holiday

BEDFORD'S limestone quarries and cutting plants, humming busily for the last two years, paused this week to celebrate "Limestone Week," June 14-19, commemorating the first commercial shipments of stone out of the State in 1848.

A large representation of Washington's diplomatic colony attended. Visitors to Bedford on "Limestone Day," June 17, according to the Centennial Committee, were: Ambassadors Winiewicz of Poland, Dillon of Ecuador Vargas of Bolivia; Ministers King of Liberia, Sheikh Al-Faqih of Saudi-Arabia, Zadeikis of Lithuania, Heyne of Belgium; Charge d'affairs Drago of Argentina; Con[illegible] General Cuneo of Italy, Masen of Norway, Viala of France, Ruiz of the [illegible], Reymunde of Spain, Scheel of Denmark and Schapiro of Honduras.

Bedford's Indiana Limestone Co. has built a beautiful subdivision of homes using waste stone. This four-bedroom home, with attached garage and breezeway, sells in the $12,500 to $13,500 bracket. Native stone price competes with brick and wood materials in Indiana

For the past hundred years a large part of the Nation's best limestone has been quarried from the hills of southern Indiana, and has gone into the construction of many of the Nation's largest and most celebrated buildings, including the Empire State Building and Radio City in New York, the Pentagon in Washington and Tribune Tower and Merchandise Mart in Chicago.

Lesser structures in Washington built of the Bedford product are: Statler Hotel, Senate Office Building, new War Department Building, part of Municipal Center, interior courts of Jefferson Memorial, Standard Oil Building, British Embassy, Acacia Mutual Life Building, Masonic Temple in Brightwood and Scottish Rite Cathedral.

Before the 1930 depression, local stone companies were supplying 60 per cent of all architectural building stone in the United States, according to Government geologists. The postwar building boom hasn't caught the limestone industry napping. They are looking for more customers and a wider use of their product.

One firm, the Indiana Limestone Co., has built 20 homes of native stone and wood on a 94-acre tract here. The stone is waste material from the cutting plants. Homes sell in the $9400 to $9900 bracket, with one home priced around $13,000.

Enters Housing Field

H. R. BLACKWELL, sales manager of Indiana Limestone Co., said the housing project was proof that stone could compete with brick within a radius of 250 miles of Bedford.

Freight costs from Bedford to the Washington, D. C., area would be too great to allow the stone to compete in price with conventional building materials, he declared.

However, he added, higher priced homes in Washington would undoubtedly continue to use some Indiana limestone in exterior construction.

Blackwell's firm is in the home-building material business to stay. One large mill will produce building stone on a mass production basis. The problem now is to reduce costs so the material can be shipped hundreds of miles and still compete in price with brick and wood.

'47 Home Completions

Housing completions in the United States in 1947 amounted to almost 62 houses per 10,000 population. According to reports received by the Housing and Home Finance Agency, 63 houses per 10,000 population were completed in Canada in 1947, while in New Zealand, 61 houses were built per 10,000 population. In Sweden, the rate per 10,000 population was 59 houses. In both the United Kingdom and Australia rates of 48 houses were reported.

$200,000 Remodeling Plan Under Way at Wm. E. Miller's

William E. Miller, president of William E. Miller Furniture Co., announced yesterday that the firm's building at 8th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se., is being remodeled at a cost of $200,000. When finished, it will be one of the largest retail furniture and home furnishings stores in the East, he said.

Edward Wormley, New York interior decorator and designer, is in charge of interior redecoration of the building. The entire project is expected to be ready some time this fall, it was declared.

Principal part of the work consists of the conversion into selling and display areas of two upper floors, formerly used for warehousing. This will give the store a total of 100,000 square feet of floor space, almost double its present size, according to John W. Miller, general manager.

A new Otis push-button controlled elevator will be added to the present elevator system. It will serve all four floors, basement and mezzanine.

The remodeling has been made possible through the recent acquisition by the company of a large new warehouse. Modernization throughout the building will incorporate the latest ideas in decoration and store layout, Mr. Miller said. The general contract is held by Charles Cassidy.

Evergreens Need Pruning To Keep Shape

By Alfred Putz

IT IS necessary to prune coniferous evergreens to keep the plants shapely and within bounds. Once they have grown too tall or broad to fit into the garden picture, there is no recourse but to remove them, for they cannot be cut back in the same way as deciduous shrubs and trees without ruining their appearance. This is because bud formation on the old wood is very slow and scant, if it takes place at all.

To prune these evergreens correctly the gardener must know something about the way each kind develops its new buds, as it is these which determine the growth of the new branches.

Although pines do not need extensive pruning, they are greatly improved by it, especially if they are young specimens. Their natural tendency is to form new buds only at the tips of the previous season's growth. By pinching out the new center shoots, or candles, in late May or early June, the strength will go into the side shoots at the base, and that means a denser growth.

Where only one candle is present, pinch it back to one third its length with the fingers while it will still snap off. This will force the latent buds at its base into activity. If this is done too late, the base buds will have lost their power to grow and the stub of the center shoot is likely to perish. If they do not snap off clean, the critical pruning period has been missed. Where more severe pruning is desirable, the center shoot made last year may be cut back to the first set of side shoots made at the same time. Later winter is the best time for this pruning method.

Fir (Abies), Douglas fir (Pseudotsuga) and Spruce (Picea) also are greatly improved if pruned regularly, especially in their younger stages. Just as soon as the new buds have developed in early spring, pinch out the center one on each branch. When the plants have reached their desired height, do the same to the center bud of the leader. Because this is tedious work, some gardeners resort to breaking or cutting off the ends of the new light-green shoots while they are still soft and succulent—or about five of six weeks after they have started. Prune the upper third of young trees most carefully, as growth is most vigorous in that region, but never cut off the light-green shoots completely.

Should the terminal leader become damaged before the plant has attained its prescribed stature, use a wooden splint and soft twine to tie the strongest side branches just below the injury into an upright position. In two or three years this side branch will take over where the original leader left off.

One fairly heavy pruning a year would keep hemlock (Tsuga) shapely and dense. Most gardeners prefer to prune it with shears after the new growth is several weeks old, when one half of it may be removed. Cutting back the leader to a strong branch of the previous season's growth when the plant is of the proper height will limit it to that stature for some time. Long side branches may be treated in the same manner.

Yew (Taxus), arborvitae (Thuya) and juniper (Juniperus) may be pruned from early spring until late summer. Some experts regard early spring as the most desirable. Retinispora, on the other hand, should be pruned in June to prevent browning. Give all these a shingle cut rather than a smooth one to preserve their natural beauty. Cutting back into the browned parts makes them unsightly for some time to come.

Arnall Book Discusses Housing Lack

Ellis Gibbs Arnall has looked at housing, or lack of it, in 47 States during the past two years, and has probably seen more slums, both urban and rural, than any other American except John Gunther. In "What the People Want" (Lippincott), his new book, Georgia's former Governor expresses himself on this subject with the same directness that characterized his "The Shore Dimly Seen," a report on the South and its relation to the rest of the Nation.

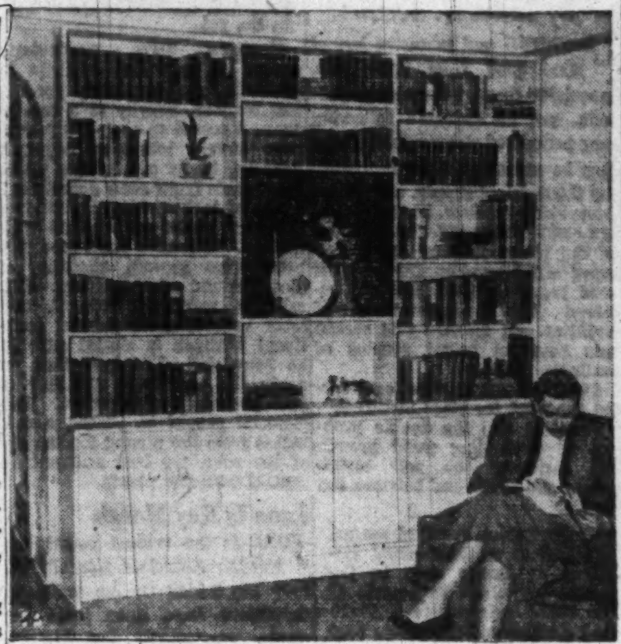
Concerning the Nation's housing crisis, Mr. Arnall believes that the Federal Government must intervene to the extent of providing public housing, liberalized mortgage terms, and elimination of waste and monopolistic practices in the building industry.

Present housing statictics are faulty, claims Mr. Arnall, in that they do not take into account various psychological factors such as the unwillingness of the tenant-farmer to return to a substandard house that has fallen into ruin during his period in the armed forces or the defense plant.

"The housing problem is not one problem, but three," says Mr. Arnall. "There is the problem of the urban family that can neither buy nor build at a reasonable price. There is the problem of the urban family that, for reasons associated with employment, ought not to own a house, but must be provided with a suitable place to live at a reasonable rental. There is the problem of substandard rural dwellings that need replacement. To assume that one phase of the general problem can be approached satisfactorily without reference to the other two is folly. It is necessary that all three aspects of the problem be attacked vigorously and immediately."

Prefab Furniture Is New Wrinkle

By Vivian Brown



This prefabricated bookcase and cabinet unit measuring 8 feet by 8 feet was assembled by a layman at home using only a screwdriver. Top portion, which houses books, is 11 inches deep. Lower section, which has six compartments, is 16 inches deep. This model was made in Mount Vernon, N. Y.

A NEW wrinkle in the furniture market is mail-order prefabricated furniture.

Al Grossman, a Mount Vernon, N. Y., cabinet maker who thinks he originated the idea, decided to do it because as a fancy cabinet maker he couldn't earn a living. There wasn't enough demand for expensive cabinet work.

Today, he says, there is a big market for unpainted pieces. He prepares furniture to be assembled at home. The furniture is ordered by mail.

At the wood market, cabinet makers plan the job from the sketch and dimensions supplied.

This prefabricated furniture costs less than a completely finished product. But the purchaser has to do additional work on the furniture at home.

Grossman says that among small-apartment dwellers there's a big interest in floor-to-ceiling storage wall bookcase combinaceiling to about 30 inches from the floor. Cabinets take up the rest of the space.

He says:

"It is amazing how the fad has grown to utilize wall space, which in many instances would go to waste, unless perhaps it was used for a few pictures. Even people who live in large houses are taking advantage of the convenience which a storage-bookcase-wall affords. They use built-to-the-wall cabinets to house company gadgets such as tea trays, bridge tables and chairs, linens and glasses."

Washington's only fresh-water lake—situated in virgin forest in the foothills of the Blue Ridge—31 miles from the Capitol. It cost over one million dollars to create this 12-mile shoreline lake! It is a sensibly restricted log lodge colony—its residents are your good neighbors. It is free from mosquitos and nettles—and so cool at night you need a blanket. The healthful, bracing air and the quiet restfulness of its 500 wooded acres make Lake Jackson the perfect place to get away from the hot, crowded city. The excellent swimming, fishing and boating make it a paradise for children as well as grown-ups. It is uncomparably enchanting and desirable—the very place to hide away from city noise and traffic and other possible hazards. Established 21 years.

Vacation EXPENSE or Lifetime INVESTMENT
Which Will It Be?

There's a wealth of logic in that question—for now we offer you a plan where the cost of ONE of your vacations will provide a permanent homesite for ALL your future vacations. It sounds unbelievable but it's true that now you can purchase a permanent homesite for the same amount you would pay to rent a summer cottage.

Your Garden Soil Gets Mighty Hungry, too

By James H. Beattie

LEACHING and excessive loss of plant food from light soils, especially those with porous subsoils, can be expected following long periods of wet weather. There may be urgent need for replenishing the nutrient supply, but it's not a one-sided problem. Lack of drainage—with yellowing and stunting of the plants may be easily confused with starvation. On the other hand heavy textured land that received liberal applications of fertilizer and manure this season may have an actual surplus of available fertility.

Study all points when considering the need for more fertilizer.

There is also the double problem of controlling weed growth and restoring the soil mulch around the plants and between the rows.

If the garden received normal applications of commercial fertilizer on leachy soils in the spring, say about 50 pounds of the 5-10-5 mixture to a 30x30 foot garden, certain plants may now need additional plant food. The same commercial fertilizer used at a rate of two or three pounds to the space between each pair of 100-foot rows will do the job.

Nitrogen salts, particularly nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia, are frequently used in this manner, usually at a rate of about a pound to each 100 feet of row. Unless tomatoes, eggplant, peppers, beans and others which bear edible fruits show definite evidence of lack of vigor, additional fertilizer should be applied with caution. Excessive plant food may cause vine growth, shedding of blossoms and other troubles. With cabbage, sprouting broccoli, and leafy vegetables in general additional nitrogen is almost sure to be beneficial. The best time to apply the additional fertilizer is just preceding cultivation. The material should be placed a few inches from the plants; the middle of the rows are best and not in contact with the plants.

June Is Key Month

JUNE is the critical month for weeds. Abundant rainfall this year has added to the problem. Conditions have been ideal for weeds, particularly the various grasses, and the soil has been too wet most of the time to permit cultivation. Destroy these garden saboteurs whenever the land is dry enough to allow cultivation, but don't work the soil while it is too wet.

Keep garden tools sharp

The primary purpose of cultivation is weed control, hence this should come first. Weeds rob plants of water, space and nutrients and it is impossible to obtain really satisfactory results with garden crops without weed control. But it is also necessary to keep the surface in a loose, friable condition mainly for the conservation of moisture.

Young weed growth may be safely shaved off the surface while the soil is in a border-line condition, yet a little too wet for cultivation. High-grade, knife-sharp tools make it possible to perform this work quickly and with a minimum of effort.

DDT Will Kill 'Em

Jap Beetles Due to Appear Here Soon

That nemesis of all green thumbers, the Japanese beetle, will be with us shortly, the Department of Agriculture warned yesterday.

Any day now millions of the little winged fiends will come out of the ground to fatten themselves on some 275 varieties of plants, including flowers, ornamental shrubs, fruits and some garden vegetable plants.

The Government advised any welcoming committee to use DDT as the preferred spray material. The spray is made by putting 2 pounds of 50 per cent wetable DDT powder into 100 gallons of water, or by using 4 or 5 teaspoonfuls of the powder in one gallon of water. Five or 10 per cent dusts will also up the bug mortality rate, the Government said.

Neither DDT or a lead arsenate spray should be used on small fruits such as raspberry, blackberry or blueberry or on portions of vegetables that will be eaten, a Government report declared.

To protect fruit and vegetables that cannot be treated with the above solutions, a lime-aluminum sulfate spray or rotenone-rosin emulsion spray was recommended.

The report held out one ray of sunshine for gardeners: The nasty little chewers live only 30 to 45 days. However, since all beetles do not appear at once, some will be around for a somewhat longer period.

Rotenone Found Effective Killer

Rotenone is the triple threat aide for the gardener who wishes to control insects, the Department of Agriculture advised yesterday.

The agency, in an information leaflet, "Save Food by Killing Garden Insects," said: Apply rotenone once each week; apply it carefully and thoroughly; use other control measures for insects that rotenone doesn't kill.

Rotenone may be used either as a dust or spray, the leaflet advised. Copies may be obtained by writing Office of Information, Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

Garden Soil Gets Hungry, Too

in short rapid strokes provides one of the easiest methods for destroying young weeds. This tool deserves to be used to a greater extent. The narrow-bladed garden hoe is ideal for this work.

Keep Tools Sharp

MANUFACTURERS are now supplying this type of hoe with a square-cornered blade about 2 inches by 6 to 8 inches and it is a "must" tool in gardens. If kept sharp it is possible to work closely along the sides of rows of young beets, carrots, onions and other delicate crops shaving off weed growth and reducing hand weeding to a minimum.

A medium coarse file, with a blade not less than 12 inches long, will keep the edge tools in sharp condition.

A good wheel hoe fitted with knife-edge sweeps is another extremely valuable tool for use in controlling weed growth. It is especially valuable while the soil is too wet for any but light surface cultivation. Dull tools and deep "chopping" have little place in the properly prepared home garden, but a heavyweight sharp hoe is invaluable for borders, fence rows, making up hills for melons, digging holes for tomato and other plants and similar purposes.

Virginia and North Carolina

State Theaters Opening Up

By Richard L. Coe

ANOTHER TEN DAYS will see the opening of two of the country's unique summer theaters. New England may have its flossy, privately run cowbarns of the drama, but it's taken North Carolina and Virginia to put the State governments into the theater business.

A week from Thursday, July 1, will see the opening of the eighth season of Paul Green's symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," at Roanoke Island, N. C.

The next night, July 2, brings the opening performance of the same writer's tribute to Virginia and Thomas Jefferson, "The Common Glory" in the lovely setting beside Matoaka Lake, Williamsburg.

Both those plays, tributes to the early history of two historical-minded States, are well worth the weekend junket that car-owning Washingtonians can easily make. Matter of fact, you can do both via the bus and train systems, too, and you'll find both productions stimulating evenings.

Carolina's Older

OLDER of Green's twin State salutes is North Carolina's "The Lost Colony," which first opened in 1937. Except for the four war years, the North Carolinians have presented this each summer. Now, backed by the State and the non-profit Roanoke Island Historical Association, "The Lost Colony" is assured of yearly performances in a splendid—and comfortable—outdoor theater.

The story tells, on the actual site of the event, of the establishment of the first English colonies in America and of the birth of Virginia Dare, the first English child to be born in the New World. Success for the play was immediate, but its beginnings trace a long struggle on the part of early visionaries.

Celebrations at Roanoke began in 1890, when a group of Tarheels met to consider the restoration of old Fort Raleigh, then a farm in a wooded 16-acre tract facing the Roanoke Sound. In 1921, the project spurted ahead considerably with a film under the guidance of Mrs. Mabel Evans Jones, then superintendent of Dare County schools. The State Department of Education promoted the idea and five years later a large-scale pageant was staged before many visitors from Washington.

Further progress was slow but steady, with a commission to celebrate the 350th anniversary of the island's discovery, but the depression postponed the planned pageant to coincide with the 350th birthday of Virginia Dare.

Pulitzer Prizes

AS A NATIVE of the State and a graduate of the University of North Carolina, the energetic Paul Green had gone on to national fame as the author of the Pulitzer prize play, "In Abraham's Bosom." Returned to Chapel Hill, he was inspired to write of events a lover of folkways knew well.

He called his play "a symphonic drama" because the dance, music and pantomime share the stage with action and words in telling a story and establishing a mood. He collected carols, hymns and dances by such Elizabethan composers as Morley, Tallis and Byrd and, with the help of Lamar Stringfield, worked them into a stirring score that has been sung each season by the Westminster Choir of Princeton's famed choir college.

Leading roles at both "The Lost Colony" and "The Common Glory" are played by professional actors. Supporting parts are filled by community players and young aspirants from collegiate drama schools. Technical problems alone for costuming the casts of several hundred in both dramas mean that planning at Roanoke and Williamsburg is an all-year occupation.

"The Common Glory," telling the story of Jefferson and the founding of the Republic, is laid in London, Philadelphia and Virginia and its staging is something to make one marvel. This year's is a new version of the Williamsburg pageant, employing nine scenes in both of the two acts as against seven in last summer's original version.

A New Form

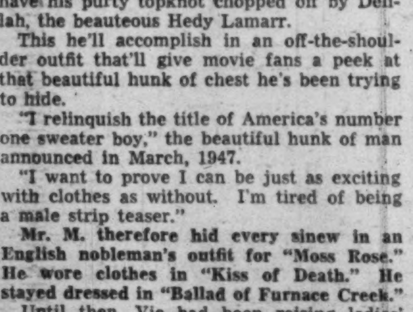
SCENERY Designer Roger Sherman and Technical Director Al Haak have worked out a novel production form for the lakeside theater with nine movable hedges. These are about 18 feet long, 9 feet high and 4 feet thick, some curved, some straight. While the audience attention is focused on one part of the stage, black-gloved hands will be moving those hedges for the following scenes in another part of the stage.

Virginia's pageant, too, is presented officially by the State through its Conservation Commission and the Jamestown Corporation.

With two of the original 13 States recognizing the theater as a means of entertainment and historical illumination—and, what's more, drawing thousands to these plays—perhaps the road may eventually lead to recognition of the theater by the Federal Government.

That Bold Look

Hunk-of-Man Role Again Goes To Vic Mature



VICTOR HEDY

... Samson and Delilah

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, JUNE 19 (U.P.)—Victor Mature, who vowed umptillion times he'd never show off his muscles again, today signed up for the biggest hunk-of-man role in movie history—Samson.

Mr. Mature is going to yank down a temple, kill a lion with the jawbone of an ass and have his purty topknot chopped off by Delilah, the beauteous Hedy Lamarr.

This he'll accomplish in an off-the-shoulder outfit that'll give movie fans a peek at that beautiful hunk of chest he's been trying to hide.

"I relinquish the title of America's number one sweater boy," the beautiful hunk of man announced in March, 1947.

"I want to prove I can be just as exciting with clothes as without. I'm tired of being a male strip teaser."

Mr. M. therefore hid every sinew in an English nobleman's outfit for "Moss Rose." He wore clothes in "Kiss of Death." He stayed dressed in "Ballad of Furnace Creek."

Until then, Vic had been raising ladies' blood pressures in next-to-nothing. He first flexed his biceps with the dinosaurs in "One Million B.C." Broadway put him in a leopard skin in "Lady in the Dark."

Back to Hollywood he nearly caught pneumonia in a hula skirt for "Song of the Islands." Mr. Mature would never expose so much of Mr. Mature again, he claimed.

Cecil B. is immortalizing "Samson and Delilah." He wanted Mature. He-man Vic thought about the nice clothes he's been wearing. He said nix at first. C. B. swept aside his staff and talked to Vic himself.

According to Mature, Mr. DeMille wound up and let fly like so:

"'Samson and Delilah'," says C. B., "will be the most supercolossal epic I've made . . . will receive tremendous publicity and exploitation."

Mature, a ham-and-publicity hound, was hooked. He's off to his cottage at Laguna Beach to start training. Has to build up those muscles, he says.

12 Doughnuts Lead To 2 Good Deals

HOLLYWOOD, June 19 (AP).—Stage Actress Beatrice Pearson has parlayed a dozen doughnuts into the smartest pair of deals this movie town has seen in years.

Miss Pearson, blond and baby-faced, is well known on Broadway. She replaced Margaret Sullavan in "The Voice of the Turtle." The producer, David O. Selznick, rushed out to buy her flowers after a performance. But the shops were closed. All he could find was a dozen doughnuts. He sent those. Beatrice was delgihted. She invited him back stage.

Miss Pearson came to Hollywood, of course, just as many another. Her contract gave her script approval, director approval and even producer approval, in case Selznick didn't produce personally. For a year she enjoyed these financial fruits without a single picture assignment. Then she got bored.

So Miss Pearson bowed out, to hunt greener fields. Roberts productions snapped her up, for "Tucker's People," with John Garfield, at Enterprise. Her contract calls for one picture a year for ten years. She doesn't have to make even one in the second and fourth years. Says Miss Pearson, in conclusion:

"I think I like this town."

Politics for Appetizer, Entree and Dessert

By Wayne Oliver
Associated Press Reporter

PHILADELPHIA becomes the Nation's radio and television capital tomorrow with the opening of the Republican National Convention.

Broadcasters have installed microphones and television cameras all over the place.

The convention delegate will have a hard time sneezing without being heard from the rockbound coast of Maine to the sunny shores of California.

And if he should doze off and start nodding, he could be seen on television screens from Richmond, Va., all the way to Boston, Mass.

The radio listener and television viewer, meanwhile, will find convention broadcasts at frequent intervals at nearly every point on the dial.

As the convention approaches the selection of a Republican presidential nominee, the tempo will increase. And as the crucial balloting starts, the major radio chains and the television networks plan to cancel out everything else to broadcast from the convention floor.

NBC estimates it will devote 40 to 50 hours of radio time to convention broadcasts and perhaps 60 hours to telecasts. ABC has scheduled nearly 23 hours of convention broadcasts in advance plus additional pickups from the convention as things begin to get hot.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has made no time estimate but has 116 radio broadcasts and telecasts definitely scheduled, with others planned as developments warrant. The Mutual Broadcasting System says its entire radio program for the week will be geared to give full convention coverage. The Dumont Television Network is keeping its schedule flexible to pick up from the convention floor whenever major action is in progress.

So it appears the radio and television menu for the week will be convention for appetizer, convention for entree and convention for dessert.

Post Staffers to Take Part

By Orval Hopkins

WASHINGTON radio and video plants, network-affiliated and otherwise, are prepared for a thorough job on convention coverage.

WINX, staffed by Tom Wade and other newscasters and augmented by Edward T. Folliard, Mary Spargo and Edward Ryan of The Washington Post, will carry news reports through the day and a special roundup of the day's developments each evening.

WTOP, the CBS outlet here, will relay "feedbox" information from as close to the candidates as possible. Columbia is assigning ace reporters to top nomination possibilities, with Governor Dewey being tagged by his neighbor-friend, Lowell Thomas; Eric Sevareid following Harold Stassen; Senator Taft being shadowed by Joseph C. Harsh, and Senator Vandenberg by veteran reporter Edward R. Murrow.

The CBS will also have Bill Henry on the platform, Quincy Howe and others on the convention floor; Larry Leseuer and four colleagues on roving assignment, and Howard K. Smith, recently back from London, on special jobs with several high-class prowlers.

Mutual, in addition to piping in through WOL its regular news coverage of the convention, is planning to carry Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois and his keynote address Monday night, but says the word "tentative" should be emphasized in this connection. MBS is scheduled on Tuesday evening to carry the speeches of Permanent Chairman Joseph W. Martin and Herbert Hoover. Gabriel Heatter will say what he thinks about the convention over WOL on Wednesday at 9 p. m. and the station will broadcast a regular convention roundup each evening at 9:15.

NBC, through WRC, its Washington outlet, will have Bob Trout, Robert McCormick, the "three-star extra" boys—Ned Brooks, Ray Henle and Felix Morley—Alex Dreier, Morgan Beatty, H. V. Kaltenborn and Richard Harkness giving their views of the convention, some speaking from Philadelphia, the others working from Washington or Chicago. Harkness and Beatty will be on the platform at the convention, while Trout and Kaltenborn will take a sort of toplofty overlook at things.

It's Choice Twixt Fight And the GOP

YOU'VE got to make up your mind by next Wedneseday night.

Then tune in your radio. Which will it be?

The Louis-Walcott heavyweight championship fight, or the Republican presidential nominating session? They're on at exactly the same time.

No indecision now. No nervous punching of first one station button, then another. Because if you do, you're likely to hear something like this:

Esther Williams Talking

Tired of Scanties, She Wants to Act

By Howard C. Heyn

HOLLYWOOD, JUNE 19 (AP).—Just how far does a girl have to swim to became an actress?

Esther Williams is beginning to wonder. Of course, Esther has been doing all right in a bathing suit. The point is, comely Miss Williams is beginning to think of herself as an actress, however the studio may regard her talents.

"I have never had," says she, "a really good story."

Now that is the second oldest cry in Hollywood. The hoariest, naturally, is: "I want more money." Tap dancers, nautch girls, crooners, boopers and acrobats wind up out here on the strength of their specialized abilities. Invariably, after a few pictures, they want to be actors.

Esther does have a point, though, when she says she's sick of silly musicals. She's been in enough of them.

Yearns for Comedy

"I KNOW it's not for me to say what the studio does with me," she conceded earnestly. "They're going to put me in the things that make money. I don't dislike musicals, but I don't want to go on doing them forever."

What would Miss Williams like to do? Comedy. That's another universal yearning. Esther is friendly and she has a good sense of humor. That may be enough in her case. Usually it isn't.

On the set of "Bathing Beauty," which provided her first important role about five years ago, Esther was completely eclipsed by Comic Red Skelton. In the

When Feeding Actors

You Dish Up Diplomacy Along With the Chow

By Jean Meegan

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—When actors are successful enough to eat regularly, they can't. Nightly around 6:30 they are hungry, even as you and I, but they can't have dinner. A menu that would be ideal for the rest of us is too heavy for the thespic temperament.

Certain restaurants cater to this dietary dilemma. Sardi's "21," The Stork Club and Toots Shor's are geared for "split meals." Such items as Welsh rarebits, eggs benedict and hamburgers. They also specialize in the abrupt expensive efficiency necessary to get their customers out in time.

In Two Installments

VINCENT SARDI, JR., puts it this way: "You don't sell any $25 dinners to actors, but they're in a couple of times a night. They swallow some soup or a sandwich, or maybe a lamb chop with some spinach before the show."

The second installment of supper is more fun. Day is done. They can have a nip or two. In the easy cameraderie of each others' company they have the digestion for richer viands: steak tidbits, crab meat au gratin, cold meats, perhaps a good piece of cheese.

'Knife and Fork Boy'

TOOTS SHOR nominates Orson Wells as the best eater in show business. "Welles," say Shor, "is my knife and folk boy." He is the kind of a supper partner who not only orders triple cut roast beef—but eats yours, too.

"Sonja Henie," Shor says "would eat the woodwork. She's always askin' me if the graham cracker pie will put weight on her."

Sardi says "the theater has all the fights and feuds of a small town." Proprietors try to be careful where to seat spatting sweethearts, separated couples, old associates who are on the outs.

Actors out of work are more likely to require and get more attention than their successful brethren. Sherman Billingsley of the Stork Club says theater people are of two extremes: "Either they want the best table in the room or they want to be away from everybody."

Call for Plover Eggs

HOLLYWOOD people prefer showy tables—and eat tons of Eastern sea food.

Jack Barrymore, a trencherman of note, called "21" from Chicago one night. The desire of his life at the moment was for plover eggs. He asked the late Jack Kriendler to stock up on the exotic delicacy.

Kriendler shopped the fancy groceries to no avail. He tried the chief steward of the Mauretania. The Cunard Line had some but on the other side of the ocean.

The New York State game warden had no plover eggs but suggested the United States Fish and Wildlife Service in Washington, D. C. Washington had two plover birds and was delighted to find a customer. But Barrymore never showed up.

Like Garlic—Disguised

LOUIS CALHERN, Helen Hayes, the Gishes sit quietly in corners. Katharine Cornell likes an inconspicuous table in back and a salad she concocts of greens and anchovies smothered in garlic dressing.

Sardi says all actors seem to like garlic but feel better eating it if it's disguised on the menu.

As a courtesy to English actors these restaurants keep in stock such typically British fare as tonic water, ginger beer, and an item called Pim's No. 1 cup.

Billingsley says the reason actors frequent a half dozen restaurants in a city that boasts 9000 is "they want to kill as many birds with one stone as possible."

"The theater crowd," he says, "doesn't want to waste time. They want to go to a good recognized spot for the best food and service they can afford and they want to talk shop."

Occasionally there is a temperamental explosion on the premises. At such moments the restaurateur must ask "Are these people worth all the trouble they cause?" Invariably they conclude: "Yes."

"The theater crowd," Billingsley says, "are the atmosphere other people pay to see."

Critic Closes Books on a Musical Year

By Paul Hume

MUSIC, like a large corporation, has its fiscal year.

A concert season is considered closed either on June or July 1. In any case, a concert season is ended, and a new one begun with the advent of summer's formal concerts.

Thus, with the coming of the National Symphony Orchestra to the Watergate week after next, it seems appropriate to discuss the solo recitals with which Constitution Hall was occupied this past year.

Specifically excluded from considerations are orchestral and choral programs, and those exemplary recitals given weekly in our galleries. For the most part, the artists appearing in those halls fall into categories other than those of the world headliners who come to Constitution Hall. (There have been occasions when the artistry was far superior in the smaller galleries.) We shall make two exceptions to our principal locale in the cases of Jennie Tourel and Roland Hayes.

Great Activity

THE past season has been one of astounding activity in the concert field The largest number of concerts of any single Washington season was achieved with the advent of a third impresario.

Financially the season was not a great success for any of the three. The concert manager who brought newer artists in less familiar repertoire lost everything but his shirt. The management specializing in long-standing public favorites playing a standard repertoire saw Constitution Hall less than full far more than in recent seasons. And the manager who endeavored to strike a happy medium in choice of artists was host to more than his share of half-empty houses.

Lillian Gish Is Opening At Olnev on Tuesday

WITH many summer theaters just opening or still to open, the Olney this week offers the fourth play of its summer season, Noel Coward's "The Marquise," starring Lillian Gish.

Appearing with Miss Gish in the role she played with her last summer will be Mary MacArthur, who made her Olney bow with her mother, Helen Hayes, in the theater's opening play, "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire." John Williams, who played opposite Miss Hayes in the opener, returns for Miss Gish's engagement and also at the top of the cast will be Ralph Clanton, Jupiter of the current "Amphitryon."

Miss Gish's distinguished career in the American cinema and stage need hardly be elaborated upon. As one of the screen's first stars, she was guided by David Ward Griffith. Although she appeared as Walter Huston's wife in this season's "Duel in the Sun," Miss Gish in recent years has devoted herself mainly to the stage.

This season she appeared with John Gielgud in "Crime and Punishment," opposite whose Hamlet, some years ago, she presented a memorable Ophelia. For several years both the Gish sisters played Mother in the touring "Life With Father," Lillian heading one company and Dorothy another.

Coward's comedy is one of his earliest, written when he was 25 and is a pistache of eighteenth century high-life. Jerome Coray is directing the play and S. Syrjala has designed the settings.

Halla Stoddard, Clanton and Donald Murphy give their final performances today in S. N. Behrman's amusing, literate comedy about the love lives of the Grecian gods and heroes, "Amphitryon 38." There's a matinee at 2:45, and evening performance at 8:45.

Graduate of GW Playing In 'Harvey' at National

IT MAY come as a surprise to the thousands who've seen "Harvey" so far during its five-week stay at the National that one of the players is the daughter of the late Rev. John W. Frizzell, long the pastor of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church.

MISS FRIZZELL

Miss Frizzell is playing the role of Dr. Chumley's vivacious wife, the lady who becomes so frankly charmed with Frank Fay's Elwood P. Dowd.

A graduate of George Washington University, Miss Frizzell has had a full theatrical career on Broadway and the road. She recently acted the senator's wife in "Born Yesterday" and appeared here in the Theater Guild's "The Winter's Tale." During the war she was in the Army Air Force play, "Winged Victory" and also has appeared with Eva Le Gallienne's repertory company, "Another Language," "Apron Strings," "The Grand Street Follies" and "The Sap."

Miss Frizzell now has the satisfaction of having her hometown visit extended through July 10, for "Harvey" is extending its stay at the National to a full two months, longest continuous run for an E street hit. The final week of the run, the Wednesday matinee will be omitted in favor of an afternoon performance on Monday, July 4.

Cross Roads Opens Wednesday

WEDNESDAY night the Cross Roads Theater will open its twelfth consecutive season of nightly summer plays in the barn theater at Bailey's Cross Roads, just over the Potomac in Virginia.

William McCleery's comedy, "Parlor Story" is the play, which Forney Reese has directed.

The cast includes Karl Schuon, Ann Cloward, Jane Drew, Bernice Blease, Byron Rash, Joseph Gross, Richard Vosburgh, Jim O'Neill, Frank Moss and Margaret Morrison.

For those without private cars, the Cross Roads Theater may be reached via the ABW bus from 12th and Pa. ave., marked Bailey's Cross Roads. Further information about the theater and its schedule may be obtained at Woodley 5303.

Recap on Music Season

Artistically the year was disappointing. A reviewer going to hear pianists, singers and violinists could have made a rather accurate guess ahead of the concert as to program content, and manner of playing. The surprises were few, on both credit and debit sides.

One Man's Word

THREE women singers led the field in the big hall: Gladys Swarthout, Eleanor Steber and Lotte Lehmann. Swarthout's program was the most enterprising and best sung. She showed continuing energy and intelligence in seeking out new and excellent material.

Steber was a close second with a handsome program of classic arias, Lieder and French songs, and fine American works. Her singing too, was, at its best, superb. It did not sustain throughout the fine level of its best moments. And Lehmann was again a peerless singer in a balanced list of high worth.

Jan Peerce alone among the men singers gave a fine recital both in content and delivery. His radio and record work had given the impression that he forces his voice, whereas he uses it with great care and beauty. His art is a good, solid one. Pinza has let his singing go rather badly, and his concert this year was of little real worth, either vocally or musically.

Five Top Pianists

AMONG the 15 pianists soloing in Washington's chief auditorium this year, Schnabel, Serkin, Casadesus and Luboshutz and Nemenoff were outstanding: they all play the piano as intelligent musicians who understand its non-percussive nature. No fanfare, no extra musical idiosyncracies, just good, solid, beautiful music.

CASADESUS

TOUREL

Last year we said of Horowitz, "Heaven should be a place where Vladimir Horowitz plays the piano as he played it last night." This season he reverted to his earlier days of pounding the piano, and the music he played was seldom interesting.

From Rubinstein and Iturbi we hope for little more in the years ahead. Rubinstein's technique and repertoire are phenomenal. Perhaps he will yet return to being an artist.

Violinists drew the smallest houses, but provided some of the greatest moments. The concert of Joseph Szigeti, attended by perhaps a thousand, was a ceaseless revelation of music and art wedded in perfect interpretation. He was closely rivaled by Francescatti, and at moments by both Spivakovsky and Menuhin, though Menuhin seemed to care for little on his own program except the towering sonata of Bartok.

Tourel Finest

OUR EXCEPTIONS remain: Jennie Tourel, who sang at Dumbarton Oaks, provided the finest singing of this or several seasons.

Roland Hayes must also be included, though he did not appear in Constitution Hall. His program was sung in one of our churches. Hayes, though he stands above most singers as Everest outreaches its neighboring peaks, cannot sing in Constitution Hall because he is not white. The loss is ours.

At another time we shall take up the orchestras and larger ensembles of the year.

Other music news and the music calendar for this week will be found on Page 4, Column 1.

June Lockhart to Do Film on West Coast

June Lockhart, Eagle Lion Films star who has scored a personal success in the legitimate Broadway production "For Love or Money, has left the cast of the play to return to Hollywood.

Immediately upon arrival on the West Coast, Miss Lockhart will begin conferences with Eagle Lion executives on her next starring film role for the studio, which has options on several successful plays and novels tailored to Miss Lockhart's specific comedy style.

But eden ahbez Likes His Name That Way

Hollywood, June 19 (AP).—Because he believes that God is the only proper name which should be capitalized, the composer of "Nature Boy" inserted a clause in his RKO studio contract requiring that his own name, eden ahbez, shall appear only in lower case. The song will be used by RKO as the theme of "The Boy With Green Hair."

Washington Stations Set To Handle Convention

The women's angle will be taken care of by Mary Margaret McBride and Nancy Osgood. NBC also is adopting the system of assigning a key man to a promising possibility.

Augments Staff

WMAL, THE WASHINGTON ABC affiliate, is sending William Neel, Peg Eck and Richard Rendell to agument its staff in Philadelphia. Commentaries will be forthcoming from Dorothy Fulheim, Jack Beall and Tris Coffin. In addition, WMAL—TV will pick-up television highlights broadcast direct from the auditorium.

The Dumont video web, of which WTTG is the local outlet, has lined up some major names to tell its "listeners" about the convention, including Drew Pearson, Fulton Lewis, jr., Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Ernest K. Lindley and others. Pearson is down for a five-minute stint each night at 8:55.

WNBW, the Washington NBC television station, begins tonight at 7:30 with "How a Convention Works," and will follow through the week with programs bearing intriguing titles like "Hat Fashions for Delegates," "Dark Horses," and "Tea With Alice Longworth." NBC will be on hand for each session of the convention until something happens.

WWDC expects to carry full news coverage and will put late bulletins on the air at regular intervals all week. WASH-FM plans to broadcast "anything and everything which takes place on the convention floor."

At the Bridge Table

WBL Individual Tourney Opens Here Wednesday

By Marian H. Barre

NEXT BIG EVENT on the local duplicate horizon is the first annual individual championship of the Washington Bridge League, to be held in two sessions at the Roosevelt Hotel on June 23 and 30. Entries will be divided into three groups, according to master point standings, and each group has been restricted to 28 players.

Hardly will the last card have been played in this event than the local bridge group will move to Carvel at Annapolis, where they will be joined by a large contingent of New York and Philadelphia players at the championships held annually over the Fourth of July weekend.

Since the holiday will be celebrated on Monday this year, the program will begin Friday night, July 2, with men's and women's pairs, and will continue with two-session events for the mixed, open, and team championships in that order. Refreshments will be served after the mixed pair game on Saturday night. This event is sponsored jointly by the Bridge Leagues of Washington and Baltimore.

◆

MRS. HOWARD G. CAMPBELL, newly elected president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Washington Bridge League, has appointed the following chairmen for the year: Welfare, Mrs. Jesse Gilbert; hospitality, Mrs. H. S. Klein; ways and means, Mrs. Dora Schwartz; membership, Mrs. Frederick Eberson; publicity, Mrs. Margaret Fisher; parliamentarian, Mrs. Harold Young.

These chairmen, together with three elected members, the clubs' officers, and the retiring president, make up the executive board of the organization.

The first meeting of the new board was held at Mrs. Campbell's home in Alexandria, where proposed changes and revisions in the constitution and by-laws were discussed.

Another meeting has been called for June 28 at the home of Mrs. Klein.

Sure Sellers Are Pushed By Columbia

COLUMBIA has decided to return many of its most popular albums to public notice through a series of promotional campaigns.

June will find record dealers urging buyers to take the London Philharmonic-Dorati version of Tschaikowsky's Swan Lake and Bruno Walter's New York Philharmonic recording of Smetana's Moldau. During the war these two excellent sets were difficult to find. They have always been our preference among several possibilities of each work.

Brahms: Der Kranz, Der Schmied, Feldeinsamkeit. Lotte Lehmann, soprano, with Paul Ulanowsky, pianist. Victor 10-1405. $1.

Three beautiful songs of differing moods superbly sung. Lehmann is in good voice; the only complaint is that surface noise is so bad one can hardly hear the singer.

Strauss: Gypsy Baron Overture. Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler. Victor 12-0188. $1.25.

Fiedler has the right touch for this perfect summer music. He does not drive it too hard and the waltzes come out but beautifully. Excellent recording and good surfaces on my copy.

Grieg: Sigurd Jorsalfar—Homage March. Constant Lambert and the Halle Orchestra. Columbia 72517. $1.25.

This march has lots of admirers, chiefly among all those who may have played in high school bands and orchestras. Here it gets fine treatment in every way.

Grieg: Peer Gynt Suite. Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy. Columbia, $3.35.

How about a ban on recordings of Peer Gynt for 10 years. We didn't need this one, and certainly won't need another for at least a decade. Sir Thomas Beecham and the London Philharmonic still take the cake for the prize performance of this music, and this recording is not sufficiently superior technically to warrant any change in opinion.

Paganini-Liszt: La Campanella; also: Bach. Two chorale preludes; Victor 12-0206. $1.25. Also: Paderewski: Minuet in G; and: Rachmaninoff: Prelude in C sharp minor; Victor 12-0207. $1.25. All by the First Piano Quartet.

These men, and those who promote them, maintain that their music is not a distortion of a composer's intentions. How they can claim such things in the face of their melodic, harmonic and rhythmic misrepresentations is difficult to understand. Avoid these records as you would a plague. There is a similarity. P. H.

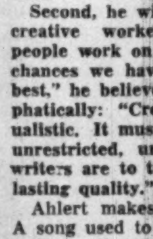
New ASCAP Head Penned 600 Songs

By W. G. Rogers

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—"Song writers don't have an easy time, and I know it," says Fred E. Ahlert.



AHLERT

Ahlert now can probably do more about it than any other man. He has just been elected president of ASCAP, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

A big, broad-shouldered man with hair that is thinning and turning gray, slow of speech and soft-voiced, Ahlert is no man to talk about Ahlert. You have to ask someone else about his popular song successes: "I'll Get By," "Mean to Me," "I Don't Know Why," "I'm Gonna Sit Right Down and Write Myselt a Letter," "Walkin' My Baby Back Home" and Bing Crosby's theme song: "Where the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day."

First, Ahlert hopes to make the use of ASCAP music easier for the 31,000 ASCAP-licensed broadcasters, hotels, night clubs, theaters, symphonies, concert bureaus.

Second, he will encourage the creative worker. "The more people work on songs, the more chances we have of getting the best," he believes, and adds emphatically: "Creation is individualistic. It must be uninhibited, unrestricted, uncensored if the writers are to turn out songs of lasting quality."

Ahlert makes one prediction: A song used to last for months; radio cut that time down sharply; television may stretch it out again.

Pan American Union's Concerts Start Thursday

HARVEY

IMAZ

MORE good news of National Symphony concerts at the Watergate: the Tschaikowsky program July 25th, will include excerpts from "Eugen Onegin." Ruth Diehl and James Pease will be the soloists.

Further details of Dorothy Maynor's contributions to the opening night specify the Moon Song from Dvorak's "Rusalka," "Pace, pace" from Verdi's "Forza del destino," Samuel Barber's "I Hear an Army Marching," and two songs of Karol Rathaus. It was in the Barber song that Maynor had a sensational triumph two years ago at the Watergate.

Pan American Union opens its summer concerts Thursday evening. The Navy Band will play music of the Americas, and Elena Imaz will dance. Miss Imaz was for four years a ballerina in Buenos Aires' Colon Theater. She has also been premiere ballerina at the San Francisco Opera.

The concert will take place on the Aztec Garden esplanade, beginning at 9 o'clock.

Two pianists provide this week's only non-band music. Carol Finch and Vivien Harvey at the Phillips and National Galleries, respectively, this afternoon and evening.

Susannah Coleman, composer-pianist, represents the Washington alumnae chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon this week in Cleveland.

(Soloists: Lukas Foss, Bernard Zighera, Ralph Berkowitz.)
Suite No. 2, in B minor, for flute and strings.
(Soloist: Georges Laurent.)

Lybarger Ethics Code Earns Hearty Approval

By William M. Stuart

PHILATELISTS will heartily approve the code of ethics proposed by Donald F. Lybarger, president of the American Philatelic Society, the most important point of which is that prohibiting monopoly. The head of the largest philatelic society in the world voices an opinion held by many that a monopoly is detrimental to philately. At present it is possible to obtain a stamp issue, control it, then market it at an inflated, unfair price.

The code is most important and all stamp societies should subscribe to it, thereby avoiding grave danger to philately. A membership number should be a sufficient guarantee of credit and high standing in any community. Differences of opinion should be considered. There is no reason for other than friendly discussions in any assembly, but many times uncalled-for violence is displayed.

Lybarger calls stamp collecting "a boyhood pastime, an art of the finest quality or a science challenging the deductive ability of serious adults."

THE 3-CENT commemorative stamp in honor of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, issued in 1945, was removed from the sales list of the Philatelic Agency on June 7. The 5-cent Roosevelt Memorial, 1946, is still on the list.

Air mail service will be inaugurated on June 25 at Del Rio, Texas, on Route A M 82 and cachets will be applied to all covers. On July 1 air mail service will be inaugurated in Providence, R. I., on Route A M 1. There will be no official cachet, but covers received by the postmaster will be dispatched on first flights.

When the 3-cent Wisconsin statehood commemorative stamp was issued at Madison Wis., on May 29, 1948, a total of 470,280 covers canceled and 1,065,293 stamps sold.

The 3-cent Four Chaplains commemorative stamp was issued at Washington, D. C., first day, May 28, 1948, 459,070 covers canceled and 1,913,597 stamps sold.

The stamps commemorating the establishment of Pakistan about to be released will be sold at the Embassy of Pakistan, Shoreham Hotel. There are four values as follows: 1½-anna, cobalt blue, shows a picture of the Constituent Assembly in Karachi; 2½-anna, green, bears a picture of the Karachi Airport; 3-anna, brown sepia, the gate of the Lahore Fort, dating from the 10th century, and the 1-rupee, represents the motif of Crescent and Star with leaf pattern in the Saraconic style. Other details including prices will be announced at a later date.

AT THE Collectors Club, Branch 5, SPA, Tuesday evening an auction was held with President Denison acting as auctioneer. The club meets Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., and all collectors are invited.

San Salvador has issued two sets of stamps, six air mails and six regular postage, commemorating the third aniversary of the death of President Roosevelt. The 5-centavos, blue, postage and 14-centavos, yellow green, air mail, show the President presenting medals to troops. The 8-centavos, green, postage and 25-centavos, red, air mail, show President and Mrs. Roosevelt with stamp albums. The 12-centavos, violet, postage and 12-centavos, green, bear a vignette of Roosevelt. The 15-centavos, orange, postage, and 1-colon, grey, air mail, show Roosevelt, Churchill and Mackenzie King in conference. The 20-centavos, red, postage and 20-centavos, brown, air mail, picture Roosevelt and Cordell Hull.

Esther Wants to Act, Men Ask Why?

Now she holds attention, wherever she goes, even with all her clothes on. Personal appearances, during the war and since, were responsible for most of this new "dry land" poise.

Esther's family never had much money. She remembers when an apple apiece was all she could offer her guests at a children's party. The acclaim she subsequently won as a champion swimmer was pleasant enough, but you don't get rich as an amateur athlete.

That's why, even now, she and her radio announcer husband, Ben Gage, live in a $10,000 shingled cottage. There is a swimming pool, yes, but only a small one. They're investing all their earnings, and that means living simply, she said.

Makes Good Living

A moment later, however, she professed not to know how much money they make jointly. The guessers put it at about $200,000 a year, maybe more.

Not long ago Esther had a brush with Eastern swim suit makers about scanty-wantys—two-piece French-type scraps of fabric. Esther doesn't like them. The Easterners replied that she was behind the times; such suits haven't been made in America for two years.

Esther talked right back. They still make these "unflattering, immodest and impractical" models out here, where Esther buys her suits, she insisted, and as far as she is concerned these two-piecers are appropriate only for the privacy of a home patio.

"It isn't how much you reveal that's sexy," she declared, "it's a matter of curves. Curves are more provocative than nudity. A one-piece suit makes a poor figure look better and a good figure look wonderful. I always wear one-piece suits for the screen." (Not always in still photos, however).

She even demonstrated (with pencil and paper) how a proper one-piece suit smooths out what she called "pots" and "rubber tires" around the middle, paddy hips, faulty backlines and bosomary defects.

Nobody could look much better in a bathing suit—any kind—than Esther. Yet she wants a chance to act. About 50 million men who have been going to her pictures for five or six years will have only one question to ask: Why?

Glass Now De-Iced By Electric Heat

TOLEDO, June 19 (AP).—To de-ice automobile windshields in cold weather, the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. has developed heat-conducting glass.

It's done by coating the glass with an invisible film of material that conducts electric current. By making the coating the right thickness, there is no noticeable reduction in vision, and only a slight color due to interference of light, the company said.

Higher voltage is needed than that normally found on the average family automobile, but current could be suppled by replacing the conventional generator with an alternating current generator. The method was used successfully on test automobiles last winter. In the laboratory, it was found that the glass could be heated to temperatures hot enough to fry eggs or boil water.

Free Umbrellas If Rain Gets You In St. Petersburg

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., June 19 (AP).—The Evening Independent which made world famous its offer of a free newspaper on sunless days, has added a new one to its list of weather stunts.

It will lend umbrellas to residents or visitors who get caught in the rain.

Publisher L. C. Brown announced the new wrinkle.

"We give them a free paper on days the sun fails to shine up to home edition time. So why not lend them an umbrella, too?" he asked.

The newspaper will keep a big supply in the office and invites the public to use them any time whether the paper is free or not. All the newspaper asks is that borrowers return them.

Fisherman Falls Into Trout Stream, Comes Up With $10

MORE PROOF that strange things happen to fishermen is beginning to come down the trail. A report from New Brunswick, Canada, says an angler crossing a trout stream fell flat on his face and came up with a sunken wallet containing ten dollars but no identification.

Another angler came very nearly being hauled from his boat on a New Hampshire lake. A large owl suddenly snatched, in the air, a large streamer fly he had cast and started back into the woods with it. The bewildered angler finally recovered the lure and his wits.

And at Branch Lake in Maine, Peter Vafiades of Bangor reached from a bobbing boat with his brand new, long-handled landing net to capture a large brown trout that was rapidly tiring on the business end of Fred Babcock's line. But it seems the trout had different ideas.

When Vafiades had his pal's finned prize in the mesh sack he braced his feet and was about to lift when the powerful fish snatched the net from the fisherman's hands and dashed into the depths, new net and all.

Bridgeport U Strikes at Race Friction

By Fred M. Hechinger

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 19.—The University's responsibility ends at the borders of the universe. The nation, the world, the stratosphere are its immediate concern. But if its farsighted eye overlooks the problems at its very feet—in the home community—then the institution of higher learning has failed.

The year-old University of Bridgeport started off on the right foot and, in a very important way, set an example for a good many tradition-steeped contemporaries. Its most recent, direct service to the community is an ambitious Institute on Race Relations.

The history of the institute goes back to the early days of the recent war—several years before the university (then the Junior College of Connecticut) was born. With an influx of labor from many parts of the country, new tensions arose in this important industrial center.

Economic rivalries engendered racial friction. The atmosphere became charged with the smoldering discord of unreasonable, emotional resentments.

To counter these undercover trends, a Committee for Unity, Freedom and Friendship was set up to fight racial, religious and national prejudices. That organization first cooperated, then merged with the National Council of Christians and Jews to form the Bridgeport Intergroup Council.

Two-Week Workshop

LAST year the council used the facilities of the nearby YMCA camp to conduct a two-week workshop during the summer months. Within a few days a capacity group of 100 enrolled.

The workship was fine as far as it could go. But complaints came in: Commuting to the isolated camp was difficult; only a small group could attend; a few weeks out of the year were not enough.

Last fall the University of Bridgeport stepped in and offered its facilities.

Almost at once it became evident that the urban university can be a powerful, uniting bond. Under its shelter a committee was formed, including the various Parent-Teacher Associations, the council of all social agencies, the teachers' associations, and the Intergroup Council itself. The triumph became complete when the State of Connecticut sat up and took notice: its Hartford-based Interracial Committee "applied for membership."

First Term Over

BY NOW the first "term" has been completed. Every Monday night for almost two hours the institute was in session. Optimists had hoped that about 50 "pupils" would apply. More than 200 registered at once and average attendance was about 140. Bridgeport's President James Halsey's announcement was all-inclusive: "The institute is open to anyone, regardless of formal education, who is concerned with serving as an intelligent citizen of democracy."

The goal: To find ways of coping with tensions arising from prejudice against minority groups.

The cost: A registration fee of $2.00. But nobody would be barred because of inability to pay.

The course carries no weight of formal recognition. It offers no credits, confers no diploma.

Every session was a revelation of what can and what needs to be done. Amid the shower and thunder of controversy grew the flowers of a new understanding.

Guest experts from every walk of life became the lecturers, but the open debate and the seminar were the real teachers. When the problem of youth and recreational facilities were up for discussion, a group of youngsters from the local schools were invited in to tell of their difficulties. Almost at once the fundamental failing became clear: adults neglect to let children share in the planning.

Without arrogance or discourtesy a 16-year-old boy dropped a bombshell: "Well, now you know what the situation is," he said. "Are you just going to nod and forget about it?"

Action Needed

ACTION was needed. Unless constructive action follows every phase of education only ivory towers are built—ready to collapse in the first storm of reality. The institute started to "teach" action. "Methods of coping with the bigot" moved to the top of the curriculum.

"The problem is always to reach the people who really need the course," said Dr. A. Kneppler. "I feel that one of the signs of real success is the fact that among those who attend regularly are some who can neither read nor write. But their judgment is as sound as that of many who have had the benefit of formal education. Their enthusiasm makes up for lacking prerequisites."

After every "lesson" the class individually and anonymously grades the teacher, the response, and the progress made in inter-group thinking. At the conclusion of the "term," the question was put: "Has anything happened to your attitudes and behavior?" More than two-thirds said "yes."

"As a Jew, I have come to realize that our problem is infinitesimal in comparison with that of the Negro" was a typical reply.

"I've learned to substitute reason for emotion," said another "graduate."

But perhaps even more important, most of those who selfrighteously held that they had been above prejudice before they attended the institute, unknowingly betrayed by their answers that they had deceived themselves. "My attitude has not changed, but my behavior has," contains a subtle shading of involuntary self-criticism.

Since action is the pay-off, the teacher's reward, however, comes with this answer: "I have learned that when prejudice speaks out, it is better to reply in quiet, informed rebuttal than just to sit by silently."

When you come right down to it, adult education is something quite simple and unacademic. Strange as it may seem in a diploma-minded world, it is really just the education of adults. Nobody can be exempted and nobody is ever graduated. But advancement is unlimited.

Peabody to Award $1000 Prize

In observance of its eightieth anniversary, the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore will award a prize of $1000 for the outsanding musical composition to be submitted in a world-wide contest.

Manuscripts will be judged by a panel of composers whose names will be announced later. The work must be a symphony scored for full symphony orchestra.

Competition will be international and without limitation as to sex, race or creed. Contestants must not be older than 30, nor younger than 21. The winning composition will be performed before the end of the current year by the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra conducted by Reginald Stewart. Write the conservatory for data.

Tips to Make Fishing Trip More Comfy

WHEN YOU ARE caught out in the rain while fishing in daytime of while sleeping out at night, the canoe or round-bottom boat turned on its side on the shore will provide excellent shelter. . . . Unless it is to be used mostly on streams, a canoe with a keel is much better, being stronger and safer. . . . It is wise to carry an extra oar or paddle.

If when a togue (lake trout) takes a trolled sucker or chub the angler will drop it back to him for a few seconds instead of instantly trying to set the hook, his batting average as a fisherman will be much higher.

When playing a fighting fish hold your rod tip up at about an 11 o'clock angle and let the rod fight the finned warrior . . . When a fish like the landlocked salmon jumps clear of the water lower the rod to slacken the line. This prevents the fish from crashing down on the leader.

One fat angle worm loosely looped on a hook, and without a sinker on the line, allowed to drift naturally down the current and into the pool is the method that takes the wary old brook trout. . . Build your campfire near water and soak it thoroughly before leaving.

The landing net is for lifting an exhausted fish from the water and not for catching one that is still full of fight. . . . Watch the sky over the lake for wind clouds.

Diamond Display Marks Fair Held by British Trade Groups

LONDON, June 19 (U.P.).—Cascades of glittering diamonds on two tiers of gold and platinum worth more than four million dollars were Britain's biggest dollar winners at the 1948 British Industries Fair.

From all parts of the world, thousands of visitors were here for the fair, which ran simultaneously in London and Birmingham from May 3 to May 14.

Most priceless gem in the collection was the 770-carat Woyle River diamond, the world's largest uncut diamond.

Found in Sierra Leone in 1945, the stone is the third largest diamond ever discovered. Forty-four carats heavier than the Jonker diamond, it is outweighed only by the 3106-carat Cullinan found in 1905 and the Excelsior of 995.7 carats found in 1893.

Strange Stones Shown

SOME OF THE world's strangest stones figured in the fair's exhibit of freak diamonds. Most outstanding freak is a gold nugget with two diamonds—one white and one green—embedded in it. It was found in British Guiana early in the twentieth century.

Sapphire blue is the color of a 12-carat emerald-shaped diamond valued at $80,000. Pale pink is the color of a nine-carat stone cut from an 11-carat diamond in the Hapsburg crown jewels. And very dark blue is the color of a five-carat diamond.

Most remarkable characteristic of the very dark blue diamonds, of which there are about a dozen in the world, is their unusual combination of depth and hue of sapphire with the flash and fire of diamond.

Princess Elizabeth lent some of her personal jewelry to the exhibition. The 21-stone diamond necklace presented to her on her twenty-first birthday by the Union of South Africa and the flame lily brooch given her by the children of Southern Rhodesia was seen by visitors from abroad.

Dollars for Britain

DIAMONDS TODAY are big dollar-earners for Britain. Ninety-five per cent of the world's diamonds are controlled by the Diamond Trading Co., London, and 70 per cent of the total is bought outright by the United States. Stones rough and unpolished travel to the United States week in and week out by registered air mail without any special "hush-hush" about it.

GW Student Wins Trip to Europe

By Orval Hopkins

A TRAVEL scholarship to the University of Birmingham (England) summer school in Shakespeare and the Elizabethan drama has been won by Oscar Villarejo of 1809 G st. nw. Villarejo, who is 39, a veteran and working for an MA at George Washington, sails Thursday on the Queen Mary. The school will be held July 3 through August 4 in the Shakespeare country around Stratford-on-Avon. The British Information Service says Villarejo's scholarship covers his round-trip transatlantic fare to Britain and it looks like a good deal.

A BODY of forward-looking men wants to establish a recreational beach park just north of Atlantic City and is drawing maps, conferring with people, sending wires, receiving telephone calls and generally rounding up support for the project. The thing was proposed before the war and is just now getting back into gear. The idea would be to create a big recreational area where excursionists could spend a day getting sunburned and otherwise discomfitted. The planners say that if things are done their way 25,000 cars and 250,000 bathers could be accommodated in the area.

THERE'S A MAN in Newport, R. I., who collects bells—has 300 of 'em—and here's the way the Hamilton Wright people insist on writing about him: "Father Edward A. Higney, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, doesn't pitch horseshoes, but he is interested in 'ringers.'" . . . The AAA is conducting rail tours to the West this summer, the first departing from Chicago next Wednesday, and the last on August 15 . . . Says here Quebec City is the largest thriving center of complete historical interest on the North American continent. How could you dispute that? Too many adjectives . . . Three New Haven trains have started regular runs between New York and Cape Cod: the Day Cape Codder, daily; the Neptune, a weekend afternoon and evening train, and the Night Cape Codder, an overnight weekend job . . . American President Lines is reviving freighter cruises. The route extends from our East Coast to the Dutch East Indies and Malaya via the Panama Canal, California, the Philippines and China. It's primarily a cargo service, but a limited number of passengers can be carried in first-class accommodations. The round trip voyage takes almost four months. The ships are recently built C-3s and Victorys, and ports of call along the 13,000-mile route include San Francisco, Manila, Hong Kong, Singapore, Batavia and Soerabaja. All right, Mr. Conrad, shove over a little.

NOT TO BE too gracious about Newport here, but its Casino Theater opens its season June 28 with Ruth Gordon's "Years Ago." Among other vehicles to be offered will be "John Loves Mary," "Let Us Be Gay," "The Voice of the Turtle" and—guess what—"Springtime for Henry" . . . The Cardiff Giant, a real 18-carat phoney, is proving a good tourist attraction at Farmers Museum in Cooperstown, N. Y. . . . United Air Lines yesterday started a series of two-week all-expense tours covering 11 States and nearly all major national parks in the West. Tours leave from Chicago every Saturday . . . The French say you can get a room in the better Paris hotels for $5 a day and meals for $1 and up. Wine doesn't go with the one-buck number.

THE GOOD SHIP Mount Vernon is busy as usual. Today the District Firemen's retirement organization is sharing the vessel with a group from Holy Comforter for a trip down the river. And Monday the Montgomery County VFW will make a voyage by moonlight . . . Parks Dept.: Historical tour of Lafayette Park today, 2:30 to 4:30, begins at Jackson Statue in center of park, oposite White House. Auto caravan to Patuxent Bottomlands meets at Patuxent Research Refuge Administration building near Bowie, Md., at 10 a. m. today. Buses leave 1416 F st. nw., at 9. A "new look" walk through Rock Creek Park extended, Md., starts today at 3 from East-West Highway and Beach dr., Md. Take bus from Chevy Chase Circle or go on the Washington Suburban (Oriole) line. Barge trip leaves Foundry Branch dock at Canal rd., Foxhall rd., and M st. nw., at 2 today, return from 5, Brookmont, at 4:30. Lock 5 is adjacent to Stop 24 on Glen Echo carline.

Paris Hotels Filling Up

PARIS, June 19.—Hotels in Paris are filling up with the largest influx of foreign tourists since prewar summer seasons, a survey showed today.

Managers of the largest luxury hotels like the Ritz and the George V reported they were completely booked from now through September and said Americans accounted for 30 to 40 per cent of the total.

With seven new or reconditioned transatlantic liners in service this summer and the air lines adding more than 30 extra flights weekly from the United States, officials of the French tourist commissariat said their hopes were now confirmed that this year would be the best tourist season since 1929.

American Express estimated that up to 450,000 Americans would visit Europe this year, attracted by favorable exchange rates in France and Italy, political stability, and such major attractions as the Olympic games in England.

Youth Outdoor School To Be Held Again

New Hampshire's unique Conservation Camp at Spruce Pond in Allentown, for boys and girls over 14 years of age who have completed at least one year in high school, will soon open for its second season, reports John Dodge, State fish and game department technician.

The purpose of this camp is to give the youngsters an opportunity to learn about and actively participate in America's growing program for the preservation of its dwindling natural resources of soil, water, forests, grasslands, wildlife and scenic beauty.

Wrightsville Beach, N. C.—A new attraction here this season is a 112-passenger excursion boat featuring trips along the waterways as well as moonlight dance cruises.

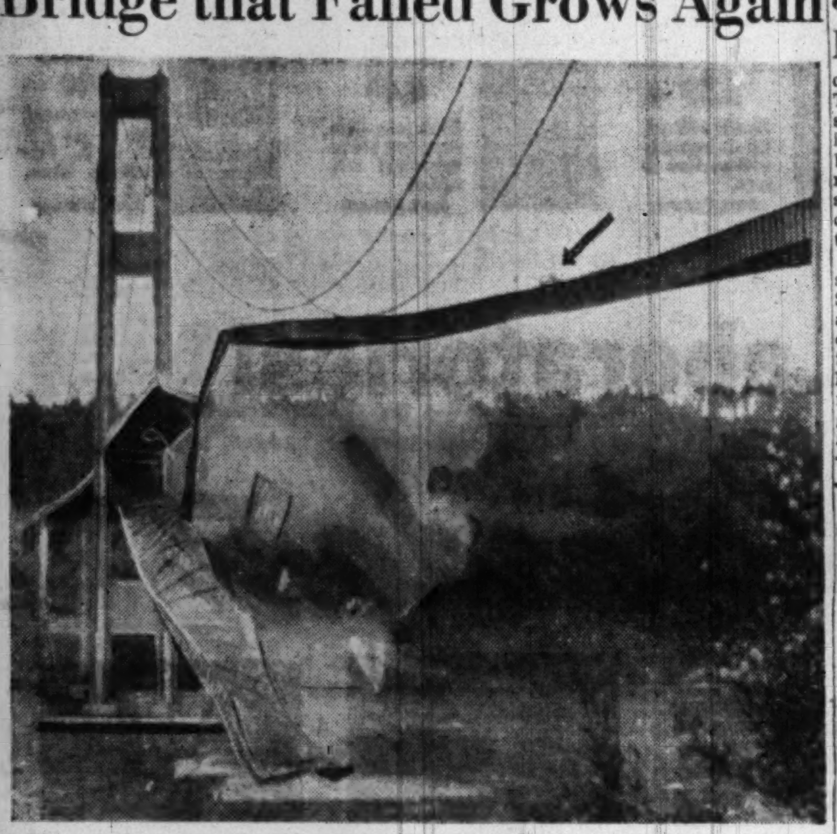
'Galloping Gertie' They Called Her

Bridge that Failed Grows Again



This was the scene in November, 1940, when the big Tacoma Narrows Bridge tumbled 190 feet into Puget Sound. Arrow points to a car, abandoned as the span started to go

By Leonard Anderson

TACOMA, WASH., June 19 (AP).—The bridge that shook itself to pieces is being put back together again. A new Tacoma Narrows bridge has begun to take shape on the wreck of the old.

Nearly eight years ago the original span—Galloping Gertie, she was called—buckled in a quartering wind and plunged to the bottom of the bay.

Residents of this region gave the first bridge its nickname because of its tendency to undulate, or gallop, when the wind blew. On her last day she galloped so hard she popped her rivets and ripped her girders.

Her stumps still stand in the tide rip and her empty abutments hang on either shore. They will be used to anchor the new bridge which the Washington Toll Bridge Authority hopes will be more stable.

Crews are at work blasting the concrete pedestals on which the old tower legs stood. They will be replaced with wider ones to carry the new span.

Charles E. Andrew, WTBA engineer, says three-fifths of the old anchorages will be used. The rest—5900 yards of concrete—are being blown loose. Each base will measure 110 feet long, 90 feet wide and 50 feet thick. They will be able to stand a pull of 18,000 tons at each end without budging.

Then construction will start on the towers. Wider and higher than the old ones, they will stand 2800 feet apart. The bridge will be about 1 mile long, over all.

Giant cables 21 inches through—4 more than the old ones—will be spun from tower to tower and from shore to shore. The last step is laying the truss deck. Four lanes and two sidewalks wide, it will be laid down from each shore to meet in the middle. Engineers say it will be far more rigid than Gertie's original girder-type deck.

The job is scheduled for completion in a little over two years at a cost of about $15,500,000, counting the usable remains of the old bridge, valued at about $3,500,000. The old bridge cost about seven million dollars.

After eight years of probing the problem of what made the first Gertie fall, the engineers think the first bridge was too narrow, so they have fattened the new one up. And because her 8-foot solid wall of girder deck caught too much wind, the new one will be open.

Florida's Dikes Up, Ready for Floods

By E. V. W. Jones

MIAMI, FLA., June 19 (AP).—Florida will be better prepared this summer than ever before should another great hurricane roar in from the sea.

Stormproof building codes, expert forecasting and improved evacuation and disaster measures already have robbed the great tropical storms of much of their reputation as bone-crushers.

The emphasis now is on flood control. Floods are the natural companions of hurricanes.

An air of urgency prevails in the State as local phases of a projected 300-million-dollar flood and water control program are rushed. This work is part of a master plan drawn up by Army engineers for 21 southeast Florida counties. Congress is considering the engineers' plan, which itself will cost some 200 million dollars of the total.

Two Big Storms

FLORIDA remembers two great storms last year which caught the State with its dikes down. Flood waters swirled over rich farmland and into cities.

The toll of the hurricanes of last September and October in Florida was 23 dead, 227 persons injured, 178 homes destroyed, 3544 buildings damaged and 4298 domestic animals killed.

These Red Cross figures do not include the millions in damage from flood waters invading thousands of homes, killing half the trees in many citrus groves, digging pot holes in hundreds of miles of highways or the miseries of families driven into flood refuges.

With the lessons of the violent, 155-m.p.h. hurricane of last September and the deluge-producing storm of October fresh in mind, county boards and the Everglades drainage district have cleaned and deepened drainage canals, constructed miles of dikes to hold back new flood onslaughts, designated areas to which floodwaters will be diverted, and—possibly most important—accepted the Army engineers' master plan for conservation and control.

Urgent work is going forward now. The master plan will require years for complete realization.

Forces at Work

MEANWHILE, the cosmic forces that make hurricanes are at work in the tropics. Three minor storms already have whirled up from the Caribbean Sea. One caused destructive floods in Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

Grady Norton, supervising forecaster for the weather bureau's storm warning service, began a preliminary hurricane watch June 1. A teletype "hurricane circuit" began operation between Brownsville, Texas, and Miami June 15. Another such circuit is in service between Miami and Boston.

Army and Navy hurricane hunters are standing by to track down storms in cooperation with the storm warning service.

Here's Another One About Falling Angler

A report from eastern Canada says that a very nimble fisherman lost his balance and fell out of his boat into three feet of water but that he leaped right back into the boat the instant his feet touched bottom.

But topping that performance is the stunt by Peter Harvey, St. Francis, Me., woodsman, who recently fell out of a moving canoe without getting wet.

Where Fish Fight

By Wilbur Jennings

MIAMI, Fla., June 19 (AP).—Less than 50 miles off the Florida coast, in the area of the Bahamas Islands of Cat Cay and Bimini, big game fishermen are having their day—the giant tuna are running.

Tuna fishing is costly. Equipment runs into the thousands of dollars. It is a rich man's sport.

But it is one of the most thrilling of all sports. Exacting skill is required. The great rods and reels must be in perfect condition. The captain of the boat must know his business.

These boats are the ones which line the docks of Miami, Miami Beach, Palm Beach and Nassau in the winter. Their crews are the best. They know where the tuna are.

Because it is expensive and thrilling, tuna fishing attracts the famous.

The bugaboo is the shark. In the annual Cat Cay International Tournament held the latter part of May and early June, a bite from a shark disqualifies the fish. But the fisherman is ready most of the time.

A tuna is hooked. A shark is seen to rise in the distance. Immediately a line is thrown out to attract the shark. If he is hooked, he is brought to the boat, and a shell from a handy rifle ends his life.

Tuna come big. Julio Sanchez, Cuban sportsman, boated one weighing 749 pounds while practicing in the Cat Cay tourney on June 4. It was the largest fish ever to be caught in the Bahamas and topped the record 700-pounder taken by G. Albert Lyon of Detroit in 1946 when he fished off of Bimini.

What attracts these big fish to the line? The lowly mullet.

Forest Fires Now Costing U. S. 32 Million Dollars a Year

MILLIONS of fertile forest acres in the United States will be charred wastelands next winter. The forest fire season is getting started and will last until fall. During 1946 (most recent year covered by the United States Forest Service reports) 172,000 forest fires destroyed 20,691,000 wooded acres containing $32,694,000 worth of timber and property.

It probably will be about the same picture this year, say Forest Service experts. About 640 million acres of United States land is forest covered. Only 72 per cent of it is patrolled by Federal, State and local fire-protection wardens. The rest (mostly in the South) is unguarded because of lack of State and Federal funds.

In our 152 national forests we have 3200 lookout towers. Twelve hundred year-round and 7000 seasonal firefighters man these vantage points and the vast forest areas they overlook during spring, summer and fall. It's the same in national parks and State and privately controlled forests.

What's the reason for fires starting anyway? The United States Forest Service says that in the country as a whole 90 per cent of all fires are started by human beings, 10 per cent by acts of God. It's a common practice, they say, for some field or forest owners in Southern States to burn their acres in the spring to get rid of ticks and other varmints and "greenup" the grass. Many costly fires start in this fashion, not just in the South, but all over the country. But in the great timber lands of the Northwest it's estimated that 40 per cent of all fires are born in "dry lightning" storms, especially after spring and summer droughts. The United States Forest Service says that California is a potential tinderbox this year because of the bad winter drought.

This erosion-carved "goblet" is five tons of massive, solid rock supported on a slender, tapering 16-in. stem.

NATURE'S

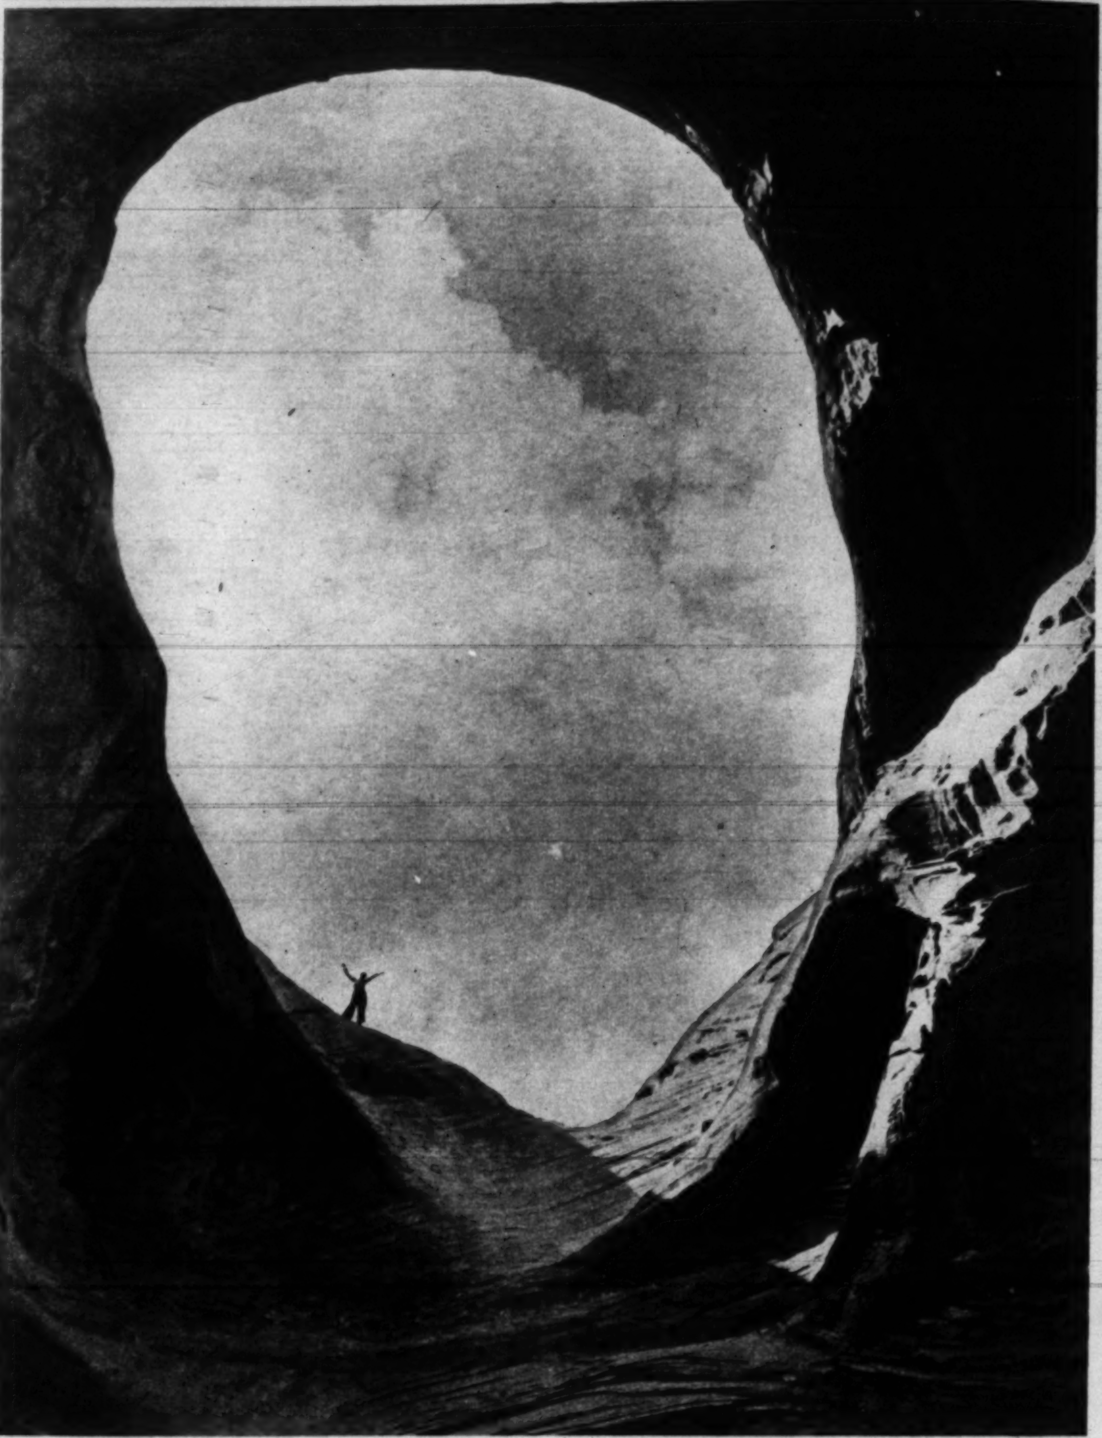
ODDITIES

They abound in colorful Utah

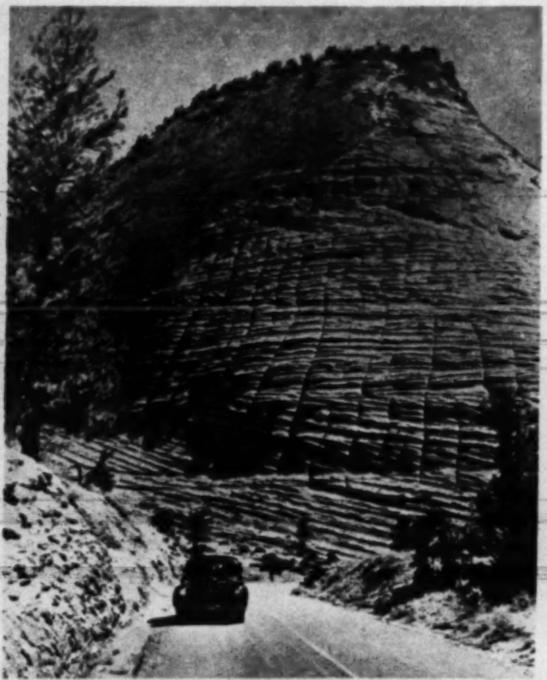
AMIDST UTAH'S IMPOSING peaks and brightly-hued sandstone formations are a host of natural oddities that annually attract thousands of eager sightseers.

The southeastern part of the state, a vast, strange and weird land, was one of the last sections of the United States to be explored. Not until 1904 did the outside world learn of its huge natural bridges.

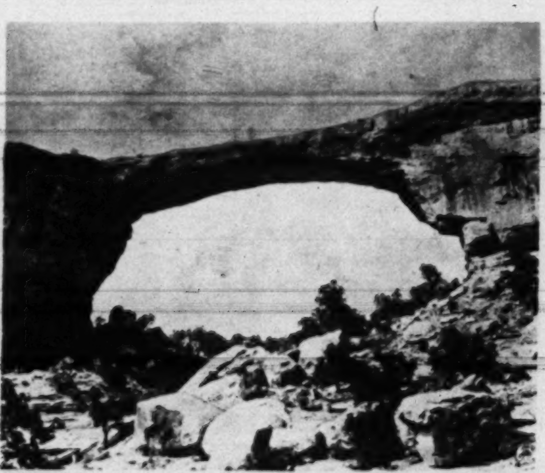
Local glaciation and timeless erosion have formed other freaks of nature in Utah, too.



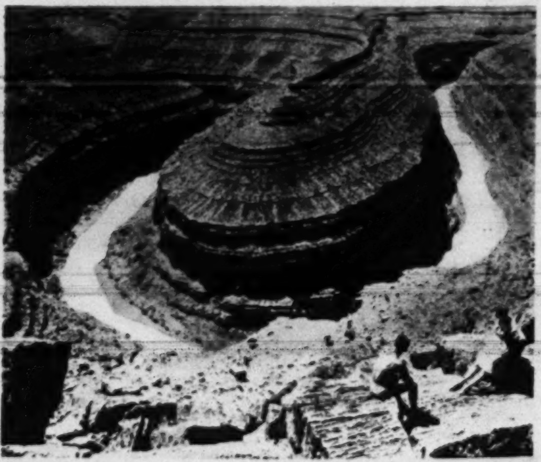
Southeastern Utah's wasteland abounds with nature's wonders. Its Monument Valley has many unique sights, but among the strangest are these tunnels carved through solid stone by the abrasive action of wind-blown sands.



In Zion Canyon National Park, nature piled up layer upon layer of sand which eventually formed sandstone.



Gracefully rising 108 feet above the stream bed of a canyon is seemingly unsubstantial Owachomo Bridge.



In a mud-gray canyon 1,200 feet deep, the San Juan River carves odd patterns called Goosenecks. THE END.

IGOR GORIN

Radio and concert baritone likes everyone but New York critics

"Traveling Troubadour"

IGOR GORIN, A 37-YEAR-OLD Ukrainian-born baritone, likes to think of himself as a man with two faces. One face he turns to an NBC microphone in New York, and as "The Voice of Firestone" enthralls a million radio listeners with his renditions of popular and semi-classical songs. The other face, which belongs to the Gorin that Igor likes best, he turns twice a year to the West where the "Igor Gorin Concert Tour" has brought snatches from concert, folk song and opera to hamlets far removed from the glitter of the New York music world.

"I like to sing on the road," says Gorin. "I guess I'm really just a traveling troubadour who can't stay put too long."

Ready to Resume Wanderings

Last year Gorin stayed put long enough to earn a five-figure wage from his radio sponsors, then took wing. He sang for six months to audiences from Toledo to Kiska in the Aleutians, from Toronto to Oaxaca in Mexico before he finally returned to the radio last April. This year he plans to resume his wanderings as soon as his present commitments expire.

Among the most responsive music audiences Gorin found on his tour were those in St. Paul, Toledo, Toronto and Jacksonville, Fla. "In St. Paul alone I sang before 12,000 people," he says. "They really know music out there—which is more than I can say for some of the critics from the town of New York."

Gorin, who came to this country from the concert halls of Vienna in 1940, met the New York critics during the Town Hall concert series of 1941 when his program of Ukrainian folk music was received with mixed emotions. Although many of the critics praised Gorin's tonal qualities and range, one dyspeptic reviewer complained that his voice "while not a great one . . . is one of the loudest baritones now before the public." Another was irked by his "faulty method of production."

In Europe Gorin, who had received continental recognition for many years, had never encountered this kind of a critical reception. He resolved, therefore, to show up his New York detractors. He did this by leaving the big town, flying to Hollywood, toning down his baritone and winning himself a comfortable living playing roles of distinguished, singing foreigners in motion pictures for several years.

Since his movie debut, Gorin has been making his critics eat musical crow. After his Hollywood success, he returned to New York and made a hit on the air. During the war he sang with USO camp shows and—after hostilities ceased—began his traveling concert tours. "Once a year," he says, "I must go out and sing to the people."

ON PARADE . . .

If ever photographer Allan Gould returns to do another story at Fontana Village (pages 19-21), he is going to take along a pack horse, or perhaps a mountain-trained mule. Professional photographers are used to lugging at least a hundred pounds of equipment along on their assignments, but it is usually done on paved ground, preferably with a taxi hovering around to take care of the heavy stuff. In this case, most of the ground was not only not paved, but some of it was inclined at angles up to 45 degrees.

While the Misses Margaret Walker, Edna Hamilton, and Polly Cranyard were lightheartedly galloping their rented horses along the Appalachian Trail, Gould was doggedly struggling in their wake on foot, weighted down with a full complement of cameras, plates, film packs, rolls of film, and a tripod. The girls knew some fine, scenic spots for background, all of them involving climbing to places where a car will not follow. Gould climbed up Fontana Dam, Gould climbed down again, losing weight at every step. He is now having his own vacation — in town.

NEXT WEEK . . .

Down Texas way, the Sheriff's Posse is riding the range once again. To learn the story of this unique organization and how it actually operates in El Paso, don't miss PARADE, next Sunday . . . Also in the same PARADE issue, authoritative reviews of the new movies that will reach your local screens in July and an unusual profile of bandleader Guy Lombardo . . . All this and more, too, in PARADE next Sunday.

THE COVER . . .

A cool soda fountain and a frosty, frothy soda in a long, tall glass — that spells "summertime" for Sandy and Lindy Block, six-year-old twins of Pasadena, Calif., who appear on PARADE's cover this week. Alert readers will recognize the twins, who appeared on a PARADE cover earlier this year. With two straws, they get double enjoyment from a single soda. They'll combine vacation fun, too, when they go to the beach for summer tans and to the mountains on camping trips. These are the twins' favorite summer activities next to sipping a soda through a straw, of course. Photo is by Shiney Wright.

An air combat force "designed to guarantee national security" is aim of Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg.

Our new strength in the air

BY GENERAL HOYT S. VANDENBERG

The author of this article, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg is—at 49—the youngest four-star general in the United States armed forces, the second man to serve as chief of staff of the U. S. Air Force. A West Pointer, he headed the 9th Air Force in World War II.

THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE is again becoming a competent fighting organization. It is not the largest air force in the world today, as it was during the war. But we are rebuilding—squadron by squadron, group by group—toward an air combat force designed to guarantee our national security in the air.

The building of the new Air Force and the training of its men is a challenging task. Today, our aircraft are flying at speeds approaching that of sound, and we are exploring regions where the unknowns are far more numerous than the knowns.

Since V-J day, we have been experimenting with many new and radical designs for air-foils and air-frames. The swept-back wing, which may afford new opportunities in transsonic and supersonic flying; the thin wing, and the streamlined low-drag fuselage illustrate our progress in this field.

In the field of guided missiles we are focusing our attention on four distinct types: air-to-air; surface-to-air; air-to-surface and surface-to-surface.

Air-to-air missiles will be used for protection of bomber formations and to attack invading enemy air forces. Surface-to-air missiles will also be used against invading air units and ultimately against enemy missiles. Air-to-surface missiles are being developed to increase the effectiveness of our present bombers. Remotely controlled, they would be launched from aircraft against enemy targets while the launching planes remained outside heavily defended areas. Surface-to-surface missiles will be used both for short-range tactical and long-range strategic missions. An ultimate objective in this category is to develop a long range supersonic missile.

The guided missile age, however, is not just around the corner. Even after such missiles are developed several years of operational experimentation will be required before they can be used effectively.

Investigating Systems of Propulsion

THE AIR FORCE is investigating many different systems of propulsion for aircraft and missiles. One, getting increased attention, is the turbo-prop engine—a gas turbine equipped with a propeller—as it promises to provide greater efficiency for long range bombers flying at subsonic speeds. The ramjet engine appears to be the power plant for supersonic flying. A good example of its potentialities can be made by comparing a ramjet 40 inches in diameter with a reciprocating engine of identical diameter. At sea level, the reciprocating engine would deliver 2,000 horsepower at any speed; the ramjet, flying at supersonic speed, could produce the equivalent of 110,000 horsepower.

While a great many problems still remain unsolved, much progress has been made in the field of electronics. Airborne radar equipment under development includes gunlaying and air ranging devices. With these devices, aerial gunners could fire on enemy planes and ground targets at long range, even though the targets may be invisible by direct vision.

Most discussed of additions to nation's future Air Force is the radically-designed, jet-powered Boeing XB-47. It cruises at more than 500 miles an hour.

Jet propulsion key to new planes

Because of the disparity between our knowledge of the airplane and that of the medium in which it flies, a double barreled research and development program in meteorology and the upper atmosphere has been given high priority by the Air Force. Investigations are being carried out in the fields of atmospheric physics, analysis and forecasting, energy transmission, and other related subjects. The possibility of producing rain by "seeding" clouds with dry ice and other mechanical agents is being explored. A network of sub-arctic weather stations is being maintained, and experiments are being conducted with automatic weather stations in remote arctic regions where it is impossible or impractical to station human observers.

The ever-increasing speeds, altitudes, and ranges of modern planes have made ever-greater demands upon the men who fly them, and it is not impossible that such development may have to be stopped at some time in the future because of the inability of human beings to withstand the strains and stresses to which they would be subjected. For this reason Air Force aviation medical specialists are investigating the maximum capabilities of the human system and how to employ these capabilities without undue risk to health, safety, and efficiency.

Aero-medical technologists have produced clothing and equipment which allow our air crews to fly safely, efficiently and comfortably under what previously have been intolerable conditions. Progress has been made in the design and fabrication of anti-G suits which counteract the great accelerative and decelerative pressures experienced in high speed planes. New drugs are being studied to determine their effect on flying personnel. Such research activity has shown, for example, that the drug benadryl, commonly used by hay fever sufferers, cannot be given to flight personnel during periods of active operations because of a subsidiary effect which produces drowsiness and sleep.

Aviation psychological researchers are seeking to improve methods of selecting personnel. Also under investigation are the many problems that result from forced isolation of small groups of men assigned to Arctic outposts and the techniques for selecting men for such assignments. Psychological problems in equipment design are being investigated with a view toward adapting equipment to the capacities of the human operator.

Concerned With Modernization

These are but a few of the many research and development projects in which the Air Force is currently engaged.

The Air Force is also concerned with the immediate problem of modernization. At the present time, 95 per cent of the planes used by our combat units are of World War II vintage. These aircraft, most of which have now become obsolescent, must be replaced by modern craft or our Air Force becomes obsolete.

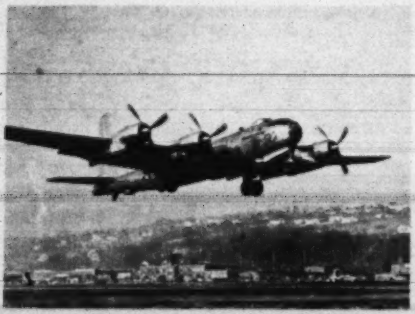
Among the experimental bombers now being test flown is the Northrup YB-49, the largest jet-plane built to date. This "jet wing" has no fuselage and is powered by eight engines. Another heavy jet bomber in the experimental stage is the Boeing XB-47 Stratojet powered by six jet engines suspended in nacelles below swept-back wings.

In the fighter plane category the McDonnell XF-85 represents a new approach to the defense of the very-long-range bomber. This new "parasite" fighter will be carried in one of the bomb bays of a parent plane, such as the B-36, and will be released for flight when contact with the enemy is imminent. Also new in the fighter category is the Curtiss-Wright XP-87, an experimental all-weather fighter designed for speeds in excess of 600 miles per hour.

Jet fighters now in service with Air Force combat units are the Lockheed F-80 Shooting Star and the Republic F-84 Thunderjet. Another jet fighter in production, the North American F-86, will probably be with operational units by mid-1948.

The only jet bomber now in production, the North American B-45 will replace the veteran Douglas A-26 now being flown by the light bomber squadrons of our Tactical Air Command. We are also developing new trainers, helicopters, liaison and cargo aircraft, gliders, and reconnaissance planes.

We are building toward a strong Air Force guided by the principle that air power is peace power. But, at the same time, we are fully aware that military skill and perseverance alone cannot achieve our goal. If the U. S. Air Force is once again to be made strong and kept strong, the most important requirement is the complete support of the American people.



Boeing B-50, a heavy bomber, is larger than the B-29. The B-36 is still bigger.

Jet-powered F-84 fighter hits 600-mile top speed, is used by Air Defense Command.

Sturdy and durable, the roomy C-82 Packet is a dependable transport and cargo plane.

The B-29, mightiest U. S. air weapon in World War II, still is backbone of Air Force.

IF YOU WERE HELD-UP WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

BY TOM McCAHILL

"STICK 'EM UP!"

No one expects to be held up, ever. It's something that couldn't happen to you or to me. Still, almost any newspaper, on any day, offers convincing evidence that stick-ups, muggings and other forms of assault are increasingly common. And the victims, in most cases, are just ordinary people. What would you do if it happened to you—as it can, and may?

Nine times out of ten, the best thing is to do exactly as you're told. The best advice is to hand over your money and even the watch your grandfather got for graduation—hand it over and stay healthy. There are exceptions to the rule, of course. There are times when compliance is the worst thing in the world. And in deciding the question, much depends upon the circumstances. A woman attacked when at home alone, or on the street at night, may face a problem quite different from that of a man in the same predicament.

Hold-up men, muggers and rapists are usually altogether different types, and a knowledge of the difference may help you to make the split-second decision that can save your life.

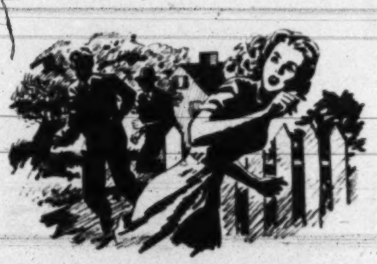
The commonest type is the professional hold-up man, whose only desire is to relieve you of the money and valuables you have immediately available. The last thing he wants to do is to kill or physically molest his victims, and he rarely will get rough unless he is provoked. He knows that armed robbery is one thing, and murder is quite another. Therefore, if it appears that you are doing business with a professional—a fairly calm, determined character who makes no unnecessary moves and says no more than he must—give him what he wants and the chances are you'll be on your way safe and sound, though broke, in a matter of seconds.

The professional has made a bid for peaceful settlement the moment he has said, "This is a stick-up." If he intends violence, he will not preface it with conversation. Therefore, the best you can do for yourself and society is to concentrate on the man as long as he is in sight, so that you will be able to give a vivid, detailed description to the police. This will be genuinely helpful and will endear you to the long-suffering officers of the law. They are always pleasantly surprised if a stick-up victim can give the criminal's height within six inches.

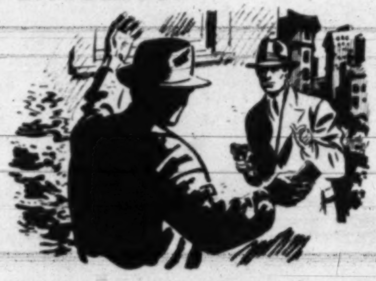
Amateur Criminals Are Dangerous

THE AMATEUR AND JUVENILE bad men are the most dangerous of all. The young hold-up artist may be nervous and jumpy, which is bad, or he may have fortified himself with alcohol or marijuana, which is worse. Sober or not, he is capable of a shocking amount of gratuitous cruelty, and it is often the part of wisdom to give him a fight, and take the chance that goes with it. Best idea, of course, is to avoid him. In large cities, don't walk down dark and lonely streets if you can avoid it, but if you must, walk near the curb so that you can step into the street if you see a possible attacker coming toward you. You can at least give yourself room in which to move around. Don't wait until you're in trouble—leave the sidewalk on suspicion. It won't cost you anything to be wrong. If the odds against you in a fight look too tough, you can try kidding the attacker out of it, or you can, as a last resort, play possum and fall hard at the first blow. Weird as it may seem, this has been

A HOLD-UP OF ANY KIND IS DANGEROUS



A loud scream is one of the best defenses open to a woman who finds herself in difficulty on the street. Unless they can silence her immediately, few men care to stay in the vicinity of a screaming woman. They will usually run.



The toy gun specialist is often an amateur on his first job. He is usually nervous and jumpy, and may run if his victim puts up a fight. But be sure the gun is in fact a toy—be very sure! A mistake has cost more than one life.

FAST THINKING, QUICK ACTION CAN HELP YOU

known to work. At least one amateur hold-up artist in New York was fooled by an even wilder riposte: the intended victim looked down at the .38 pointed at his belt and calmly said, "That's some gun you've got there; may I see it for a minute?" then gently took the weapon away! However, this little trick will probably not work the next 10,000 times it's tried.

"Weapon" May Be a Toy

THERE IS A TYPE OF AMATEUR hold-up man who uses toy pistols or none at all: he may have nothing more sticking through his pocket than a pointed index finger or his favorite briar. He may be a novice on his first job, or he may be a semi-pro considering the possibility of being caught—the penalty will be a bit lighter if the "weapon" is a water-pistol.

Often enough, this type is trying a stick-up because of what he considers a matter of vital necessity: debt, a sick wife, or a girl friend who wants a fur coat. If resisted vigorously, he will probably break away and run—but the trouble is, you must be sure. If there's any doubt in your mind, concentrate on memorizing his description, and give him what he wants. Unlikely as it seems, there are men willing to blow a hole through a perfectly good coat in order to shoot you.

Worst of all is the depraved or mentally deranged criminal. He may be unpredictable, violent in the extreme, is often fearless to the point of stupidity. This is the man who haunts lovers' lanes and breaks into houses and apartments when he knows there is only a single woman at home. Again, the best protection is avoidance. Know who is at your door before you open it. Doors, particularly in city apartments, should be kept locked and equipped with a peep-hole device of some kind.

Failing this, a stout chain should be provided—and one for the back door, too. Even better than a chain is the so-called "police-type" lock, a wedging device that will stop anything short of a battering-ram. A dog weighing 40 pounds or more is another good protection, roughly the equivalent of an armed guard, and is particularly effective against the psychopathic criminal.

There are throws in judo with which any normal woman can send a 200-pound man to the hospital for extensive repair and rehabilitation—but they cannot be learned by a quick glance at a book on self-defense. They must be learned by practice, and no one who has done an individual throw fewer than 100 times has any business trying to use it seriously.

The reason for this, of course, is that to be effective judo holds and throws must be applied with terrific speed, and the timing must be such as to force the attacker to use all his own weight and strength against himself.

It is far better to know only three throws, of the hundreds available, and practice them until their use is absolutely automatic, than to have a rough idea how to do fifty. This method, of course, has its disadvantages. The judo expert, if he misses one hold, has a choice of a dozen others he can apply from the position in which he finds himself; the amateur has usually shot his bolt—and thereby rendered himself completely defenceless—if he misses his first try.

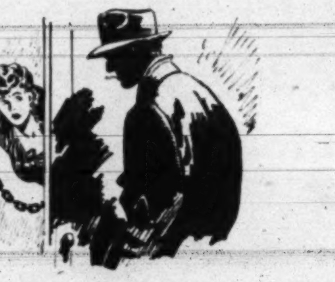
Folded Newspaper Can Be Effective

A SMALL STICK, A CANE or a woman's umbrella can be deadly if properly used, and a newspaper, folded in a certain way, can be as effective as a baseball bat. But these tricks, like judo, take a lot of practice.

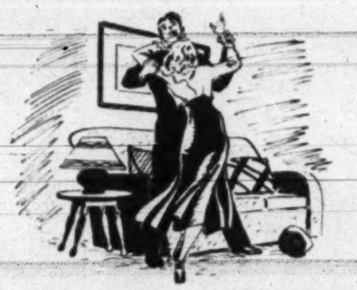
In most American states and cities—New York City is an outstanding exception—it's permissible to keep a hand gun in the home, a sound idea except that, for perfect safety in homes with children, it must be under lock and key, and is thus usually not available at the split second it's needed.

Best protection, after all, is the locked and chained door; in heavily populated areas a quick dash for an open window and a loud scream will bring help as quickly as anything. If that fails, there's always psychology, which often works surprisingly well. If it doesn't, resistance will—provided it is trained and practiced resistance.

And remember—an accurate description of a criminal, one that will aid the police, will do most toward taking him out of circulation for good!



No one can force his way past a properly designed, really strong door-chain. All outside doors should have chains. A peep-hole device is even better. The so-called "police type" lock—a form of brace—is strongest, safest.



Two or three judo throws, taught by an expert and practiced again and again, until they can be executed with speed, will enable any woman to dispose of the average intruder. They are worse than useless if attempted slowly.

Which Twin has the Toni?
(see answer below)

One Permanent Cost $15...the TONI only $2

It's amazing! Yes, and it's true. A Toni Home Permanent is every bit as lovely as an expensive beauty shop wave. The Toni twins show it—and you can prove it today. But before buying the Toni kit you'll want to know—

Will TONI work on my hair?

Yes, Toni waves any kind of hair that will take a permanent. including gray, dyed, bleached or baby-fine hair.

Must I be handy with my hands?

Not at all! If you can roll your hair up on curlers you can give yourself a smooth, natural-looking permanent with Toni. Just by following the easy directions.

How long will it take me?

Waving time is only 2 to 3 hours. And during that time you're free to do as you please.

How long will my TONI wave last?

Your Toni wave is guaranteed to last just as long as a $15 beauty shop permanent—or your money back.

Why is TONI a Creme?

Because Toni Creme Waving Lotion waves the hair gently—leaves it soft as silk with no frizziness, no dried-out brittleness even on the first day.

How much will I save with TONI?

The Toni Home Permanent Kit with reusable plastic curlers is just $2. The Toni Refill Kit costs only $1...yet there's no finer wave at any price.

How about a TONI party?

Grand idea! Invite your friends over and have each bring a Toni Kit. While your waves are "taking" play bridge or enjoy your favorite records.

Which Twin has the TONI?

Lucerne and Suzanne McCullough, pictured above, are well-known New York artists. Suzanne, at the right, is the Toni twin, and she says "My Toni wave was soft and natural-looking the very first day. That's why Lucerne says her next wave will be a Toni, too."

Depth of concentration, emotional difficulties in children may be detected by observing them at play.

CHILDREN UNDER GLASS . . .

AMERICANS HAVE REACHED a transitional period in rearing their children. They are entering a new world where old molds have been smashed and old taboos forgotten. Yet, essentially, parents still cling to the time-honored habits and practices of the past.

The old child-rearing viewpoint was bracketed by the phrase "spare the rod and spoil the child," but eventually parents became aware that a child was quite as likely to be ruined by the rod as spoiled without it.

The rod philosophy was discarded and replaced by a belief in complete freedom — a theory that, left to himself, a child will instinctively choose what is best for him. It was soon learned, however, that there can be no such thing as bringing up a child in a way that is guaranteed to be continually pleasing to him.

Like scientists studying insects, child guidance students, unseen themselves, watch children frolic.

Unaware that he is being watched through one-way mirror, a child plays with blocks before students at Columbia's Teachers College Guidance Laboratory.

The failure of both theories of child-rearing lay in that neither understood children, and that without an understanding of children, child-training programs are useless.

This flaw has been recognized by staff members of the Child Guidance Laboratory at Columbia University's Teachers College, which now has an enrollment of 836 students, all prospective members of child counseling staffs.

Room With Mirrors

TO AID THE STUDENTS IN their research into child behavior, Columbia built an observation room equipped with transparent mirrors. Within the mirror-lined room, children are interviewed and tested by instructors and observed by the students who, unseen from within, watch their behavior from behind the mirrors.

As a demonstration and observation device, the "mirror room" is proving a success. In such a setting the children, unhindered by self-consciousness, are themselves mirrors of behavior. They are tested in aptitudes, motivations and perseverance, and the findings are documented and discussed by the students.

The "mirror room" is but one phase of the child guidance program at Columbia.

In the past, the staff at Columbia believes, we have failed to comprehend the laws and drives under which children operate, their psychological and biological necessities, or their prime objective—which is to establish themselves as units capable of adjusting to their environment. Columbia hopes its experiments with "children under glass" eventually will help to lead us to this important comprehension.

Finger-painters dabble as students watch. Guidance course aims at analyzing child behavior patterns.

After class, group discussion is led by Professor Esther Lloyd-Jones, head of the guidance laboratory.

Laboratory's work also includes consultations with non-student parents anxious to correct behavior perplexities in their children. THE END.

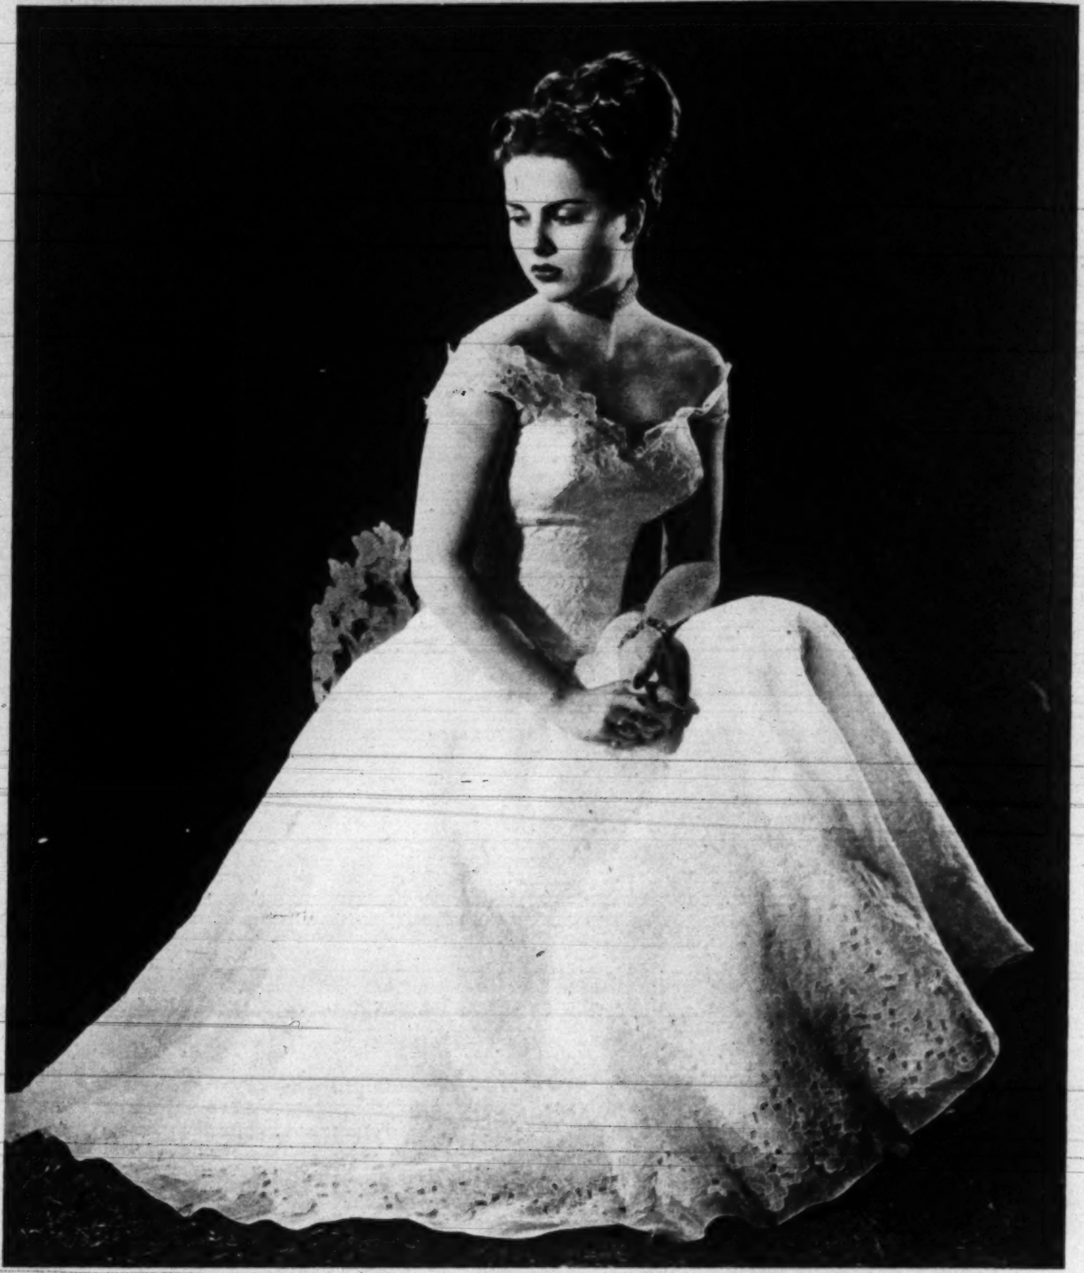
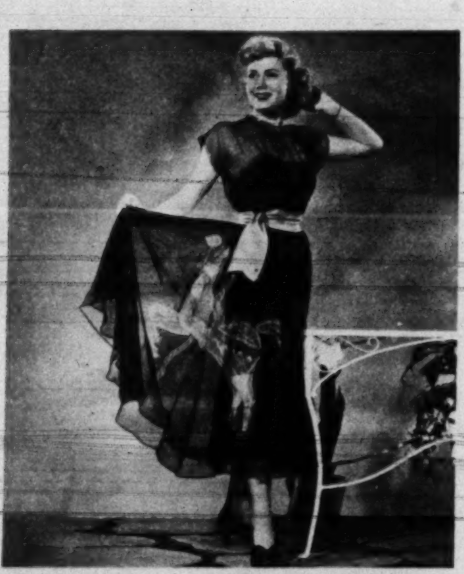
Summer Nights

New frocks are flattering

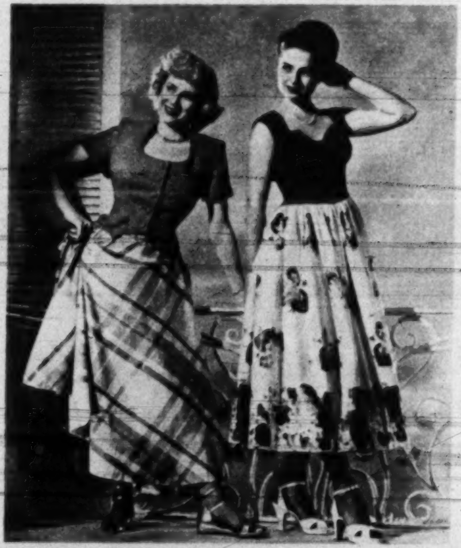
STAR-STUDDED, SUMMER evenings demand clothes that can match the nights in beauty. This season's crop of evening frocks are lovelier than ever, emphasize feminine lines, dressmaker touches. Often fashioned of surprise materials like nylon net or old-fashioned gingham, new gowns reveal white is first choice in shades, with candy-box hues of green, pink and blue high in favor. Whether you pay a fortune or a song, your gown should be extra-feminine, extra-pretty.



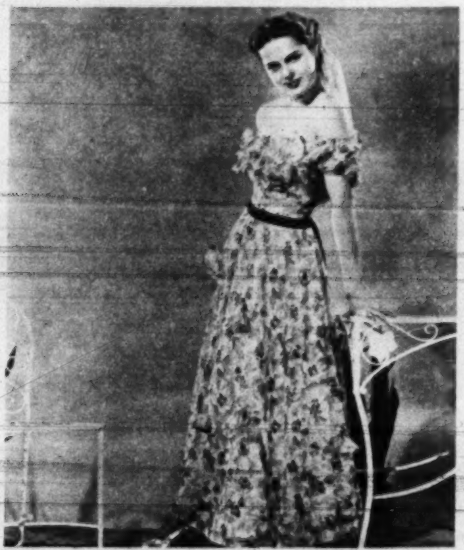
Beautiful as moonglow is this fragile organdy applique gown worn by Martha Hyer, currently in RKO's "Velvet Touch." Cut-out organdy flowers cover entire gown, are used for off-shoulder straps on tightly-fitted basque bodice. An Ilyana design, the ankle-length skirt has full flare.



Merry-go-round frock for tea-dancing has pink and blue horses painted on sheer black chiffon. Worn by Jacqueline White of RKO's "Return of the Bad Men," it was styled by Juliette Gallian.



Casual fabrics make pretty party dresses. Left: blue linen jacket, plaid gingham skirt. Right: green linen bodice, flowered chintz skirt sparked with sequins. Both were designed by Blair.



Pink froth of a frock in sheerest chiffon is Martha Hyer's evening favorite. Off-shoulder neckline is edged with ruffles: lower hemline is pin-pleated. By Juliette Gallian. THE END.

June Ring Mold

NATIVE JUNE STRAWBERRIES, sun-ripened and sweet, add bright color and lush flavor to a moon-gold, grapefruit gelatine dessert that is a perfect climax for a summer menu. Quickly made, too, by the new method, the gelatine is softened in a cup of cold water right in the saucepan, then dissolved over direct heat. When another cup of cold liquid is added, the temperature drops and the mixture jells more quickly. Saves dishwashing, too, you'll find. Begin dinner with cold tomato juice. Next, serve broiled quick-frozen swordfish, new potatoes, wax beans and pickled beets. For dessert, serve our June Ring Mold.

JUNE RING MOLD

2 envelopes (2 tbsp.) unflavored gelatine	2 No. 2 cans grapefruit sections
1 cup water	1 cup grapefruit juice
¼ cup sugar	1 3-ounce package cream cheese
¼ teaspoon salt

1 pint strawberries, sliced

Soften gelatine in cold water in saucepan. Place over medium heat; stir constantly until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat; add sugar and salt; stir until dissolved. Drain grapefruit sections; measure 1½ cups of the grapefruit syrup and stir into gelatine mixture with the grapefruit juice. Chill until mixture is of consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Form cream cheese into small balls. Arrange half of cream cheese balls and ¾ cup of the grapefruit sections in bottom of mold. Cover with gelatine mixture; chill until almost firm. Fold in remaining cream cheese balls and ¾ cup grapefruit sections in the remaining gelatine and turn on top of chilled gelatine in mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Fill center of mold and garnish with strawberries and remaining 1½ cup grapefruit sections. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Here comes spring — and here comes a new idea for cooking green vegetables. Add your vegetables to melted margarine. Sprinkle on just a little water and salt. Cover tightly—shake occasionally. Flavor tip: Use Durkee's Margarine! Its mild, sweet country-freshness will turn every vegetable into a success story. Happy thought!

A smooth, creamy Hollandaise Sauce! Here's one that you'll be proud to show off with. It's easy to make and it never fails. You'll find the recipe in the panel at the right. Durkee's Margarine, with its smooth blend, does wonders in this sauce! Durkee's, you know, is made of pure vegetable oils churned with fresh, pasteurized skim milk. It's very nutritious, too—with its 15,000 units of Vitamin A to a pound, the year 'round!

Top 'em with flavor! Home-baked rolls—Clover Leaf Rolls, Parker House Rolls, Cinnamon Rolls or just plain rolls! Everybody loves 'em piping hot. And here's a little tip: Spread them generously with Durkee's Margarine. It's a delightful spread, both in texture and in taste, and it's so thrifty you won't mind how much the family uses.

Put a halo on simple dishes! For a nice, zippy tang to ham, hot or cold, try Durkee's Famous Dressing. This rich, golden Dressing is fine on almost any meats, on fish, or mixed with your favorite salad dressing. It's grand in all kinds of sandwich fillings—try mixing it with ground ham.

IMPORTANT: In more than half the states, you can buy yellow Durkee's Margarine right now. Some states, including New York, Ohio, Connecticut, Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Maine and Minnesota, still prohibit its sale. Write your state representative to repeal the obsolete laws which make you color margarine at home.

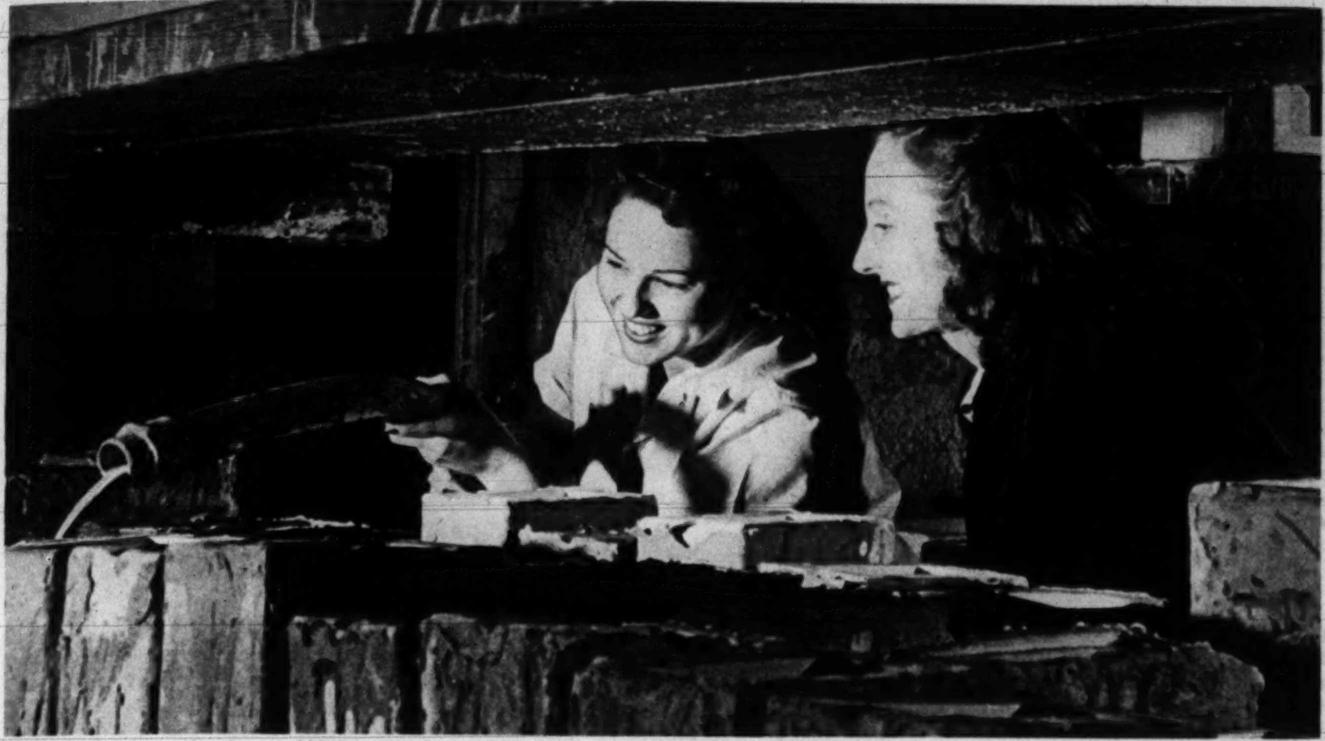
Barbara Willis, who has built a profitable pottery factory from her hobby of ceramics, poses behind her creations.



At her factory, Barbara Willis watches while her artist-assistant, Evelyn Mahoney, pours slip into pottery molds.

A HOBBY PAYS OFF

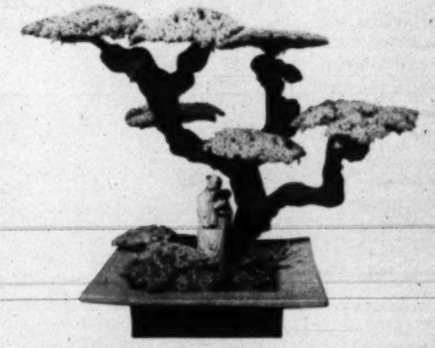
Barbara Willis has made a going business of her pottery design

WHEN BARBARA WILLIS WAS A student at the University of California at Los Angeles, she studied ceramics—the art of molding baked clay, under Laura Anderson. And, after her graduation, she worked for a while in a pottery shop.

But ceramics to Barbara, in those days, was merely a hobby. Her main interest in life was her husband, an Army lieutenant. In 1942, however, he was shipped overseas and Barbara turned back to ceramics to pass the time away.

Her first pottery designs were displayed in Los Angeles early in 1942 and made an immediate hit. So she rented a shop and went to work — on vases, bookends, ash trays and lamp bases.

From this beginning a paying business grew, and today Barbara runs a thriving pottery factory. Her hobby has paid off.



Japanese garden, designed by Mrs. Willis, was planted with fungi grown in nursery.

Shop foreman is Barbara's husband, Don. She is one of few pottery designers who puts wax finish on products. Formula is secret.

Outdoor workshop serves as design room. For design ideas, she leans heavily on Spanish-American and Indian influence. THE END.

Government guests: Margaret Walker, Edna Hamilton, Polly Cranyard ride with ex-Ranger Kenneth Avrill at Fontana.

Fontana a dam produces summer resort

POST OFFICE
FONTANA DA

Post Office is only outward sign of Federal authority at Government-owned resort.

Vacationers' paradise, it belongs to Uncle Sam

GENERALLY SPEAKING, THE only time the average, law-abiding American comes in direct contact with his national government is when he votes, buys stamps, gets drafted, or pays taxes.

Thousands are learning, however, that in vacation time, the Government is a highly considerate host, providing inexpensive board and lodging at some of the finest vacation lands in the country.

One of the least known of Federal resorts is Fontana Village, a bargain-rate playground situated on a 30-mile long mountain lake 1,800 feet above sea level in North Carolina's scenic Great Smokies. There, lovers of the out-of-doors can have a wholesome and bracing vacation for as low as $35 a week, or just about half as much as they would have to pay at a commercial resort.

Fontana, as a national asset, is pure velvet. After the completion of gigantic Fontana Dam for the Tennessee Valley Authority, it was found that there was a ready-made mountain paradise in the neat cluster of cabins and sheds that had housed the 6,000 engineers and construction workers who had built the dam.

Remodeled for civilian use, the camp has become a complete village, with supermarket, drug store, library, barber and beauty shops, and cafeteria bordering on Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

On these pages, teacher Polly Cranyard, and high school students Margaret Walker and Edna Hamilton of Robbinsville, N. C., enjoy their vacation play with Uncle Sam.

"To swim or not to swim"—that is the question

Whether to "sit out" some sunny days in a beach chair when that time-of-the-month arrives?

Since your mother's day, there has been quite a change of heart by authorities on this subject. Great numbers of normal, healthy women now take their usual swims any day of the month. An important factor has been the growing use of Tampax as an internal method for monthly sanitary protection. In a swim suit, you obviously need a form of protection which cannot possibly "show through". . . Perfected by a doctor, Tampax is made of pure surgical cotton compressed in throw-away applicators. Requires no belts, pins or external pads—quick to change and unfelt when in place. No odor. No chafing. Easy disposal. . . : Prepare for next month with this modern Tampax. At drug or notion counter in 3 absorbency-sizes — Regular, Super, Junior. Month's supply fits into purse; economy box holds 4 months' average supply. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Cheap vacations-on-a-budget come true at Fontana's remodeled T. V. A. construction camp

Pitching horseshoes, standard camp exercise, takes kinks out of school-cramped arms of Margaret Walker. Typical camp cottage in background.

Meals at spic and span cafeteria averaged $2.50 a day, with large helpings to satisfy keen appetites.

Miniature golf, at a quarter a game drew budgeteers Walker and Hamilton. Lights permit night play.

Former Marine Major C. D. Woodward gives fishing lessons and rents out boats for $1.75 to $6 per day.

Fontana is a taxpayer's haven . . .

AT LEAST FOR EASTERNERS, Fontana combines the advantages of a vacation-on-a-budget with easy accessibility. Located 2½ miles from the western end of the lake formed by the dammed-up Little Tennessee River, it can be reached by car via Route 129 from Knoxville, Tenn., or Route 19 from Asheville, N. C. Visitors without cars can reach the Village by bus from Knoxville, 60 miles away.

Budgeteers will find immaculately-kept quarters ranging from $1.25 per day for single rooms in a dormitory, to three-bedroom family cottages with cooking facilities for $72 a week. Studio cottages for couples rent for $30 per week. Hot water, blankets, towels and bed linen are provided in all. Those who do their own cooking, shop at the village supermarket which keeps prices at a minimum. Meals at the village cafeteria or coffee shop average about $2.50 a day per person.

Virtually all of the usual mountain resort activities are found at the Village or along the shores of the lake. Tennis, soft-ball, ping-pong, and horse-shoe pitching facilities are free. Hikers who want to make the Village their headquarters, have the whole Appalachian Trail, with its hostels and shelters.

More ambitious vacationers organize pack-horse trips with hired horses and camping equipment, fish in the 400-foot deep, well-stocked waters, and explore the 218 miles of forested shores in boats. It all belongs to them,

Well-equipped, comfortable cabins, provided with plentiful T.V.A. power, rent for about $15 per person per week. Girls press own clothes.

Ping-pong, played under trees, is one of camp's sports. At night, girls went to movies for 35 cents.

Informal atmosphere extends to dress, produces odd ensembles typical of mountain resorts everywhere.

Dressed for "town," girls haunted Fontana drug store, bought souvenir post cards, drank usual number of off-diet sodas and sundaes. Like all else in town, store is managed under government control.

Square dancing, in square dance territory, mingles guests and village employees Saturday nights.

Bedtime roughhousing, older than government camps and traditional at Fontana, ends busy day. THE END.

Salesman Bing Crosby and his pal, "Buttons," demonstrate a 1910 talking machine to suspicious Austrian gendarmes in "The Emperor Waltz," a Paramount technicolor whimsey all about romance in old Vienna.

"The Emperor Waltz"

Bing Crosby, Joan Fontaine and their dogs romance in the Tirol

BY KAY SULLIVAN

THE COSTLIEST, MOST ELABORATE and gayest production made at Paramount in years, that's what the studio says of "The Emperor Waltz." There is no question about the first two adjectives, but a good many people who pay legal tender to see this film are going to suggest another word for "gayest." It might possibly be "silliest."

There are four romantic leads in the picture: Bing Crosby, Joan Fontaine, a smart fox-terrier named "Buttons" and a black poodle who answers to the name of "Scheherazade," if you can pronounce it. Crosby plays the role of an ambitious young phonograph salesman from America, determined to sell one of the new-fangled talking machines to the Emperor Franz Josef. (The time is 1910; the place, Vienna). He is temporarily prevented from doing so when he meets the beautiful Countess Von Stolzenberg-Stolzenberg (Miss Fontaine). Both the snobbish countess and her equally snobbish poodle have no affection for mere commoners.

"Scheherazade," however, grows ill and a psychiatrist diagnoses her difficulty as a mental block, its only cure a reunion with "Buttons." This means that Bing and Joan have to meet again. Before you can say bow-bow, the quartet are very much in love.

Things grow dismal after the Emperor persuades Bing he can never make a countess happy, but "Scheherazade" saves the day by giving birth to a litter of pups that look just like "Buttons." Inspired by Bing's impassioned plea for their lives, Franz Josef adopts the mongrels, sends Bing and Joan off on a honeymoon to New Jersey with royal blessings.

"The Emperor Waltz" was intended to be a comedy, carefree and rollicking. But the film's humor is subordinated to a clumsy preoccupation with the parallel it draws between human and canine romance. If you can overlook the doggy flavor—no small order—you'll probably enjoy the production's tuneful music and Tirolean backgrounds. They are both superlative.

When he meets a pretty countess (Joan Fontaine), Bing falls in love although her poodle bites his dog.

The countess and her father (Roland Culver) are distraught when doctor announces pup is lovesick.

To save "Scheherazade's" life, Joan calls upon Bing. While the dogs become friends, he sings to her.

Their dogs are in love and so are Joan and Bing. Joan makes a date with Emperor to meet her hero.

Bing discovers plot to do away with the little white pups born to Joan's poodle, tells the Emperor, Charmed by the mongrel puppies, Franz Josef decides to keep them, gives his blessing to romance between Bing and Countess Joan. The band plays Strauss and all waltz happily ever after. THE END.

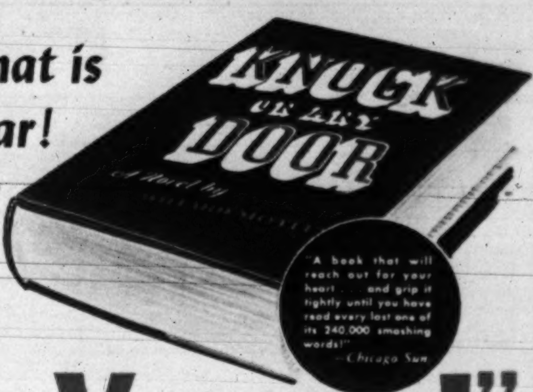
"Knock On Any Door"

by Willard Motley



KNOCK ON ANY DOOR
A Novel by
WILLARD MOTLEY
"A book that will reach out for your heart . . . and grip it tightly until you have read every last one of its 240,000 smashing words!"
—Chicago Sun

"Live Fast...Die Young!"

This is the reckless motto of Nick Romano . . . handsome, tough, fearless. His confused and vicious life. – crowded yet lonely – is revealed in the 504 soul-searing pages of that big best-seller "Knock On Any Door" by Willard Motley. What changes Nick from a fine, sensitive, religious boy into a brutal callous criminal? Was it the poverty of the slums in which he grew up? Was it his parents who couldn't give him the understanding and guidance he needed? Was it the love of a decent girl – that came too late – after his sordid romances of the street? You'll discover the answers in "Knock On Any Door"—answers that make this one of the truly great novels of the year! Get yours Free! Mail coupon!

Tells the un-pretty truth about the life and loves of a KILLER in the making!

"KNOCK ON ANY DOOR" is dynamite . . . as violent and exciting as midnight on Chicago's toughest street—this intimate, revealing story of the men, women, and circumstances that turned Nick Romano from a sweet-faced altar boy, who loved God and his family, into a ruthless killer who loved nothing and no one—except himself.

What a Story of Love and Lust – Violence and Murder!

When Nick's family moves to the slums, Nick becomes afraid, confused, and defiant. Then he is sent to reform school for a crime he didn't commit. There, in an atmosphere of almost incredible brutality, he learns vicious tricks from older criminals in the making.

Released, Nick cannot go straight. He hangs around poolrooms . . . gambling, robbing, sponging from tawdry ladies of leisure. By accident he meets a decent girl, Emma, who marries him knowing he is bad, but hoping her love can make him good. For a while Nick tries to go straight but the easy money and excitement of stick-ups and jackrolling . . . the lure of liquor and loose women . . . pull him back. Then, finally, after an especially reckless hold-up, he kills Riley, the cop, as he had often sworn he would.

Smashes to Terrific Climax In Great Courtroom Trial Drama

Never before and probably never again will you find in fiction a courtroom trial scene as breathtaking and realistic as this one. Here, Nick fights for his life in the most violent, fast-paced, exciting drama you have ever read. No wonder the New Orleans Item says, "If such a thing as the great American novel can be, this is it!"

What Makes Women Love Nick... Even Though He's So Hard—So Brutal?

Maybe it was the combination of Nick's virile, powerful body and his clear innocent dark eyes. Maybe it was his devil-may-care attitude... his reckless disregard of consequences. From the time he was a little boy Nick had a fascination for all kinds of women – young and old – good and bad. But Nick spurned the tenderness they offered him... would have them only on his own ruthless and brutal terms.

What were the complex forces that warped Nick's soul? Why was his passion for the loose-living men and women of the underworld so strong—stronger even than his tortured love for Emma, the decent, honest girl he married—the girl who loved him more than life itself? Why were so many women glad to give Nick anything he wanted—even at the risk of their own safety—sometimes of their very lives? Perhaps you'll be able to figure out the answers to these questions when you read "Knock On Any Door," the never-to-be-forgotten best-seller that is now offered to you FREE as a new membership gift from The Fiction Book Club.

Hollywood has bought the movie rights to "Knock On Any Door" – and Humphrey Bogart will play a new kind of role as the defense attorney who fights for Nick's life.

PHEW! THEY GO! AND CHARTREUSE IS LIMP!
OL' HOTSHOT COULD COLLAPSE INTO A LOOSE ASSORTMENT OF SPARE PARTS, HIMSELF...BUT BUCKO BRONZ WAS SO EXCITED HE NEVER THOUGHT TO LOOK ACROSS THE HALL INTO VAN GOBLIN'S ROOM.
GOOD THING YOU FOUND ME AND BRIEFED ME ON WHAT HAD HAPPENED TO TERRY AND THE OTHERS WHEN YOU DID. WE JUST HAD TIME TO GET OUT OF MY QUARTERS AND IN HERE BEFORE HE ARRIVED.
AND THEN M'SIEU NEARLY FINISHES US BY CLUMSY NOISE.
IF M'SIEU PLEASES, WHAT IS THIS THING YOU ARE TRIPPING OVER IN DARKNESS — BUT SEEMS TO MAKE YOU SO VERY HAPPY?
JUST A LITTLE OL' PHONY ANTIQUE STATUE THAT PROBABLY FELL OUT OF VAN GOBLIN'S MATTRESS WHEN HE WAS SNATCHED!

NOCKIE NOONAN IS HERE AGAIN, MICKEY!
OH, MY GOSH! WITH ANOTHER OF HIS CRAZY INVENTIONS, I SUPPOSE!
SHERIFF PHILIP FINN
I'M AFRAID SO! HE HAD A PACKAGE UNDER HIS ARM—AND HE'S BEEN IN WITH PHIL FOR AN HOUR.
TCH! TCH! EVERY TIME HE INVENTS SOMETHING, IT MEANS TROUBLE! IT'S AS SURE AS FATE!
I'M SURE IT WILL MAKE US A FORTUNE, PHIL! IT'S A THING EVERYONE WILL WANT IN THEIR HOME!
OKAY, NOCKIE! I'LL TEST IT OUT TONIGHT—AND LET YOU KNOW WHAT I THINK OF IT TOMORROW!
PRIVATE
A MOSQUITO GUN? Y-YOU MEAN THE IDEA IS TO SHOOT 'EM?
EXACTLY! WITH GAS! HOW MANY TIMES HAVE YOU BEEN IN BED AND HEARD A MOSQUITO BUZZIN' AROUND YOUR EARS? YOU HEAR HIM BUT YOU CAN'T SEE HIM—
—AND THEN WHEN THIS LITTLE SEARCHLIGHT PICKS HIM OUT OF THE DARKNESS, YOU SIMPLY PULL THE TRIGGER—A SPRAY OF GAS SHOOTS OUT AT HIM—AND DOWN HE GOES!
BUT, UNCLE PHIL—HOW CAN YOU TRY IT TONIGHT? WE HAVEN'T HAD ANY MOSQUITOES YET!
NOCKIE GAVE ME SOME IN THIS GLASS JAR—TO EXPERIMENT WITH!
THIS TOPS EVERYTHING, MICHAEL—BRINGING MOSQUITOES INTO THE HOUSE! IT'S THE MOST RIDICULOUS THING I EVER HEARD OF!
WELL, AT LEAST IT GOT HIM UP TO BED EARLY—AND HE'LL PROBABLY GAS 'EM QUICK!
AH—THERE'S ONE OF 'EM! NOW TO LET HIM HAVE IT!
BZZ-ZZZZ
COUGH! COUGH!
Reg. U. S. Pat. Office McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
PHILIP IS AWFULLY QUIET UP THERE, MICHAEL! —AND THERE'S A VERY STRANGE ODOR IN THE HALL!
HMM! MAYBE I'D BETTER TAKE A LOOK!
MA! TOM, FLOSSIE! COME UP HERE, QUICK! I THINK HE'S GASSED HIMSELF!

HE'LL BE ALL RIGHT, DOCTOR?
YES—BUT HE'LL PROBABLY WHEEZE FOR A COUPLE OF WEEKS!

DIAMONDS... OR DUST

THAT'S THE RISK ACE DIAMOND CUTTER ADRIAN GRASSELLY TAKES WHENEVER HE CLEAVES A LARGE DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH

IN ADRIAN GRASSELLY'S NEW YORK OFFICE

OF COURSE, IT'S A RISK TO CUT IT—BUT ADRIAN GRASSELLY WILL DO IT! HERE HE COMES NOW!

I'VE HEARD A LOT ABOUT HIM! HE'S ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREAT DIAMOND CUTTERS!

AFTER MONTHS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENTATION, GRASSELLY IS READY TO CUT THE DIAMOND!

NO MATTER HOW MUCH EXPERIENCE HE'S HAD—I DON'T SEE HOW HE CAN BRING HIMSELF TO TRY IT!

YES—IN A FEW SECONDS THAT DIAMOND WILL BE WORTH TWICE ITS PRESENT VALUE—OR NOTHING!

WHICH WILL IT BE...

DIAMONDS OR DUST? IF THE STONE ISN'T SPLIT JUST RIGHT, IT SHATTERS COMPLETELY. CALLING ON ALL HIS NERVE AND EXPERIENCE,* ADRIAN GRASSELLY STRIKES THE CHISEL; BUT...

IT DOESN'T SPLIT!

*"EXPERIENCE IS THE BEST TEACHER," AGREES MR. GRASSELLY. "IN CUTTING DIAMONDS—YES, AND IN CHOOSING A CIGARETTE, TOO. I'VE FOUND THAT CAMELS SUIT ME BEST!"

COULD I HAVE CALCULATED THE GRAIN INCORRECTLY?

HE CAN'T STOP NOW! HE'LL HAVE TO TRY IT AGAIN!

HE DOES IT! THE DIAMOND SPLITS JUST AS PLANNED—EVENTUALLY MAKES A DOZEN LARGE PERFECT STONES!

LATER

IMAGINE BEING ABLE TO FIGURE THE EXACT LINE ON WHICH THAT ROUGH DIAMOND WOULD SPLIT!

WELL—THAT COMES FROM EXPERIENCE!

AH—MY BRAND! AND CHOOSING CAMELS IS THE RESULT OF EXPERIENCE, TOO!

DIAMOND CUTTER ADRIAN GRASSELLY SAYS:

"CAMELS ARE THE CHOICE OF EXPERIENCE WITH ME. THEY'RE MILD, COOL, FULL FLAVORED!"

Adrian Grasselly

Expert diamond cutting is a "family art" with him. His father and grandfather were also internationally famous in this field!

WHERE IS MOTHER, FATHER?
BEAUTY PARLOR·
I HAVE SOMETHING TO TELL HER·
FATHER, WAIT 'TIL YOU HEAR THE UTTERLY SILLY THING HAL CLARK TOLD ME HE SAW TODAY·
TWO MEN DRIVING UP CENTRAL BOULEVARD THIS AFTERNOON BANGED FENDERS PULLING UP TO A RED LIGHT·
THEY STARTED YELLING AT EACH OTHER AND JUMPED OUT OF THEIR CARS AND GOT INTO A FIST FIGHT· WHEN THE LIGHT TURNED GREEN OTHER DRIVERS HONKED AND SHOUTED, "GREEN LIGHT!"
THEY JUMPED BACK INTO THEIR CARS, DROVE TO THE NEXT RED LIGHT, CLIMBED OUT AND STARTED TO PUNCH AGAIN·
THEY DROVE ON THE GREEN AND GOT OUT AND FOUGHT ON EVERY RED LIGHT STRAIGHT INTO THE MIDDLE OF TOWN· THEY HAD TRAFFIC TIED UP FOR A MILE·
IMAGINE, FATHER, FULL GROWN MEN ACTING LIKE THAT! TEEN AGERS WOULD BE CALLED DELINQUENTS· WHAT SORT OF BOOBS DO YOU SUPPOSE THEY WERE?
JUNE·20·48
THEY WERE ARRESTED AND FINED· THE JUDGE ORDERED ONE OF THEM TO DRIVE ON SWAMP ROAD AND STAY OFF THE BOULEVARD FOR A YEAR· THEY DREW STRAWS TO SEE.....
WHICH ONE WOULD....
AND WHAT, MAY I ASK, IS WRONG WITH SWAMP ROAD?

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
Registered U. S. Patent Office
Synopsis: THE BIG CANOE IS LAUNCHED AND LOADED AND PRINCE VALIANT BIDS FAREWELL TO HIS GALLANT COMRADES WHO ARE SO ANXIOUS TO RETURN TO THEIR HOMES THAT THEY MAKE BUT A DOZEN RAIDS ON THE WAY!
ALETA UNPACKS THE GIFTS HER INDIAN FRIENDS HAVE GIVEN HER AND ARRAYS HERSELF IN BARBARIC SPLENDOR.
AT THE STEERING PADDLE IS A BRONZED FIGURE THAT MIGHT WELL PASS FOR AN INDIAN, BUSILY PRACTICING A SPEECH HE INTENDS TO GIVE IN THE INDIAN LANGUAGE.
UP THE PLACID RIVER USK GLIDES THE CANOE, ITS CREW EAGERLY WATCHING FOR THE FIRST GLIMPSE OF CAMELOT.
FROM A WATCHTOWER HIGH ON THE BATTLEMENT, SENTRIES GIVE WARNING THAT A STRANGE CRAFT WITH STRANGER OCCUPANTS APPROACHES THE LANDING.
KNIGHTS AND THEIR LADIES GATHER AND LISTEN IN AMAZEMENT AS THE STRANGE LEADER ADDRESSES THEM IN AN UNKNOWN TONGUE......
......ALL EXCEPT ONE. "THROW HIM BACK IN THE RIVER," ADVISES SIR GAWAIN. "IT IS BUT A HALF-CIVILIZED KNIGHT WHO HAS GONE BACK TO THE PRIMITIVE WHERE HE BELONGS!"
FROM A WINDOW KING ARTHUR SEES THE MANNER IN WHICH SIR GAWAIN WELCOMES THIS STRANGER AND SIGHS: "THAT CAN BE NONE OTHER THAN PRINCE VALIANT!" THEN MORE CHEERFULLY, "PERHAPS CAMELOT HAS BEEN A TRIFLE TOO QUIET RECENTLY!"
